Wiretap Success

United Press International

Sen. Roman L. Hruska (R-Neb.), said yesterday wiretapping was working well as a tool in the war on organized crime.

Hruska made the assertion in a Senate speech outlining contents of the fourth annual report on electronic surveillance prepared by the administrative office of the federal court system.

Last year, Hruska said, there were 816 applications for telephone wiretaps under the omnibus crime control law. None was denied. The taps led to 2,818 arrests and 322 convictions, with more convictions to come, Hruska said.
