Bell Prepared to Defy Judge on FBI Files

and Morton Mintz Washington Post Staff Writers brief to the high court is incomplete And the lower court judge, Thomas P. Griesa, has countered that Bell's names of confidential FBI informants. order to give up files containing the pared to defy a district court judge's has told the Supreme Court he is pre-Attorney General Griffin B. Bell

Parly as this week whether to review the legal issues raised by the Justice Department's long and bizarre feud with Griesa The Supreme Court may decide as

and misleading.

fears identifying informants in this civil case would create a harmful precedent and scare off others who might cooperate with law enforcecontempt for falling to comply with Griesa's order, aides say, because he Bell is willing to risk being cited for

Socialist Workers Party, the group matic and its legal basis fictitious. "That order isn't directed at Bell, but that filed the multimillion-dollar daminterview. the FBI," he said in a recent phone age suit, calls Bell's claim melodra> on 1,300 informants who spied on the The SWP suit has been dragging on since 1973, while attorneys for the two sides argued about access to FBI files small radical political group since 1938.

partment and Griesa escalated earlier this year when the Manhattan judge threatened to hold FBI officials in contempt if they refused to comply with his order to turn over to Boudin files on 18 informants. The feud between the Justice De-

Court the case, Bell—as custodian of the FBI files—petitioned the Supreme Appeals refused to review the order because it was not a final decision in When the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of branches of the government. lead to confrontation between two that formal step, which could only require the attorney general to take to permit appellate review," the brief by Solicitor General Wade H. McCree er said. "But it would be pointless to "The attorney general is prepared not to comply with the district court's order in this case, if that is necessary

"Moreover, it would be unseemly for the chief law enforcement officer of the United States, sworn to uphold and obey the law, publicly to disobey a court as the price of obtaining re-view of a ruling he believes to be both unsound and certain to harm the proper functioning of government." To support its claim that the confidentiality of informants is "privileged" and shouldn't be revealed, Justice cited the case where then-president Nixon got an early Supreme Court review of his fight to keep the Watergate tapes out of the hands of special prosecutor Leon Jado not have the legal standing of the Boudin replied in his brief that the reference to Nixon is "frivolous" bepresident. cause no order has yet been directed at Bell and because Cabinet officers think the government might wish to "correct." tice brief. He hauled Bell's attorneys into his courtroom in April for a long recitation of "some things...which I Griesa also was critical of the Jus-previously disclosed FBI documents.

"The government is well aware that He all but accused Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas E. Moseley of delibings and overstated the usefulness of brief had omitted pertinent court rulerately trying to confuse the facts of the case. He charged that the Justice discovery thus far was intended to cover the FBI informant question," he Said none of the depositions and document didn't want to get in a spitting match with a federal judge," one Justice official said swer Griesa's charges further. nal brief, but has decided not to anhearing as a supplement to his origi-McCree filed a transcript of that