Pertland, Ore., July 5 (AP)—A curious bellhop caught the United States Army practicing an abduction in Portland's Roosevelt Hotel, and the hetel manager said today he would appreciate it if the Army went elsewhere in the

the Army went elsewhere in the future.

George Lucck, the bellhop, said he became suspicious and alerted other smployes after he took three men dressed in dark suite to the eighth floor Wednesday.

The three escorted a man from his room to a waiting car, plered a cloth bag over his head and sped off.

The employes watched in dis-

The employes watched in dis-belief, then called police. Returns to Room

Returns to Room

Later, the abducted man, Cecil P. Jones, returned to his room. Portland police traced the ineident to Army intelligence. Hotel Manager Richard Febfig, city police and newspapermen tried unsuccessfully to get a full asplantion from the Army.

When police found identifiestion in Jones' room that indicated he was a lieutenant with Army intelligence, they called the FBI which reported back that the men were on a classified training wission. Police reports then disappeared.

"Pablic Spectacie"

"Public Spectacie"

"I don't mind if the Army wants to train its men, but I don't appreciate public spectacles that have a sinister and clandstine overtone," Fettig complained to overtone," Fettig complained or day.

He said it bothered his sustainers to see plainclothermen, uniformed police and hotal employes gathered in the lobby to discuss the abduction.

"I think after my objections, the Army will pick another hotel if they decide to hold more grantice," he said. "Things have sure changed since I was in the service."

RATHER FRIGHTENING

FOUND HHE IMPLICATIONS OF THIS STORY