Dear Art,

By now, I hope, you've had your vacaction end are the traditional and proverbial new man, praferably the old one, restored.

While you were livin' it up, I got an idea for another book and almost had it excepted by a major paperback house. They like the idea but fear its initial sale might not be profitable without first having the attention a successful hardback can get. My proposal included an assigned editor who might do some of the writing, if necessary, that I would give them a rough draft in two weeks and get back on the work that is more important to me. As of this minute I den't think I'll take the time to dicker with the houses they recommended and worry about another I'll have an editor with when there'd be report, an essential with a book of the kind I have in mind.

It would deel with bombing and terrorism, on which, as you may recall, I have much, for you've seen a small part of it. I've also had experience with this over the years, was investigating it before I was old enough to vote, and knew semm of the seeple involved in those days, as I have since, with other groups.

In this connection, for I may yet do the book and could do a rough in two weeks, I am interested in something on which I did not keep what material I had, giving it to Jim. That is the Marix case out that where I am not certain of the name. Is it "Erciaga", the outfit that got caught in illegal munitions manufacturing? I'd appreciate anything on this outfit and the subject generally.

I have written Steve Burton, who had an interest in this at one time. I asked him for copies of what he might have. And I suggested that if he could not get this material copied possibly you might be able to arrange it.

Skelmick seems reluctant to let others see the papers the government filed in response to his. If he'll let you have these, I'd appreciate copies, for we will have to protect against all this great foolishness and I am about to file a series of other suits. They are drafted and are being read by others.

I have a deal cooking with a small published to do an addited version of COUP, restricted to the King/ May stuff. The editing was to have been completed nine days ago. New data is two weeks from today. I'll have to ratitle, that one having twice been copped...Wish you could spend an evening together, so I could blow your mind with what I've done that is partly not in writing on this case. It is the impossible, which keaves still two more impossibilities to be accomplished if the entire thing is to be successful.

Thanks and best regards,
