The upshot of this is really a lot of thinking and planning for you. I can assure you that Nagell trusts your organization to do the right thing above almost any on the face of the earth, judging by his statements and orientation. He wants prompt action to bring matters to a head. I estimate that if the engines of justice are fueled greased and oiled they will begin to run smoothly in this instance. As I see it an American astronaut was forced to crash land in a Texas field. Though he was not physically hurt nor did he hurt anyone, we still should have seen all available fireman, doctors and hospitals placed at his disposal. As the news spread, citizens ~~were~~ citizens ~~were~~ ~~were~~ newsmen and politicians should have engulfed him, all with a smile and eager to help. Instead, the incident was coraled by a breed of individual intent on covering there own professional incompetence. The landing was branded as trespassing. Parts of the spacecraft showing markings useful in a legal defense were carted away and no receipt rendered. After beatings and a lengthy wait of many months a Kangaroo court was called. In the mean time a grievous national accident had occurred simply because engineers were not advised of the true significance of the first crash, or ignored explanations they did receive.
