

Dear Richard,

2/10/91

After I wrote the enclosed letter to Oliver Stone, without expectation of his paying much if any attention to it but intending, whether or not he did, to have it as a matter of record, I thought about it more before going to bed. My thinking was prompted by a phone call from Dave Wrone, my good friend who is professor of history at the Univ. of Wisconsin at Stevens point. When I told him that the Stone spectacular is going to be based on Garrison's conspiracy theories his ~~my~~ reaction was, "My God! We have to do something about it." He suggested that a few historians and I hold a press conference to denounce it. I thought about that later and believe it would not attract much if any media attention. But Dave is correct, something should be done. I wonder if a first-person article in a major magazine could attract enough major-media attention. After he has had time to get and read the letter and then time not to respond to it or to pass it off. Like:

Oliver Stone is an important man in Hollywood. He produces some of the most significant documentaries, with spectacular success. He could not have earned his fame and fortune without faith in his own instincts and judgement. Perhaps this is why he did not respond when I wrote to caution him that in what ^{JAN 14 1991} The Hollywood Reporter says is already being referred to as the "Oliver Stone Project for 1991" and describes as a "big-screener about the assassination ^{February 3} of John F. Kennedy," what the Los Angeles Times reports is "based on Jim Garrison's conspiracy theories" of that "Hot Topic," ^{9/1 told him it} casts him personally ¹ as Mack Sennett in a Pink Panther update of his Keystone Kops.

I was there when and believe me, I know → know as only a few men close to Garrison when he was ^{the} New Orleans District Attorney who drew the press of the entire world to The Crescent City with the first news that he alone, the six-foot-six Dick Daring ^{of D.A.s.} had personally solved the Crime of the Century, the ~~xxx~~ November 22, 1963 assassination of ~~Kenned~~ the popular charismatic President.

He had charged as conspirators Clay Shaw, prominent businessman and successful playwright and a well-known and nonetheless ^{of} respected homosexual; a sick-in-the-head former Eastern Airlines pilot, David Ferris, who had been charged ^{by} with Garrison's own police department with offenses against minor boys and in real life ^{so far out he} a character who would be hard to accept as a character in a novel, and Lee Harvey Oswald, the only official candidate for assassin ^{and the officially ordained one}.

When I knew nothing about his alleged case, having been spending what time I could in New Orleans trying to learn more about Oswald's ~~past~~, I had agreed to Jim's request that at the Shaw trial (Oswald himself having been killed by Jack Ruby and Ferris having died under circumstances Garrison regarded as sinister) that I sit at the counsel table and be what he called his "Dealey Plaza expert." ^(+ why to here)

When I learned for the first time what his alleged case was ^{evening} the night before the ~~empanelling~~ empanelling of the Shaw-trial jury I refused to appear and ^I did not, although ¹ the New York Times did report that I sat at the counsel table - in the courtroom in which I never set foot.

As I had told Alvin Oser (later a local judge) and Bill Wardell (later United States Attorney on New Orleans-check this) the afternoon before the case began, they would lose and they deserved to lose, ^{that} it took the jury ^{free} only an hour to agree with me.

Before going to New Orleans, from what I'd learned from the Warren Commission's records and ^{FAM} the public domain, I had written the surth of my seven book, six on this assassination, the other on that of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Its publication was delayed by Garrison, who had been asked by the publisher to provide a foreword. Those seven ^{but brilliant} pages took him three months to deliver. ^{per}

Later, under the Freedom of Information act, which the Congress amended in 1974, ~~as~~ over official corruption in one of my earliest lawsuits under that act ^{and thus made} to make FBI and similar files available to the public, I obtained about a third of a million pages of previously-withheld government records, mostly the FBI's ^{and not infrequently marked "Sec. 1" and "Top Secret."}

So, from my personal investigations and this enormous volume of the government's information, and above all, from my ~~ex~~ ^{ex} tensive personal experiences - to say nothing of adventures and extraordinarily difficult and successful efforts to save Garrison's ass from Garrison himself - ^{what} Garrison had staged ^{was} his own Mardi Gras for the media for three ^{three years of Fat Tuesdays for the 40-} years and it was in ^{no sense what can honestly be called an investigation.}

Of Garrison ~~as an investigator~~ I wrote Oliver Stone, "as an investigator he could not find public hair in an overworked and undercleaned whorehouse - at rush hour."

Garrison is, however, an erudite, eloquent, charming, witty and imaginative man, and at the same time, as the perceptive late Sylvia Meagher (author of the brilliant "Accessories after the Fact" exposing the Warren Commission) said of him; he comes from the pages of Ayn Rand. She was much more perceptive than most of the rest of those of us known as "critics" of the official account of that assassination, ^{he} in particular, because I ^{quite wrongly} believed that he had the case he charged and all his excesses ^{was} his way of fighting fire with fire. ^{no excuse; I should have known better.}

Oh, ^{my!} ~~my!~~ what a mess he made of everything as he dreamed up conspiracy theory after conspiracy theory, undeterred when a new one was exactly the opposite of ~~what~~ his earlier theories (all of which he sincerely believed as soon as he ^{fratched them!}).

In ~~retrospect~~ retrospect, even after more than two decades and the mellowing of my own accumulating years, it is hard to believe that any one man could fabricate so many imaginary wild geese to chase or that he could actually have gone for and ^{to have devised} invented the several disasters from which I, ^{here} personally, saved him.

The last - which I save for last - was when he was going to commemorate the fifth anniversary of that assassination ^{with still another conspiracy} by charging several men of whom he knew the name of only ^{one} the one who had ^{hilled himself had} died and been buried in New Orleans the year before John Kennedy was ^{assassinated!} buried, with still another conspiracy. He also had a ring of prominent men who had their own sado-masochist ring conspiring to kill JFK and he was even so gulled by a fake book produced by the French colleagues of the CIA, SDECE, that he persuaded the ^{Frenchman} ~~man~~ who used the name Herve Lamarre and the pen name James Hepburn, to change the title from "L' Amerique Brule" (American burns) to "Farewell America." ^{"Flammarion said he loved country Hepburn, hence 'James Hepburn'")}

The "Oliver Stone Project for 1991," in ^{January 25} (which, as the Hollywood Report ^{by} said ~~see~~ "to show the size of the project, no less than seven casting agents are working between the two coasts to find the right faces for the various roles," will be a genuine "big-screener" of the ridiculous if, as reported, he bases his superduper on Garrison's books, particularly "On the Trail of the Assassins."

It is a work of ^{spook} fiction palmed off as a true account of the world against Jim Garrison, especially the CIA.

It is as dishonest ~~as~~ a book as after almost 78 years I can remember. ^{It also is} ~~not~~ a good read for those who go for all the nutty theories of most of the critics who, although none as much as Garrison, mislead the still-sorrowing people about what happened when the President so many loved and still love was gunned down in broad daylight ~~in~~ on the streets of a modern American city and consigned to history with the dubious epitaph of the official mythology ^{was by entrant officialdom} by which ^{it continued, their} ~~entrant officialdom in its own~~ contrived and impossible "solution" ^{which is refuted by the official records that were suppressed} consigned him to history. ^{until after the Report was released and accepted}

^{THIS} In this these critics have done more to obfuscate than officialdom could, and ¹ they have given credibility to officialdom's lies to the people about the assassination of John F. Kennedy. ^{Extra space}

Oh, Richard, how I wish that "avid had developed his fine interest earlier!"

First it must be understood that Garrison was paranoid -paranoid as hell. He was so parahoid he feared having a hernia ~~corrected~~ surgically corrected in any ^{He really believed he could be killed in any New Orleans hosp. + sl. #} of the manfina hospitals in New Orleans. What I do not know of personal knowledge but was told by his at staff ^{is} that he persisted in risking the dangers of complications until a small country clinic could be ^{emptied} emptied of all other patients so that he alone would be there for ^{4/} that surgery and the continued hospitalization until it was safe to leave. And what he arranged that he also had a full staff of the police investigators assigned to his office as investigators to guard the hospital and him ^{through out his confinement} for that ~~period of time~~.

It also must be understood that there was no need -absolutely no need at all - for the federal government to boobytrap him in any way. all the harm that was done to his "probe" he, personally did to it. It simply was not possible for any outside force to undermine his credibility ^{repeatedly as} as completely and as effectively as he did. For example, ~~having~~ having charged Oswald in court as one of the conspiring assassins, he laced the country and filled the papers and the electronic media with his proclamations of - Oswald's innocence.

There is no "trail" in Garrison's book. There isn't even a lead as thin as the most gossamer of spider threads.

Nor are there any assassins. Not that earlier he had not charged dozens of them. (note-use sound of his chatters to illustrate)

On the assassination itself, there is less substance than to the clothing of the emperor ^{of} in the fable.

The book is an utterly spineless, unabashed self-justification and self-glorification by ^{a pretentiously persecuted and} a gifted and sometimes highly principled lawyer ^{is at once mild and witty} who can also be kind ^{and} yet aserbic. It is the embodiment of the lawyer's maxim, "penis erectis sciam non habet."

It is also a book of childish vengeance and the pettiest of dishonesties. ^{This is done to} In part so that he ^{alone is} ~~also can be~~ central ^{to} in it except where anything else makes no difference and he ^{still} remains central.

His dislikes are obvious ^{He shows this} with me by lack of mention ^{of} and by attribution to others with profuse thanks to them ^{they did not do and I did do} for what ~~did~~ - and he knows very well that I did - and ^{of} what it would have cost him if I had not.

This can have a number of origins.

For one thing, I never sat at his feet and fawned as almost all others did.

For another, at ~~en~~ the very outset of his "probe" both the Washington Post and the Times of London conspicuously attributed the origin of his fiasco to my first book ^{Whitewash: the report on the Warren Report} where, indeed, in it and in it alone ^{is} ~~beginning point~~ ^{this includes but is not limited to} the mysterious character "Clay Bertrand" ^(Garrison proclaimed that there was no Bertrand, was Bertrand)

The Post said, "the investigation is Garrison's, but the script apparently started with Harold Weisberg, former Senate investigator and author of 'Whitewash'..."

The Times said, "One mystery of the rather mystifying investigation of the Kennedy assassination now being conducted by Mr. Jim Garrison, the Attorney General of New Orleans, has been cleared up. The source of much of the information is Mr. Harold Weisberg, the author of Whitewash, Report on the Warren Report."

In fact this is what the offbeat, jive-talking ^{rotly-jolly} New Orleans lawyer to whose ~~text~~ Warren Commission testimony I gave first attention ^{told me that} Garrison told him while publicly claiming that he got the idea during a conversation with Louisiana Senator Russell Long, Huie's nephew.

If ^{also} ~~likely~~ ^{have} could come from my denunciation of what his case was and accurate prediction that ^{and should there were some} he would ^{lose it was at least one factor, probably among many} ^{all lose majesty to Super Sleuth Jim}

Garrison is an egocentric man certain of his own wisdom and intelligence and sincere in his belief that he really owned the subject of the JFK assassination. ^{To} With him, as with virtually all the many who "solved" the case with a variety of sometimes imaginative ~~theories~~ theories that in their minds became real and were in no instance proven, in most instances untenable and in some known to be impossible to their authors, fact is not relevant.

In "The Trail of the Assassins" truth also is irrelevant.

For one who knows the fact and knows the truth it is hilarious as it appears in Garrison's rewriting of his own history.

"^{Truth} ~~Truth~~," he was fond of pronouncing, "is the first victim." It certainly was his!
Nobody ever proved ^{this} ~~it~~ more completely and more completely dishonestly than this truly talented ^{ad} man who was given the ^{lasting} nickname by Dean Andrews, one of his witnesses he charged with perjury before the grand jury, of "The Jolly Green Giant."

If the also talented Oliver Stone ~~can~~ produces anything other than a side-splitting comedy of the tragedy that Garrison was it will be his own self-indictment and he, too, will go down in history as still another of the major media who failed the nation with still more ^{the} lies about that awful crime, contemporaneously called "the crime of the century," ^{the} crime that turned the world around, the crime that replaced the President who had turned dove and become a ^{leader} ~~man~~ seeking peace for the troubled war with the ^{hawkish} President of the Viet Nam disaster.

Resume with Garrison stories. Wrong is to xerox the copy of the book I annotated and mail it to me.

You can see where I broke for breakfast after which I stopped ^{briefly} to read the Sunday paper but I can't get this out of mind. It and the potential I can see in it excite me.

It has been so long I now am not familiar with practise. It used to be lead and summary. I hope the letter to Stone, parts, ^{Can serve as a summary and} will indicate that these ^{is very funny} ~~is~~ content for what could be a very long list of pertinent, tragicomical and documentable stories.

In my excitement I'm reminded of something I dearly hope might be possible. Years ago Ed Epstein wrote a lengthy New Yorker article that then appeared as ^{or was expanded} into a book, "Counterplot." If they are interested, and I hope you have a way of ^{or inducing interest} ascertaining, it can be expanded no end. With pictures, with documentation, including of the BSDECE part, with even copies of some of their calling-cards. And, of course, FBI documents of which I attach only a single page. When Helen is here tomorrow I'll tell her where to look from that very rough report I did on that broken of all things - East German portable typewriter of Matt Herron. Who is his own spectacle ^{far} story that could be inserted. If it works, with someone, preferably of light touch, because so much of this is so ridiculous while so true, I ~~talk~~ can talk the rest in that writer's presence into a recorder and we can also get enough documentation.

Whatever Stone does or does not do, this is a sure-win/no lose story/book because if he does what I regard as extremely unlikely, this is what did it. And if he doesn't, with any attention it will do him in. And at the same time is 100% factual, a serious report on a major incident in history dealing with one of its greatest tragedies and is simultaneously very, very funny.

Hopefully,
Harold

Dear Mr. Stone,

Beginning with the first reports of your interest in the Ricky White fabrications that are so obvious, I've been troubled ^{by} all the rumors about what you plan. Among the other items in today's mail is a clipping from the Los Angeles Sunday Times of the third. I presume it is accurate in stating that what the Hollywood Reporter describes as your "Project for 1991" is "based on Jim Garrison's conspiracy theories."

You need not agree with me, of course, and you have every right to play Mack Sennett in a Keystone Kops Pink Panther, but I believe that the assassination of any President is, whatever the intent, a de facto coup d'etat. And that on any such subject, if what remains of representative society is to have any health and any opportunity to function as in theory it must for freedom to be real, the people must be truthfully and accurately informed.

Perhaps based on a longer and different life than yours and what I've seen, experienced and been part of ~~it~~ it, perhaps because I am the first member of my family ever to be born into freedom, this means more to me than it does to you. You may think that I exaggerate. But if you do, please think back to that day that turned the entire world around and compare this country and the world of today with that ~~days~~, including by comparing our political leadership on all levels and our economic health and ~~satate~~.

If as I hope you take time from what must be a busy day to think about what I say it should be apparent that I have and can have no selfish purpose. I have no theories to sell and from my knowledge of and experience in publishing and from your reputation it is apparent that there is no commercial interest in truth and fact and there is in theories.

I do, of course regret this because it was a coup d'etat and because without it all the awful and evil things that ensued might not have, I have substantial reason to believe would not have.

I feel so strongly, assuming as I have no reason not to, that you are a man of good intentions, that I do so when for the first time in years it has become possible for me to resume my own writing, having been provided with part-time help without which I have no access to my own extensive records because of the state of my health and the limitations it imposes on me.

In April, I hope, I'll be 78. For the past 15 years I've been of limited mobility (despite which I was able to ~~compel~~ the government to disgorge about a third of a million pages of previously-withheld records relating to the investigations of the JFK and King ^{(550551) (44 CM)} investigations) and now, 14 months after open-heart and triple bypass operations, ~~an~~ under doctors' orders not to lift more than 15 pounds. As you can see from my typing, I must ~~me~~ even keep my legs elevated when I'm sitting. Sideways typing is not easy or pleasant. In any event, I've gone most of the miles in which, as Frost said, we have promises to keep and continuing to try to keep those promises ^{means} something to me. Thus I write you, for myself, and in the hope that you, too, recognize that all who can do have promises with ^{which} ~~which~~ they were born to keep.

I knew Jim Garrison very well. I spent as much time in New Orleans during his non-stop Mardi Gras euphemistically knowthere as his "probe" as I could afford. My interest was not in Clay Shaw. It was in Oswald. Mistakenly I assumed that he had a case and that all the untoward things I could not help noticing were his way of fighting fire with fire.
I ~~am~~ the one of the aritics he asked to sit at the counsel table turing the Shaw trial to be what he called his "Dealey Plaza expert." The New York Times, having been informed of this, actually reported that I was sitting there the day they started empanelling the jury. I wasn't. My absence began with an incredibly paranoic stupidity on his part that I'll go into if you would like. What he had done in Superior Court in Washington, when with his staff counsel, ~~Wouma~~ Bertel, I was sitting at the counsel table, led me to phone New Orleans, tell them all to go to hell, and then to cancel my reservation.
Several of his staff, of whom I remember Andrew "Moo" Sciambra, phoned me to assure me that Jim had been away and had not done what was so terribly sick, and that all was as I had been assured it was.

I believed them, went there, spent the Sunday afternoon before the beginning of the last act of the fiasco with Al Oser and the other lawyer who handled most of the in-court work, and when they broke it off at about 5 p.m., I told them they would lose and deserved to lose. It was then that for the first time I learned what the alleged case was.

One of the reports I got is that you hire^d Bud Fensterwald and his Dallas branch of a nuttery to be your experts. Bud is one of the nicest guys I know. I consider him a friend, but I do not recall a single irrational theory, a single obvious impossibility, he did not fall in love with. Bud was there then. When he was told, as I'd said, that if they proceeded with the case as I'd heard it outlined I'd be on the noon plane for home that Thursday.
Bud said to me, laughing, he knew I'd not be. I was. (Bud may also remember one of the innumerable insanities you can't begin to understand from his On the Trail of the Assassins, but whether or not he'll want to I can't say.)

I presume that is one of a number of incidents over which Jim does not love me.
There are so many! And with those you regard as "experts" you ^{LIKELY} ~~likely~~ can't have a glimmer.
I have no reason now to believe that those of his then staff who are privy will want to be truthful with you if you should ask, but I can and if you ask will document what I say.

I have in mind a couple of Jim's rewritings of his own history. You should remember them from what should be title "On the Cloud."

Remember Jim's disappointment over what he said was Bill Boxley's ^swaite of his limited funds by flying out to Alberquerque to be with him? Jim wrote that he sent him packing back to New Orleans because his limited resources ought not be wasted. Before telling you what was really involved, because it began with me, I say without any hesitation that Jim's was in all particulars a very big lie. He did NOT send Boxley back to New Orleans, and I know because what really happened when they left Albuquerque was so laughed about in Jim's office. Jim took Boxley to Los Angeles with him and, rather than economizing on funds, they had a suite in the Century Plaza, if I recall the name of a then new and fancy hotel. When a package was delivered to Jim's door, Boxley grabbed it and rush into the bathroom, where he filled the tub with water and immersed the package. When he thought the bomb was deactivated he opened it. It held books, ruined!

What Boxley was really there for began about three o'clock that morning, when the phone in my motel room in New Orleans rang. It was Harv Morgan, who then had a top-rated talk show on KCBS. Harv, a former reporter, was a friend. I knew he'd not have traced me and phoned at that hour unless it was about something serious. So before I took the call I got my tape recorder and taped the call. I probably have the tape somewhere. He told me about a San Francisco ^{MAFIA} plot to kill Jim, partially confirmed. As soon as we finished speaking I phoned Louis Ivon, then Jim's chief investigator. I hated to have to do that because in addition to having to work overtime on all varieties of childish foolishness he had exams. He was also in college getting a degree in criminology. Ivon picked me up in about a half hour, having first phoned others on the staff. I remember ^{5/14/68} Al Beck was in the office by the time we got there and I am certain others also were. They listened to the tape in private, took it seriously, and of the things I'd earlier suggested but would not do without an OK, they agreed I should phone the FBI. If you want, I'll send you the FBI's records on it.

The truth is so much better than Garrison's fabrication, aside from a congenital economy with truth, which characterizes all of his "probe" and this book, I can't understand why he bullshitted. But he has his own mind and his own tastes. The one not unreasonable explanation I can think of is that if he told the truth he could not avoid me, as he did throughout the book.

(Last I heard of Harv, he was disenchanted about the subject, perhaps about more, and was teaching at San Francisco State. He may have some recollection of this and what may trigger it is "Purple Mushroom," the name of the joint where I think there was the first knowledge of the alleged plot.)

Then there is the part of the book where Jim talks about firing Boxley because Boxley was a CIA spy out to ruin him. In fact he didn't fire Boxley. Boxley quit rather than return to New Orleans to confront me. This is how it happened and what it really was.

In October, 1968, when Bud heard I was going to the west coast for a couple of speeches, he asked me to stop off in New Orleans on my way back and give him my impression of what Jim was doing. For this he gave me a $100 travellers check! Anyway, I did. Even though I was anxious to get home because four of my front teeth were loosened.

Earlier I'd been warning Garrison and his staff that a manuscript that had been given to them was a fake. But Jim loved it and believed it. So much that he suggested to the representative^{IVP} of the French SDFCE, which actually produced that fake, to change the title from "L'Amerique Brule" to "Farewell America." When I got to New Orleans, and it was the day fate inflicted Nixon on us, Ivon gave me an OK to give some of it to a man I knew because his boss was allegedly in the assassination conspiracy. So I phoned H.L. Hunt's office and spoke to Paul Rothermel and told him about it. He told me that there would be a ticket for me at the "ekta counter at Moissant airport and to go, at Love field, to the statue of the Texas ranger, where I'd be picked up and taken to the hotel room that was already reserved in my name. I accepted only the ticket because I ~~was~~ went with the British reporter, John Pilger, to help with an anniversary piece he was in this country to write, and with my friend Matt Herron, who was his photographer.

Just before I was to return home Jim phoned me from New Orleans and insisted that I had to return there because he had made an amazing and very significant discovery he ~~was~~ wanted to go into with me. So I did, and as Matt Herron may remember, because he met my plane and I stayed with him, my luggage was intercepted. Matt took me to a Palais Royal so I could get a few clean items of clothing. Last I heard Matt also was in California, at ~~sausalito~~ ^{also there} Boy was it a big discovery! ~~(One was Charles Hall Steele, then a Marine, who had distributed literature with Oswald at the old Trade Mart building. Why Jim had Steele there I do not know because all he asked was the same questions the Warren Commission asked. (I later questioned Steele, in that office, and learned from him that what I had learned from Jesse Core was true, that Oswald had another helper in addition to Steele.))~~

Jim had this big sensation as an outgrowth of my asking Sciambra to ask the parents of the former WDSU photographer, Johann Rush, to search what he'd left with them at Shreveport when he moved to the Bay area to see if he had made prints of the stills of his motion pictures duplicating those he'd given the Secret Service. They told Moo how to reach Rush and Moo phoned that other demon investigator, Bill Turner, and Turner went to see ~~Steele~~ ^{Rush}. He got no stills, he spent all his time telling Rush all about his FBI career, and he left with a print of the WDSU footage it had refused to let Jim ~~have~~ have. When they started showing it and it was so poor a print I suggested that they look instead at mine because WDSU had let me have their file copy duplicated, with that reservation that I not give it to Jim. But they had a print so I felt it was OK to use mine.

Garrison provided a narration, pointing to a man he said was Shaw, and who wasn't, and then to a door past which the man walked. That door was, Jim, exclaimed, Shaw's secret entrance. This was the big thing he'd had ~~my~~ return to New Orleans for! If he had any explanation of Shaw's need for a secret entrance, on the main street yet, I do not remember it. What I do remember is that as usual, once he dreamed something up, he didn't bother to have it checked. Once he had any dream it became reality. Only ^{rain} that door could from the inside, ~~only~~. Some secret entrance!)

Just before leaving for the airport I learned from Ivon and Sciambra that Jim and Boxley had concocted the most outlandish of the^{ir} innumerable theories and that they had not been able to talk him out of it. They asked me to try. I asked Ivon for two sets of what are incorrectly known as "the tramp pictures" and two envelopes for them. I mailed each to someone I trusted in Dallas and got identical reports from two independent investigations. Jim was about to charge one ~~of~~ more of those men in one of his countless conspiracies, on the day of the anniversary then getting close. They were not ~~tramps~~, ^{tramps}, they were winos, they were not at the scene of the crime but were in a parked boxcar three blocks away, one to the west and two to the south. Etc.

Jim was big on a fink, Nancy Perrin Rich. His coming commemoration of the assassination feature^d/this Perrin as the assassin on the Grassy Knoll. And Boxley had built a case of a secret communications center in an apartment house owned by a man really named ~~Khrushch-~~ ^{Khrushch-} evsky. (Perrin had killed himself in New Orleans.)

^{So} So, I flew home, saw my dentist, saved my teeth and returned to New Orleans. As I thought about the real problem, how to convince Jim of anything ^{else} he had dreamed one of his dreams, I decided that ~~XXXXXXXX~~ if it takes a crook to catch a crook, it could take a nut to reach a nut. I therefore phoned Vince Salandria, who lives in Philadelphia and was as devoted to Jim as Jim was to him. I told him Jim was about to get into real trouble over Boxley, and would be please go there with me, so he could persuade Jim after I dug the truth up. He did and we both stayed with Matt Herr^{er}. Vince is a ^{conspiracy} buff, ^{fool}, so it was easy to make him suspicious of Boxley. The grim reality is that Boxley also was devoted to Jim and he simply went out and made up the "proof" of Jim's dreams.

Ivon and his investigators went out and got me the things I asked for, like the morgue book, which is not loose-leaf and is handwritten; they made a real investigation of that communications apartment, ^{out} found that instead of communications equipment that had been abandoned there, it had been empty beer cans. I can't remember all but whatever I asked they did. I have what I hope is a complete set of carbons of the report I gave Sciambra. Matt's typewriter was in bad shape and I had not taken my own supplies with me. I may not have all the carbons if I ran out of peper, etc., but I have more than enough to satisfy you.

All the time Salandria and Garrison were chatting at the New Orleans Athletic Club and other places, having assassination-fancy socials of one kind or another, and I'm sure they both enjoyed it.

It was on a Saturday that I gave Moo my report. I know he read it immediately and I think Ivon and perhaps others did. Moo was tickled. He said he and Vince and others were to meet with Jim for breakfast the next day, and would I like to wait in the office and do my own work while they did? I drove the old ^{scraped-up} Chevy II that had been taken from some gangsters and von always loaned me (because nobody else would give it) to the office, "oo let me in and Salandria went with him to the NOAC.

Several hours later, Moo phoned me, obviously excited.

"Hal! You did it! We are coming to get you and take you to the best Italian dinner you'll ever have!"

He and Salandria picked me up and as we were driving to Moo's home, where his wife's cooking was all he said it was, at one point he turned to me and exclaimed again, "Hal, you just saved Jim Garrison from being disbarred by the SUPreme Court of the UNITEd States of AMER AMERICA!" His emphasis. The Shaw case was there.

This is an understated version of one of the most difficult things I've ever tried, saving Jim Garrison from Jim Garrison.

I have no reason to believe his staff was not as competent as the average DA's staff but they could not do the simplest things. I am sure this is because they had a pretty good idea of the utter irrationality and absurdity of what they were involved in and could see no way out.

Whatever the reason, they could not even use the phone book to get Washington addresses for serving subpoenas. I had to do just that, get the addresses from the phone book and provide them.

I am talking about incredible, absolutely abnormal incompetence by men who were not, at least most of the time, in any way incompetent.

To put it bluntly, as an investigator Jim Garrison could not find public hair in an overworked and undercleaned whorehouse -at rush hour! The illustrations are endless.

With his contempt for truth and reality there is gross carelessness and ignorance of his own city, his own characters. He gives a first-person account of going up the stairs ~~and~~ stairs to Guy Banister's office which was on the first floor. I think he also has the stairs where there were no stairs. This is not unusual when you are just cribbing, as he often did.

Second-hand, through Ted Gandolfo, Jim made a big thing of getting a copy of On The Trail to me. I must have had a dozen calls from Gandolfo. Jim wanted me to have one of the first copies. Ted was getting ~~me~~ 20 and Jim insisted I get one if the first, his wife had forgotten to place it in the mail. Many such. And no book came. I didn't care that much about it, having lived through what I had, but then Prof. David Wroble, co-author of the only professional bibliography in the field, sent me a copy and asked me to annotated. Be my guest! Ask him to make a copy and send it to you. And then if you have any questions by all means fks away. But if you do not do something like this before you do anything on your big project, I am sure you'll be sorry even if you make a fortune.

And among seriousminded people who do care about their history and their country and likely in colleges and universities, you'll be a laughingstock.

However impressive he is in person, and he can be very, very impressive, no matter how attractive his book is, ~~you~~ you can't handle him honestly except in the way I do not think you would consider and I certainly am not suggesting, with you as Mack Sennett.

On the Tuesday after Jim agreed to drop his incitation to his own disbarment he had a number of us to lunch at the MOAC. He asked me what I suggested about Boxley. I suggested that he invite Boxley to return and sit down and talk with us. Boxley refused and that was it.

^{Boxley} He had a collaborator, Joel Palmer, who had just rented a house in New Orleans and was supposedly to write a book. He fled as soon as he learned of my report on the nonsense that he also was interested in, I don't know how or why. I mean fled! He was there one day and entirely gone the next.

The book abounds in things like these. That is why I suggest that you ask Wrono to xerox it for you. (One for me, too, please ask him. and I'll confirm that it is with my OK with a copy of this to him. Prof. history, Univ. Wisconsin, Stevens Point WI. Home is 1518 Blackberry Lane.

Garrison is even an unabashed literary thief. I close, at least + intend to close, with a story that may amuse you.

He had asked me to visit him in his den when he was preparing a speech he was to deliver in LA to a press-association convention. Jim really believed there had been a ^{big shot} Sado-masochist ring in his conspiracy and he had some of the strangest and ^{least} dependable people working on that until I broke it up. He also believed that Johnson was homosexual. Thus he was much taken with a line I think I recall accurately from page 9 of Photographic Whitewash. Understand, I don't mind his taking it. I think it is funny.

Only after he got to one word in it he broke up. He also could not remember my words, which surprised me, and he string it out and killed ^{the effect of} most of what he was intending to say. after he'd made a few fumbles and was a little ^{articulate} abashed - he is the most ^{strange} late of men - I asked him if he had the book, he said he'd not be without it, ^{he} handed it to me, and speaking, remember of suspicions that Johnson was involved in the assassination, I'd written, I read

"No matter how pure his motive, no matter how humble his gathering of fagots (if it is humble he is) they stoke a witch's cauldron and he is thought Macbeth."

Without a trace of blush or embarrassment, Jim said merely, "I thought I read it somewhere." But he still fluffed that line at that convention dinner!

Please accept my apologies for my typing and correcting. My vision also is impaired and I confabulate so I may not catch all the typos. I won't be able to get this in the mail now that there is none leaving Frederick Saturdays until Monday but I do hope it reaches you and that you do give this some thought. and that whatever you decide, it turns out to be the best.

Sincerely, Harold Weisberg

After writing this several things came to mind. One is that all of the opposition he imagined did nothing at all to impede him and had it tried it could not have begun to do him the harm he did to himself. He had nothing, he was onto nothing, and there was no need for the federal spookeries to try to do anything to him. Secretly, they did keep up with what he was saying. They did not and did not have to call in the witnesses to whom he spoke because they were witnesses to nothing at all.

Boxley, for example, was not a CIA plant. He was Garrison's creature, doing what he understood Garrison wanted him to do.

Essentially, you will be making a ^Mhead of a man who with a great opportunity was, save for the effectiveness of his mouth, a dismal failure. You will be misleading the country all over again and you will be making those inside the government who also failed look better, especially inside the government, because it will be easy, as I've seen in many FBI records, to pick and choose effective criticisms and then distribute them. See, they say, we were right, we did our jobs, and this criticism is baseless and false, as it is, and they attach proofs.

²There is a vast difference between whether or not there was a conspiracy, as without question there was, and who conspired. I think I've kept up with most if not all the published whodunit theories. Some have been made attractive but not a single one is supported by anything that can be called evidence and all are unproven. Can't be proven. Some of their authors, like Garrison, convince themselves and then, sincere believers, convince others. The one that got most attention is and was known to its author to be completely impossible. He is still profiting from it, still propagandizing it, and little could do more to bury truth deeper.

One of the reports that reached me, from the late Greg Stone and from others to whom he spoke, is that you sought to buy the rights to the late Sylvia Meagher's book. We all wondered why for the same reason, what need is there to buy the rights to what essentially is public domain. I think we all wondered whether this was only so you could trade on her name. There is another incongruity: she was the only leading critic to condemn Garrison as publicly and as often as she could. She even gave a defense contribution to a man he had charged. All those criticisms, if you intended using criticisms of Garrison, are public domain. I am not suggesting that this is the pressure that led Greg Stone to kill himself but as you probably know, he did.

This is a subject that is not going to die. It also is a subject that forever will be studied by people who care and by historians. All of us who in any way have had anything to do with it. Some named now glorified, will as they should be, thoroughly condemned. We are none of us Merlins, who can remember the future. but I think the future will condemn the major media, which failed at that time of great crises and ever since then, and it will also condemn those who did the dirty work of making errant government look persecuted and clean when the truth is the exact opposite. Baseless and unjustified criticism ^{inculcates} ~~creates~~ errant and guilty officials ^{dom.} ~~dom.~~

If he had not had grandiose illusions and ambitions, if he could have come close enough to earth to do what the Warren Commission did not do with its New Orleans witnesses, he could have put several in jail for ~~perjury~~^{perjury} because they did swear falsely to what was material. All he had to do was call them before his ~~only~~ grand jury, repeat the questions and answers, and then show the available truth, a fair amount of which I had developed. Oswald had quite a history there he never touched on. Might have broken case open this way.

In the Albuquerque story I forgot what may amuse you. He asked me to go to the airport with him. He was driven by his security, two detectives, Lynn Loisel and Steve Bardelon. The Garrisonian concept of security was for the two protectors drop us off while both of them parked the car. When Jim and I got to the ticket desk, the six-foot-six-inch most prominent man in the city, always on TV and page one, said to the clerk. "You have a ticket for me. My name is Robert Levy." (I think it became Anderson in Albuquerque.)

When the four of us walked to the gate, the two dicks told us to wait while they went into the plane, I assumed to see if everything looked OK, they were all so afraid he'd be hurt. (Which was the very last thing the spookeries wanted, what he was doing was that much in their interests) "OK, boss," they said as they came out. And as soon as Jim was in the plane and out of sight they had a good laugh, "We fixed the boss up good," Loisel told me. "We told the hostess who he is and he'll get two steaks."

I attach the first page of one of the FBI's reports on this. After I spoke to the FBI it was possible to reach Harv Morgan. He had no objection to his name being used and it was then turned over to Loisel to handle and I went about my own work and interests.

I like these two and Ivon and regretted the loads they had to carry and the paranoia.

On their difficulties and Jim's paranoia, he'd need^{ed} a hernia fixed for some time but with all the fine hospitals in New Orleans, he was actually afraid he'd be killed in any one of them. So, he searched around or had someone do that until a country clinic was located that could be emptied before he was admitted. He was the only patient when his hernia was fixed and he had these poor men guard him there around the clock, I think then a week or more.

If you should want to discuss any of this with me please do it so I can be in bed by six p.m. your time, as I should be. If you'd like, feel free to tape. 301/473-8186.
