Judge's Order Extended As S.U. Trial Continues

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Dist. Judge Lewis Doherty has extended a temporary restraining order against nine Southern University students accused of contributing to student unrest that led to a police-student confrontation on campus Nov. 16.

Two Southern students died of buckshot wounds in the fracas.

Doherty extended the restraining order against the students for 10 more days, as testimony continued in the university's suit to bar the students from the campus.

State Board of Education President Jesse Bankston testified the board authorized Southern to file the suit.

Bankston said Southern President Dr. G. Leon Netterville singled out the nine students as having disrupted classes during a month-long student protest and boycott leading up to the shootings.

Meanwhile, Atty. Gen. William Guste has appeared before the East Baton Rouge Parish Grand Jury to discuss possible criminal acts committed on Nov. 16.

A study committee headed by Guste gathered information which led Guste to believe the students were shot by an unidentified deputy sheriff. The committee plans to turn over its information to the grand jury.

Guste and Dist. Atty. Ossie Brown said they will work ogether in developing any criminal cases to 2y3cexl2aaj se5 hs grand ks)n
