

results, at least in this volume, is a thoughtful, thorough examination of the New England region, with hardly a tinge of academic prose.

Parties and Party Systems: A Framework for Analysis. Giovanni Sartori. Cambridge, $32.50/10.95.

Policy Analysts in the Bureaucracy. Arnold J. Meltsner. California, $10.00.

Power and the Presidency: The Men, the Policies, and the Office. Philip C. Dolce, George H. Skau. Scribners, $12.50.

Presidential Power and the Constitution. Edward S. Corwin. Cornell, $13.50.

Prognosis Negative: Crisis in the Health Care System. Health/PAC, David Kotelchuck, eds. Vintage, $2.95. Thomas Carlyle had the line on this book. "I grow daily to honor facts more and more, and theory less and less," he wrote 140 years ago. It is the facts which stand out in this collection of articles; the most memorable is a small newspaper clipping about a 70-year-old man who robbed a bank 45 minutes after the George Washington University hospital turned him away for lack of funds. The fact is overlaid, almost casually, by a neo-Marxist ideology, which is pronounced rather than proved. (For example, a thorough and cynical examination of the much-vaunted Kaiser Permanente Health Maintenance Organization ends on this out-of-the-blue note: "Ultimately health care will be delivered full force into the age of corporate capitalism.") The authors are skeptical about nearly every proposal for national health insurance, arguing that all are public subsidies of a wasteful private system. The only answer, they say, is a system wholly controlled by the public—the complications of which they discuss not at all.

The Rape of our Neighborhoods. William Worthy. Morrow, $8.95.

Society, Freedom, and Conscience: The Coming Revolution in Virginia, Massachusetts, and New York. Jack P. Greene, Richard L. Bushman, Michael Kammen, eds. Norton, $9.95.

Squeaking By: U. S. Energy Policy Since the Embargo. Richard B. Mancke. Columbia, $8.95.

Unchosen Presidents: The Vice President and Other Frustrations of Presidential Succession. Allan P. Sindler. California, $5.95.

The Unseen Revolution: How Pension Socialism Came to America. Peter F. Drucker. Harper and Row, $8.95.

"The first plausible motive... for the killing of John F. Kennedy..." —Playboy

Robert D. Morrow was a contract employee of the CIA in the late 50s and early 60s. This story of his work for that agency reveals for the first time the motive for Kennedy's assassination and the identity of the elements responsible for it. "His minute-by-minute description of the Dallas crime, his naming of names, his explicit behind-the-scenes disclosures, his story of Jack Ruby's key role in the assassination—these answer many questions for the first time, and set the stage for a real in-depth investigation."

—Publishers Weekly

At bookstores everywhere • $8.95

HENRY Regnery COMPANY
Chicago, Illinois 60601

