Dear Mark:

The enclosed is not to be shared with anyone, nor discussed with anyone.

It is an example of what I have to deal with.

Rick called at 7 a.m. this morning. I have often felt that he does a check by calling me every day, and if he finds that I am not here, my house or what is in it is in danger.

I am definitely missing some key tapes which would have been picked up from my desk last Fall. Fortunately I had already written them up, but only Rick could have picked them up during one of his visits. I really despise the way he will tip toe around or slip into my office at any opportunity, while I'm in the kitchen for a moment, having left him in the living room.

This A.M. I asked him if he was all right, and he gave a very negative indication, which I took to be a need for money. He asked to come by at 11 a.m., saying he was finished at work, and I said I was too busy to see him. He has wanted to come by each day. Yesterday it was to tell me that Oswald had a son.

I'm sure Laytner is probably a snake, but I haven't seen the full ball of wax yet.

Groden is still in town as of this morning.

Best wishes,

Harry
