FBI Nominee Vows To Resist 'Pressure'

E 20173 By Sanford J. Ungar Washington Post Staff Writer

Clarence M. Kelley, President Nixon's latest nominee to be director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, vowed yesterday that if confirmed for the post he will resist "political pressure" in all its forms.

Citing his experience as police chief in Kansas City, Mo., for the past 12 years, Kelley told the Senate Judiciary Com-mittee that "I have never bowed to such pressure, and I don't mean to start now."

In response to questions from Sen, Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.), the nominee promised he would not:

· Give speeches at the request of the White House, in order to enhance a president's chances for reelection;

• Gather information through FBI field offices on issues considered important

All of those actions helped in a political campaign;

reports to a White House rector-designate, L. Patrick counsel conducting his own inity, such as the Watergate affair;
• Take

charge of documents labelled "political dyna-

CLARENCE M. KELLEY ... undergoes scrutiny

mite" by presidential aides

All of those actions helped Provide FBI investigative ley's predecessor as FBI didoom the nomination of Kelwas withdrawn, once it became clear that he would not be confirmed. He resigned

See KELLEY, A9, Col. 1

KELLEY, From A1

after serving 51 weeks as acting FBI director when it was learned that he had burned sensitive documents passed to him by the White House,

The spectre of Gray's tenure at the bureau hung like a cloud over Kelley's confirmation hearings. The new nominee went to great lengths to emphasize that unlike Graya lifelong Republican and Nixon loyalist-he had never been involved in partisan pol-

Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, appearing to endorse the nomination, stressed ant" on the subject. that during the selection leanings are."

set yesterday morning that Kelley had been advised to avoid one of Gray's mistakes by discussing the FBI's internal operations as little as possible before the committee.

Although he had served as an FBI agent for 21 years before taking over the Kansas City police force in 1961, Kelley repeatedly asserted his unfamiliarity with bureau procedure and practice.

At one point, when asked whether he favors full public disclosure of details of the FBI's long-secret budget, he said he was "completely ignor-

Asked by Sen. John V. Tunprocess from which Kelley's ney (D-Calif.) why the late J. name emerged, "no one even Edgar Hoover, FBI director asked him what his political for nearly half a century, had rejected safeguards of confi-"It was clear from the out-dentiality for the bureau's National Crime Information Center, Kelley replied, "Senator, I just simply don't know."

The nominee astonished some members of the committee when he said that he knows of no bureau surveillance in the area of "domestic intelligence" that is not con-nected with prosecution of specific criminal of fenses. Such surveillance has been well - documented over the years by sources inside and outside the FBI.

He also stirred a titter in the hearing room when he said that he had "no thoughts" on the question of whether the FBI should employ "surreptitious entry" - in effect. f breaking and entering - to gather information.

Kelley was stolid and un- Because Kelley's Automated smiling through most of the Law Enforcement Response full day of questioning, answering with few words and has been a ploneer in the sometimes in a barely audible computerization of criminal

On one issue, however, he drew criticism even from some Republicans on the Judiciary Committee who were expected to be his strongest supporters.

Quizzed by the committee's ranking GOP member, Sen. Roman Hruska of Nebraska, about the need to update computerized arrest records with the information about how criminal cases came cut-noting, for example, whether a person was ever convicted of a system that had substantially the crime charged - Kelley said that such a requirement is "unfair to the police."

"It is practically impossible and extremely expensive" to update the arrest records, he incomplete, he added, the arrest records are "very helpful essential to police throughout the land."

That answer drew a rebuke tants" and "activists." from Hruska that "it must be to obtain data on the fenders. disposition of criminal cases and that it "would be better Judiciary Committee to esforthe purity of the records." tablish a congressional system William J. Randall, a Demo-But he continued to insist of overseeing FBI activities crat from Independence, Mo. that "it is a tremendously dif- for the first time in the ficult job."

records ,the question of safeguards on the FBI's national crime center operation was a recurring theme during the hearing.

Kelley contended that the nation's growing web of data banks need not interfere with citizens' civil liberties, but agreed with Tunney that a review of the crime center should be one of his first priorities if he takes over the FBI.

Kelley defended ALERT as aided law enforcement in Kansas City, but conceded that the computer there, like others, does not indicate the "reliability" of some of the information that it stores.

"At first, admittedly, ies" of information in the ALERT computer, he saidincluding "mentals,"

But Kelley added that after a complete record which is the visit of a "national secura complete record which is the visit of a "national securities of none at all... ity group from the East," oversight must be by a group after all, an arrest is just an accusation of a crime. There is a presumption of innocence." which he did not identify, that is "restricted, controlled, many entries were "purged" responsible and cognizant of the was also convinced that he was also convinced that the confidential nature of the system had been the property of the system had been the confidential nature of the confid Later, when the questioning abuses of the system had been returned to the same theme, brought under control through Kelley said that "it is a good disciplinary action against of-

> The nominee invited the bureau's history.

But Kelley warned that the Kelley's nomination was warmly endorsed by Missouri's Democratic senators, Stuart Symington and Thomas F. The hearings continue this mor.ing.