

Notes on People

Socialist Workers Nominate Candidates

Mrs. Linda Jenness and Andrew Pulley were officially designated the Socialist Workers party candidates for President and Vice President in 1972. The party is convened in Cleveland.

Mrs. Jenness, who lives in Atlanta, is 30 years old, and Mr. Pulley, of Chicago, is 20. Neither meets the Constitutional requirement that candidates be at least 35.

That didn't seem to concern Mrs. Jenness, who said, "Let me assure you that if a majority of the people elect me as President, they will see I am put in office."

In the 1968 election, the Socialist Workers party slate drew 55,000 votes.

Emperor Hirohito met an old acquaintance when he showed up for the opening of the 23d Boy Scouts World Conference in Tokyo. He was Alexander Bain, now 57 years old, of Edinburgh, Scotland. When Hirohito visited Scotland in 1921, Mr. Bain was a mascot with a Cub Scout group, and he approached the Emperor and said, "Please convey, your Imperial Highness, our best wishes to the boys of Japan." Yesterday, Emperor Hirohito told him: "I remember very well my visit to Scotland, when I had the privilege of shaking your hand. You have quite grown up since then."

Not that he feels faint-hearted about his prospects, mind you, but Representative Paul N. McCloskey Jr. is already thinking about what he'll do just in case his bid for the Republican Presidential nomination is unsuccessful. In San Rafael, Calif., he said that if his drive failed, he'd seek re-election to the House.

The President and Mrs. Nixon will leave early next week on separate five-state tours. On Tuesday night, Mr. Nixon will be in New York City for a Knights of Columbus meeting. In the morning, he will go to Springfield, Ill., to designate the home of Abraham Lincoln a national historical site. After a campaign-style tour of the Illinois State Fairgrounds, he'll be go Idaho Falls, Idaho, then go by helicopter to the Grand Teton National Park in Wyoming, where he'll spend the night. On Thursday, it's Dallas, for a convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. From Texas, the President will go to the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif., where he will be joined by Mrs. Nixon after her own tour to promote his Legacy of Parks Program. They are expected in Washington about Sept. 3.

Sam Yorty, the peripatetic

Mayor of Los Angeles, was on another of his world-circling trips. In New Delhi he called on Mayor Jans Raj Gupta, who gave him the key to the city and a good-luck charm with the likeness of an elephant on it. Mr. Yorty, a Democrat who's been talking about seeking his party's Presidential nomination, thought that was funny. He was amused yesterday, too, on learning in Bangkok that the capital of Thailand had the same name as his own city—the City of Angels.

All summer long, Mrs. Rose Kennedy and other inhabitants of the Kennedy compound at Hyannis Port, Mass., had been annoyed by the blaring loudspeakers on boats taking tourists around Hyannis harbor. A lawyer for Mrs. Kennedy last week filed a complaint with the selectmen of Barnstable, who heard testimony from a Secret Service agent, who said that one tour guide went so far as to broadcast vivid descriptions of the assassinations of Mrs. Kennedy's sons, John F. and Robert F. Kennedy. That was enough for the selectmen, who have secured an agreement from the operators of two concerns that conduct the boat tours to turn off their loudspeakers when their boats pass the Kennedy compound.

For many years, one of the best-known barbers in Washington was Steve E. Martini, the professional name of Stephen J. Egiziano, who numbered among his customers Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon. Eventually he went into business for himself, and he now operates several barber shops in Washington. According to papers filed in the United States District Court in Baltimore, he is accused of having clipped the Government by failing to file $32,935 in income taxes and Social Security withheld from his employees.

ALBIN KREBS.