House Panel Backs Curb on Warrantless Bugging

By George Lardner Jr. Washington Post Staff Writer

Rep. Robert McClory (R-III.) and John Ashbrook (R-Ohio) dissented after failing in an effort to broaden the opportunities for bugging U.S. cittzens who are working for a foreign power. The bill requires that they be involved in activities which "may involved in activities which "may intellignece cases. tain court approval for the use of elec-tronic surveillance in most foreign invoted 8 to 2 yesterday to approve a bill requiring the government to ob-The House Intelligence Committee > drop that standard altogether. volve" a criminal violation.

> Ashbrook and McClory wanted to government to continue the intercep-tion of communications "exclusively between or among foreign powers" without going to the courts. from Defense Department officials and other administration witnesses, the committee did, however, approve another amendment permitting the After a secret briefing last week om Defense Department officials

Rep. Romano Mazzoli (D-Ky.) objected, saying he feared this might leave FBI agents assigned to carry out strongly that the main selling point of the bill ought to be that "every combe preceded by a court order." munication picked up by a wiretap Beyond that, Mazzoli said he felt committee over Mazzoli's objections intercepting communications between, for instance, a foreign embassy and involves some highly secret method of The exemption approved by the

in the particular type of surveillance we're concerned with here," Rep. Mor-"There are no U.S. persons involved

11 district judges and 3 appellate judges who will be assigned under the bill to consider the government's closure...judicial interference...or delay," but Mazzoli said he saw little danger in sharing the secret with the munity did not want to subject the highly sensitive system "to risk of dis-McClory said the intelligence com-intercepts in legal jeopardy. the "black bag" jobs preceding such gan Murphy (D-III.) emphasied after alluding to the the secret briefing. its overseas capital.

foreign intelligence cases right now without any judicial warrants and the courts have never ruled against the courts in protecting civil liberties in this area," said ACLU lawyer Jerry Berman. The government, he noted, is conducting electronic surveillance in Congress is now going beyond the tapping but that said, we think the "The ACLU is opposed to all wire-other eletronic surveillance request. ment have potential access to details about the secret intercepts, it was said, although only 150 actually know of it. About 75,000 people in the govern-land (D-Mass.) "You're not going to get this bill through the House in any 95 to 1 fashion," a reference to the margin by which the Senate approved a similar measure last month. Committee Chairman Edward R. Bo-

An American Civil Liberties Union spokesman said the bill was a welthan the Senate-approved measure. tice and stronger in some respects come improvement over current prac-