Haynes Johns Fulitzer-Prize winning Washington Star" reporter who made his own impressive New Orleans investigation, and printed with a banner and front-page headline February 27, 1967, said these things about Ferrie:

"...he was a militant anti-Cratroite anti-Castroite who actively perticipated in Bay of Pigs activity in New Orleans, and he was clearly an intelligent but disturbed person...Ferrie never tried to hide his activity on behalf of anti-Castro Gubans. L...He was also regarded as something of a quick-buck artist, anxious for money, but with little visible means of support." He found Ferrie "a singularly repelling figure" who, "instead of buying an adequate wig, affected a different, more striking devise. He glue down his red toupee...with glucose accement."

Ferrie had s"*preoccupation with Socrates'- his constant reaction to every problem was to walk up and down the room beating his forehead and saying,'Now what would Socrates have done'", according to Mrs. Martin (WW) (Jule 5)
