

Correction

A story that appeared in Wednesday's editions of The Washington Post incorrectly stated that the Internal Revenue Service has ruled that the Howard Hughes Medical Institute is a public charity rather than a private foundation. The IRS recently issued regulations covering medical research foundations in general, according to IRS spokesman Leon Levine. The IRS has not issued a ruling on whether the Hughes institute is such a foundation, he said. The Post regrets the error.