Facts

By Ben Hayes

THE DAUGHTER of a New Orleans funeral director is employed in Mills Restaurant, 77 S. High-st., and he buried David Ferrie (after District Attorney Jim Garrison called Ferrie's death suicide) and Gordon Novel was arrested here—so it will be easy for Garrison to believe that Columbus was involved in the "conspiracy" of President Kennedy's assassination.

You can speak of Chuck Allspaugh, Reynoldsburg excavator, in the same sassy manner—for he has become filler-upper as well as digger-outer. On a recent day he dropped 62 loads of earth in the backyard of some people who asked for it.

HE WAS filling-up a swim pool he had excavated seven years ago. Families change, children grow up, leave home—so Allspaugh gets recalls from people who have "pooled" long enough.

Trouble is, he can't locate the same dirt he took out.

The dogs offered by the Greyhound bus terminal restaurant (to continue this vital-type reporting) are in the 30-40-cent range and are kennelized in five hot categories: Rocket Dog, Wild West Dog, State Capital Dog, Post House Dog and Super dog. The last one is somewhat of a dachshund, that is, with kraut.

THE MIMOSA TREES of Bryden-rd., asserted long ago by the millionaires who had them planted, continue to bloom each July. They are at it now, pinkly and fuzzily, like Nature's cotton candy.

More old town: The bricks of German Village sidewalks are a fraction thinner than they were last week. The annual tour had thousands walking about the old streets Sunday. There were free buses and Frebis buses, and still they walked. Charm is just around the corner, always.

THINGUM-BOBS: Mrs. Jack Yousey, 5314 Riverside-dr, says that persons fond of the Michigan town named Bad Axe refer to it affectionately as Naughty Hatchet.

There hardly is a grocery left; most of them are called Food City, Foodland, etc. Our phone book indicates that Ten Fifteen East Broad, Inc., is located on Town-st. The Evergreen Pharmacy is on Sandalwood. Cicero's wife is buried behind the Episcopal church in Worthington—the wife of Cicero Comstock.

Roast owl with truffle sauce, according to the menu of the Tin Lizzie Restaurant in New York City, is offered but one day each year, on St. Swithin's Day (July 15). The Colorado city of Boulder gets drinking water from the world's only municipally-owned glacier.

The Purple Why is an entertainment group (five persons) and still another is called Mother's Oats.
