In Formosa, book piracy is lt legal, since China has not r joined the universal copyright convention.

Major book pirates believe they should stick to textbooks and stay away from nonfiction.

A reproduced textbook has an assured sale of from 500 to 3,000 copies a year while even a pirated best-selling novel seldom goes over 200.

The book pirating business started more than 20 years ago on the China mainland.

Pirates became internationally prominent almost overnight in 1960 when two of them reproduced the 12-volume Encyclopedia Britannica in large quantity.

A set sold for $45 as against the average price of $350 for the originals in the United States. A total of 3,000 sets were printed and at least 1,000 of them found their way to the United States and other countries.

An estimated 4,500 to 5,000 titles, nearly all Englishlanguage books first published in the United States, have been reproduced without authorization in Taipei in the last decade.
