Ex-Official Calls Int iment of fully and humanely conducted." Mr. McCloy, one of the key Govern-"reasonably undertaken and thought-Japanese-Americans in World War II as War, today defended the internment of McCloy, former Assistant Secretary of WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 - John J.

heritage. tion program, said he might again supment officials who oversaw the reloca-States citizens because of their national port the wartime resettlement of United rooted from their homes on the West tled to compensation. East and Middle West in 1942 were enti-Coast and relocated in camps in the year to determine whether the 120,000 which was charted by Congress last fied before the Commission on Wartime Japanese-Americans Relocation and Internment of Civilians, The 87-year-old retired diplomat testiwho were F of Japanese-Americans seated in the the civilians relocated under the prothat no financial reparation was owed Senate caucus room, Mr. McCloy said To the sometimes vocal disagreement ute the damages." now, 40 years after the act, to redistriblives," he said. "It isn't feasible for us The war "caused disruption in all our engage in subversive activities. said that Japanese-Americans were one-time president of the World Bank, Government officials feared they might placed in internment camps because

Philippines." resulted in their finding a healthier and tration of the Japanese population and they would have had on the West Coast more advantageous environment than its redistribution throughout the country the reports of Japanese atrocities in the following the Pearl Harbor attack and In retrospect, he said, "The deconcen-in the internment camps as "very pleasments were punctuated with hisses. smoothly. When he described conditions ant," many in the audience responded At other points, Mr. McCloy's comwith a long burst of sarcastic laughter. Mr. McCloy's testimony did not go

Mr. McCloy, a Wall Street lawyer and in a sharp exchange with William M. ne-time president of the World Bank, Marutani, a commission member who is a Court of Common Pleas judge in Penn-sylvania. Mr. Marutani was lived in a relocation camp for six months in World War II.

were not "unduly subjected to the distress of the war." Mr. McCloy that Japanese-Americans The judge challenged a statement by country while their parents, voice had risen to a shout. Americans, Mr. McCloy, fought for this and sisters were incarcerated?" His Asked Mr. Marutani: "What other brothers

'incarcerated,' "Mr. McCloy replied. don't like Mord

In the hearing, Mr. McCloy engaged | inquiry to Congress next year, not to add "Well, all right, behind barbed wire fences," Mr. Marutani snapped.

Mr. McCloy cautioned the commission, which is to report the findings of its vocate policies that might someday prebackground vent the forcible relocation of other American citizens because of ethnic

Germany, chairman of the Chase Man-Council on Foreign Relations hattan Bank, board chairman of the United States High Commissioner in Ford Foundation and chairman of the After World War II, he served as the ing on the internment of Japanese-John J. McCloy yesterday at hear-Americans in World War II.