Rap Brown Wins Right to Arson

against his client, fugitive liam B. Yates II.

The motion for the eviden-

By John Haurahan
Washington Post Staff Writer
ELLICOTT CITY, Md.,
March 19—Attorney William

March 19—Attorney William

Judge James Macgill, of the gill: "I respectfully ask you, I beg you . . . please, please grant it for me . . . for I have on other way to come back value fold the court that such and defend a reverled with the surrenders."

Judge James Macgill, of the gill: "I respectfully ask you, I jurisdiction of this court," and technically "has no right to assistance . . . until he surrenders to the surrenders of the court that such and defend a reverled with the surrenders of the court that such and defend a reverled with the surrenders of the court that such and defend a reverled with the surrenders of the court that such and defend a reverled with the surrenders of the court that such and the court th M. Kunstler won the right a hearing was needed to vindi- from this witness stand . . . I

The allegation that the ard J. Kinlein.

Yates told the court that such and defend myself except ders himself."

But, Sweeney went on to today to a court hearing on an cate Maryland's system of jus-allegation that arson charges tice. don't want to be tried in the press." say, "in hackneyed and trite phrases the question here goes Sweeney told Macgill that, beyond the guilt or innocense black militant H. Rap Brown, charge was fabricated was under normal circumstances, of Rap Brown." The allegation were fabricated by Dorchester made in January by Howard he would oppose Kunstler's that the charges were fabri-County States Attorney Wil- County State's Attorney Rich- motion for the hearing "on cated, he said, "raises questechnical and legal grounds." tions about the . . . adminis-Yates, in an impassioned He said Brown had "contemp-tration of justice in the state tiary hearing was granted by presentation, told Judge Mac- tuously absconded from the of Maryland, and the charac-

Case Hearing

one of the prosecutors . . ." Brown, missing for more than a year, was notnpresent today. Kunstler told the court that he does not know Brown's 1967, on charges of arson, pro-Brown would not have to be in court for the hearing on whether evidence was fabri- ders in Cambridge, Md. cated to bring the arson indictment against him.

Macgill set the hearing for April 16.

After that hearing, Macgill

ter, honesty and integrity of then will rule on a defense motion to dismiss the arson charge.

Brown was indicted Aug. 14, whereabouts and noted that curing arson, rioting and inciting to riot, following disor-

> Macgill last year dismissed the procurement to arson charge, leaving the count itself as the only felony indictment against Brown in Maryland. Riot charges are misdemeanors. Without the felony charge, Kunstler said Brown could not have been indicted on subsequent federal charges of illegally transporting a gun and intimidating an FBI agent, because both charges stemmed from the Maryland felony indictment

Brown failed to appear for trial in Ellicott City last April. This resulted in a fugitive felony warrant being issued for his arrest. The FBI then placed him on its "Ten Most Wanted" list. He has not been seen publicly since last March, just before he was scheduled to go on trial originally in Harford County. A bomb blast killed two associates of Brown the night before that trial was scheduled to begin.

Kunstler told the court today that he would call at least four witnesses for the hearing to determine "if a monstrous perversion of justice has occurred." They are Robert Woodward, a reporter for The Montgomery County Sentinel, Kinlein, Ben Franklin, a New York Times reporter, and Yates.

In January, Kunstler said in recounting events leading up to today's hearing. Yates told Woodward that he had fabricated the arson charge against Brown to insure FBI participation in the search if Brown failed to appear for trial.

Then, Kunstler said, Kinlein also told Woodward that Yates had acknowledged to him that the arson charge was fabricated. Woodward subsequently printed the story of the allegation.

"It seems to me that there could be nothing more odious, nothing more reprehensible, nothing more indecent than to use the law to prosecute a man you know is innocent," Kunstler said. "This is the height of tyranny, the height of indecency."