Dear Bud,

All of us were glad to get your letter of the 11th today. I'm sure that as soon as the kids she baby-sits night are asleep Rae will be filing out the forms.

I'm hopeful that as a result of her sharp eye we'll wind up with more valuable records. As she was searching files I'd forgotten so I could prepare something for court she came across references to indices claimed by the FBI not to exist. I'll be going after them.

If I didn't tell you, we learned that the FBI makes abstracts of all important records while taking a deposition in the suit for the King records. Rather than they had King records abstracts. A little research showed that they do this for all, in duplicate, each copy filed differently. We have a motion before the court to get them. To obstruct the Department asked that the judge examine a sample to determine usefulness, which is actually irrelevant under the Act. We got out copy of the sample today. A set should ^{now} be on the way to Dave so that, if he sees in them the usefulness that I'm sure is there, he can provide a statement attesting to it. For now, if we get them, they will be the closest thing there is to an index.

The index will be harder to get because the FBI has already filed a perjurious affidavit claiming it was liquidated nine years ago. We're fighting that one, too.

Once this business of the King abstracts is settled I'll go after those on the JFK records. To do it now would scare everyone too much.

Everything takes so much time and effort! But this makes any help that much more valuable, so thanks for it!

Meanwhile, the CIA is on the back burner. But the pilot light is not out and in time it will flash to the back.

Thanks and our best,

Dear Harold,

Thank you for your letter of January 5. It was indeed a pleasure to visit and get better acquainted with your "family" and the materials.

As I indicated to you, we will be giving some support to Rae for her work. To do so I need to have her fill out the enclosed materials so that I can assist in payment to her for a part of her work, and can continue to do so periodically in the future as a Limited Term Employee.

It is my intent when the papers are in order that the first payment will be for approximately $500.

I hate to bother Rae with the procedures: (1) application for employment; (2) tax withholding certificate, but it will pave the way for future payment.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Burdette W. Eagon
