Dear Dick,

Within a few days Wrono will get the computer to spew out a copy of what to that day is on it and he'll send it to you.

Remember that although it may seem to be a book on JAMA, it is on the JFK assassination using JAMA as a peg, perhaps a ~~skeleton~~ skeleton, in what I think of as ineffectual judo to update as inclusively as I could what relates to what JAMA did.

Put together as for virtually no readers it was done before and all fact.

Except for my referring to liars as liars and if that causes apprehension, it can be put more politely.

But that is, too, fact.

It was remarkable that the Redskins won yesterday. I think it was mostly by coaching. Gibbs outfoxed them in many way and had them confused until the Skins were in charge. Instead of his standard single back he had two or three and they began without huddle.

If the Eagle's defense had not been so fine at the goal line the Skins could have had six more TDs. They were inside the 10-yard line that many times without one.

They were actually the first team in ages to rush for 100 yards against the Eagles but when they got the ball too near the goal posts Gibbs opted for a safety to move out and kick with more safety. That took four yards from the 100 + they had rushed.

The makeshift line was excellent, surprise, surprise, and a good thing because before the game there was an additional removal for injury.

Rippeon was pretty good but he threw two bad passes that would have been TDs, men in the clear.

Best,
