"WHEN DO WE EAT?"

-- NEW 'AMERICA FIRST' PROPAGANDA LINE

OUR EDITORIAL

Our editorial, as the war enters its fifth year, is the photograph above.

These three soldiers — a Chinese, a white man, a Negro — fight side by side in a unit of the Dutch Army, one of America's Allies.

They symbolize the spirit of the United Nations which spells the doom of Nazism, and of tyranny and prejudice wherever they may seek to hide. And they symbolize the hope of the common people of this world that from their suffering will grow a peace made permanent by freedom, cooperation and firm respect for human rights.

McWilliams' Friends Find Comfortable Berths

Several of Joe McWilliams' old associates, from the days of his would-be Fuehrership in Yorkville, have come up for attention this month. McWilliams' new effort to appeal to the veterans of the present war probably suffered some set-back when his financial "angel," Mrs. Alice de Tarnowski, publisher-backer of his "Post-War Bulletin," achieved unenviable tabloid notoriety. Meanwhile, we present below the much more alarming doings of three of his old New York co-workers.

(ONE)

McNAZI'S PALS GUARD NEW YORK SUBWAY LINES

Americus Tirelli, anti-semitic agitator, and Mike Crowe, former body-guard of Joe McWilliams, hold key jobs in New York City's subway system. The Anti-Nazi League's Department of Investigation has discovered that Tirelli is a car maintainer and Crowe a maintainer's helper in Group Epat the Independent Subway shops at 207th Street and 10th Avenue, Manhattan. Staunch supporters of Christian Front and Christian Mobilizers, their names appeared on throw-aways with the Yorkville Fuehrer's before McWilliams' celebrated exodus to Chicago.

The pupils seem to have learned their teacher's lessons well. Both are active Nazi-like, anti-semitic agitators in their present civil service jobs. Crowe's pet current slogan is: "They're gone to lick the Jews; they'll be back to finish the Jews." Tirelli has openly threatened to run his automobile over and anyone who looks Jewish, and has already attempted to run down

JOE'S CHARACTER WITNESS INSPECTS PLANE PARTS

Guy Juenemann, another old co-worker of Joe McWilliams, has been discovered by the Anti-Nazi League in a responsible civil service job in a vital war industry. Juenemann is now employed by the United States Army Air Forces as a civilian inspector of airplane precision instruments at the Kollsman Instrument Division of the Square Deal Company at 80-08 45th Avenue, Elmhurst, Queens.

Juenemann's first recorded contribution to the all-out defense of American democracy was on July 1, 1940, when he testified in Yorkville Magistrate's Court on behalf of Joe McWilliams, then leader of the American Destiny Party and National Commander of the Christian Mobilizers. Juenemann then and later was an active member of the Midtown Sporting Club, a group of Nazi sympathizers headed by James Banahan, alias Hermann Schmidt, which held rifle drills at Donovan's Hall at 310 West 59th Street.

ISOLATIONIST BLOC BUILDS FAMINE SCARE

FAMINE IN AMERICA appears to be the latest straw-man fabricated by appeasers, isolationists, "negotiated peace" advocates and Munich-minded politicians, who appear to be joining forces to discredit Lend-Lease and to sabotage efforts of government agencies responsible for food production and distribution.

As evidence of this widespread propaganda, the Anti-Nazi League presents, on page three, samples of material printed by the Chicago Tribune, the New York Daily News, Joseph P. Kamp, Gerald L. K. Smith, Frank Gannett, and others. Even the August Reader's Digest seems to have

'BACK TO MUNICH' IN 1944?

Current back-room conversation among isolationists, appeasers, "America Firsters," "negotiated peace" advocates and Axis propagandists, both conscious and unconscious, centers around the identity of the isolationist standard-bearer in the 1944 presidential election.

Favored entries to date in the "Back-to-Munich" sweepstakes are Colonel Robert R. McCormick, Chicago Tribune publisher-Senator, Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, Charles A. Lindbergh and Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota.

A boom for Colonel McCormick has already taken—substantial strides. Editorially endorsed by Gerald Smith's Cross and the Flag, and favorably mentioned in William Griffin's New York Enquirer, McCormick is easily the early leader amongst the extreme isolationist fringe. Edward James Smythe, under indictment for sedition and out on bail, is distributing a leaflet for the "Republican Nationalist Party," endorsing McCormick for President and Senator Wheeler for Vice-President in 1944. Although Wheeler promptly repudiated Smythe's endorsement, it is significant that his name continues to occupy the runner-up position.

McCormick Coy, on the other hand, maintains a lofty distance from the grubby details of practical politics, and has thus far denied interest in any move on his behalf. The Anti-Nazi League, however, is now able to produce evidence which indicates that the Colonel is probably not unaware of the opening moves in support of his candidacy.

Roger Faherty, author of the letter reproduced on another page, is no political lightweight, having had the endorsement of the Chicago Tribune and of Illinois' isolationist Senator "Curly" Brooks as candidate for Mayor of Chicago last Spring. Faherty's letter, with enclosures (including a reprint from a well-known "confidential" news letter issued in Chicago), went to every delegate to the Republican National Convention of 1940, and therefore to most of the influential Republican leaders throughout the country. Anyone familiar with the rules of politics will realize at once that a strategist of Faherty's experience would not write such a letter, except after planning and consultation.

A Chicago meeting on July 1 of the Republican Nationalist Revival Committee, headed by isolationist William J. Grace, unanimously requested Col. McCormick to enter the Illinois Republican presidential primaries against Wendell Wilkie. The Committee, addressed by Representative Paul Shafer of Michigan on "post-war Peace Idealism," declared that Mr. Wilkie "personifies internationalism," and Col. McCormick "the American nationalist viewpoint."

Hitler's Radio Plans Revealed

August news from Washington brings radio and motion pictures on to the front pages, with the questions asked: "How much caution is necessary in war time? How closely should we watch the radio commentator? How much benefit of the doubt can we give?"

The best answer is found in our enemies' own plans for the wartime use of these media. The League therefore takes this occasion to make public an enemy document of the greatest importance which has reposed in our files for some time, and of which copies were earlier made available to the proper Federal authorities.

This document, authored by Propaganda Minister Goebbels, considerably before the war began, is nothing less than a complete memorandum of instruction to Nazi agents as to how the press, radio and motion pictures were to be used for propagandizing America and other nations unfriendly to the Reich.

We believe that publication of the following excerpts from Herr Goebbels' plans (English translation by our staff) may help Americans in evaluating the many conflicting views which have lately filled the press:

submitted for the moment, to the blandishments of this propaganda which tends to distort the inevitable stress of war into an utterly false threat of starvation in the United States itself.

See page 3 for typical examples of this propaganda.

First to adopt this new line of attack on American morale was Gerald L. K. Smith, self-appointed leader and organizer of the "America First" Party. Smith by the use of slogans such as "Butter for Americans First," and "Meat for Americans First," seeks to direct a subtle attack on lend-lease operations and on our obligations to our fighting allies.

Kamp's "Famine" Probably the most elaborate assault is delivered by Joseph P. Kamp, whose Constitutional Educational League is mentioned in the Federal edition indictments still pending in Washington. In his expensively-printed pamphlet, FAMINE IN AMERICA, Kamp predicts not only a famine but food rioting in the streets of American cities. Mr. Kamp assembles quotations and fragments from responsible and irresponsible sources. Typical is the statement attributed to Representative Sumner of Illinois, whose Congressional record of opposition to all important pre-Pearl Harbor preparedness measures is unmarred even by an absence. Miss Sumner is quoted as saying, "I have been informed by the president of a canning organization that we may expect food riots in this country within the next twelve months."

Gannett Sees "Crisis" Frank Gannett, the well-known Rochester "farmer" and politician-publisher, joins the parade with a telegram sent by mail to leading members of Congress declaring that "Disaster is now here." Mr. Gannett is trying to organize a national convention to consider the "food crisis." The real object of his propaganda appears to be an attack on subsidies as an incentive to increased food production. Its statements and implications, however, go far beyond legitimate war-time limits for argument on domestic economic questions.

The relationship between this attempted "famine" scare and the movement for a "soft" peace among back-to-business-as-usual, Munich-minded publishers and politicians, is clearly implied in the Chicago Tribune's August (Continued on page 2) wherever such an organization does not exist, a so-called radio hour. For this purpose the central office has appropriated special funds.

"It is understood that this German radio hour should be used for purposes of foreign political propaganda as well. But this has to be done in a very cautious manner, so that one should not violate the rules and regulations of the countries involved.

"The official German representatives (in foreign countries) are to be supplied with sufficient material for this radio propaganda to be used by their confidantes and agents. This material would include lectures, radio plays, original manuscripts and records, etc.

"Very soon there will be ready a sample series of lectures for such radio hours, which have to be adapted, of course, to the respective circumstances and possibilities (of the countries in which they are to be heard.)

"These radio hours are to be organized in such a way that they are not meant solely for German listeners, but have to include offerings in the language of the country and have to consider the musical and vocal taste of the native population.

"It should be tried, beyond the framework of this German radio hour, to supply the owners who are conducting stations with other material, whereby the object of reaching the native radio listeners would be achieved within the framework of the general program. (One should try, beyond the boundaries of the German Radio Hour, to supply stations with material, thus reaching the native listeners.)

This has been done recently, during a stay in Germany of Mr. Jan Kielewicz, who is the owner of a group of radio stations in Argentina. Plenty of very valuable material has been made available for transmission, and this method will be followed in regard to other important foreign radio authorities.

FILM PROPAGANDA

"The German film propaganda shall also play a much greater role than until now in foreign countries. For this purpose, it is necessary that the German Kultur Films be made for disposal at low prices, and even without cost, if necessary. Besides that, several propaganda films are now being prepared which must under all circumstances be shown abroad, even at a sacrifice.

"As with the radio, so also with the film propaganda, tourist and kultur propaganda will be a great help. As for the radio and the films special propaganda is prepared, so kultur propaganda can be printed for tourists.

The Germans made successful inroads by carrying out these instructions, as was witnessed by such films as "Sieg Im Westen" and "Krieg Im Westen." Their German language broadcasts heard over so-called "foreign language" stations in the United States were eminently effective too. We must be on guard against any relaxation in the constant watch which our Government is maintaining in these fields.

HITLER'S LEGION OF MISTRESSES

By DOROTHY WARING

Hitler is on the spot—a very hot spot indeed. It is to be expected that like any other gangster, he will turn the heat on his confederates in other countries. He needs information for his submarine commander—his saboteurs must seek new factories to destroy and more lives must be taken to balance his defeats. Hitler's spies must work faster, more accurately than ever before.

Unfortunately, the Average American does not take espionage as seriously as do the people of Continental Europe. We cannot conceive that the wife of a jovial delicatessen dealer on the corner might be a spy, or that the trim little waitress in the restaurant who serves our morning coffee and hovers solicitously over the table might be trained to gather scraps of information, as a bird dog is taught to bring its prey to its master. Nor does it ever occur to a hotel guest that the neat, middle-aged maid who brings in the linen and says "Good morning" with but the slightest trace of accent might be one of the legion of women who has, for years, undergone specialized training in Germany before being sent to the United States as an espionage agent.

Espionage, according to this standard, is not what it used to be. The romantic era of the beautiful dancer—the Mata Hari counterpart—the beguiling courtesan as played by Marthe Eggert, is past for Germany. The professional spies of today are sober, highly-schooled experts in espionage technique, more interested in the weakness of the nation in which they are working than in its military secrets.

HITLER VALUES WOMEN AGENTS

Often heard in Germany, but seldom quoted abroad, is Adolf Hitler's affectionate reference to the hundreds of women agents working day and night around the world in the interest of the Third Reich: "My Legion of Mistresses," says Adolf, "is more valuable to me than a Panzer Division." Hitler knows whereof he speaks.

There are numerous institutions in Germany where this Legion of Mistresses has been trained. Berlin, Dessau, Altona, Nuremberg, Munich, and even Budapest boast their spy schools, but it is from Schwanebeck, near Berlin, that the least attractive, most resourceful, intelligent and cunning agents are turned out. Schwanebeck is the hush-hush school of espionage, conducted by Martin Bormann and Theodore Habicht, but conceived by Frau Gertrude Schmitz Klink, who is the Reich's Women's Leader. She controls the life of every woman in Nazi Germany and many of those in Nazi-occupied countries.

FAREWELL TO GLAMOUR

It was Frau Klink who contrived a new twist to the spy racket. In her sharp, fox-like mind there was no longer place in espionage for the obvious glamour girl—the easily spotted "woman of mystery", and so she conceived the idea of camouflaging the woman spy by selecting only the ordinary, commonplace, everyday woman who would go unnoticed in the territory to which she is assigned.

And so the Schwanebeck graduates became the commanders of Hitler's Legion of Mistresses, but not before they underwent the strictest scrutiny and investigation. Frau Klink's Frauenschaft elite corps toured all chapters of the League for German Girls to which all female minors must belong. From this corps the most promising girls were picked, then tested for aptitude and fidelity to the Reich. As these girls had been under the Nazis' rules and regimentation since they were infants, naturally their devotion to Hitler was nothing short of fanatical.

The future elite spies of Schwanebeck led an unromantic life of self-effacement and hard work. The most talented girls were trained for special work and made to study history, race biology, mass psychology, strike tactics, espionage methods, character and customs of enemy nations. They studied languages with foreigners who worked for the Nazis. If they were being trained for the United States they learned to make buckwheat cakes and pumpkin pies in case they might have to become servants.

One-hundred-fifty members of this corps were the first invaders of Holland and Belgium. As yet it has not been determined how many have invaded America but we have classic instances of a few of them in the recently arrested Grace Buchanan-Dineen, schooled in Berlin, "Mamma" Leonhardt, founder of the Detroit Bund and mother of a purported graduate of Schwanebeck, and Theresa Behrens, schooled in Hungary. Nor should Lily Stein (now serving twelve to eighteen years for spying), Lucy Boemler and Helen Mayer be forgotten, for though young in years these espionage agents were old in the ways of the Gestapo when they were arrested.

HOW NAZI "IDEALS" ARE SPREAD

Though Hitler's Legion of Mistresses may not be overwhelming in its numerical strength, nor confine itself wholly to spying activities, certainly its "advance women" have done a capable job of diffusing the Reich's ideals among many German-born youngsters in this country. At a review in one of the German-American Bund camps, shortly before Pearl Harbor, a high-minded Nazi lady asked a group of youngsters: "And what is your duty to the Fatherland?" To which one young girl replied, "To bear true faith and allegiance to my Fuehrer and to be the mother of children for the Third Reich." Such a reply is distressingly reminiscent of the kind a member of the League for German Girls might give.

Though three thousand miles away from the Reich, these youngsters possessed a keener devotion to the principles of Hitler than many of our American girls might have had for Uncle Sam under similar circumstances. Perhaps it was such idolatry which gave Walter Kappe, Bund leader and German agent in the U. S. A., the idea of opening a school for spies in Philadelphia, which the FBI successfully quashed.

LEGION WORKS EVERYWHERE

While the eyes of the world are focused on the glittering military might of the various countries engaged in battle, Hitler's Legion of Mistresses goes quietly about its appointed tasks, gathering every conceivable type of information which may be of some benefit to the Reich. It is doubtful if any one of these women has been trained for industrial sabotage as their value does not run in that direction. The majority of these shrewd, cunning women are at work in or around factories, machine shops, munition plants or shipyards, while many of them ply their nefarious trade in bars, restaurants, hotels—even department stores, the places where they are most apt to come into contact with people who are engaged in war industries.

A typical trick of the well-trained enemy agent of this particular clique is to work in collaboration with someone far more attractive than she is, to divert the attention of the counter-espionage, while the real operative, uncomely, graceless and homely, goes about the really important work unnoticed.

Francis Biddle, Attorney General of the United States, J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and many lesser officers of our government warn that our victory depends on the vigilance of the American people. It is the duty of every American to report suspicious characters to the FBI, even though she (or he) may have been in your employ or trust for a number of years. By so doing you may well prevent Hitler's Legion of Mistresses from becoming his legion of death.

"WHEN DO WE EAT"

31 editorial. In this attack on Lend-Lease aid to our Allies, Colonel McCormick's newspaper, after raising a food-shortage scare, goes on to declare:

"It is common knowledge that warehouses in America are bulging with munitions and armaments of all kinds. The American manufacturers who produce these articles to meet the demands of war have served their country well. They want to return now to the manufacture of consumer goods, for which there is a great demand and for which all the raw materials are now available.

"Congress must also open up the manufacture of consumer goods here. There will be resistance to the idea from the Washington crackpots. . . ."

Thus Colonel McCormick dismisses total war as something tossed off in American industry's spare time, and labels as "Washington crackpots" all who believe that war for American freedom should be waged with ALL our strength and resources until absolute and total victory assures our security.

From the Bulletin of the National City Bank of New York, dated August, 1943.

THE FARM OUTLOOK

Crop prospects have shown steady improvement over the past two months, and present indications are for a good harvest. . . .

The Anti-Nazi League makes no attempt to deliver final judgment on American food problems, or to analyze and assess the various methods proposed by the Administration, its friends and enemies, to deal with this tremendous phase of the war effort. The League's sole interest is to point out and denounce those who would distort and magnify these admittedly great problems to a point where military and civilian confidence in the American government may be broken down at a crucial point in time of war. The League believes that the American people are prepared to make sacrifices in these matters, and to make sacrifices much greater than they have so far been called upon, or are likely to be asked, to make.

"No Burden"—Hoover

It is significant that former President Herbert Hoover, an admitted authority on food matters and considered by many to be sympathetic to the McCormick-Gannett point of view, recently published an article in Collier's magazine, entitled "Feed the Starving Now," in which he argued that it was practicable for America to extend immediate and substantial aid to all of the starving populations of occupied Europe. Such procedure "will not be burdensome to American taxpayers," Mr. Hoover argued in the course of his article. As to the motives of those who raise this "famine" cry, the League calls attention to the statement of West Virginia's Senator Kilgore, printed in the New York Journal of Commerce on August 20. Senator Kilgore charges that "the divisive, selfish forces of the nation have sought to render ineffectual every effort the government has made" to meet the problem of increased food production. "They have," the Senator continues, "on the one hand shouted 'regimentation' when necessary restrictive controls were invoked, and on the other hand have screamed that nothing is being done when controls have been relaxed." Concerning the "food conference" which Frank Gannett has been attempting to call, thus far without success, Senator Kilgore says: "There will be no constructive practical suggestions. There will be much destructive and derisive criticism. Our government will, if possible, be torn asunder on these platforms and our Allies will be the butt of demagogic charges."

As a final answer to the Smith, Kamp, Gannett, McCormick, Pat-

Report of United States Department of Agriculture, quoted in New York Journal of Commerce, August 2.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Total food production for the United States in 1943 will top last year's record output by some 4 per cent, the Department of Agriculture reported today.

erson combine, in the stridency and volume of whose utterances can be detected no present note of malnutrition, the League cites the quarterly Lend-Lease report to Congress by President Roosevelt. The President traces current domestic food shortages to increased consumption by the armed forces and civilians, and states that they are not due to any appreciable extent to Lend-Lease shipments abroad. "Members of our armed forces," the President said, "are eating more than they did as civilians. . . . Many Americans who are not in uniform are also eating more than they have ever eaten before." Mr. Roosevelt attributes increased civilian consumption in part to increased consumer income, and in part to the "diversion of purchasing power to food from other articles that can no longer be purchased."

Finally, the President announces appropriation of American food production for the current fiscal year as follows:

- 75 per cent to civilians at home
- 13 per cent to American armed forces
- 10 per cent to Lend-Lease
- 2 per cent to U. S. territories and special purposes.

The Anti-Nazi League does not believe that any substantial group of Americans will quarrel with this distribution of our great resources in the common cause.

COPIES BE SENT TO ALL MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

The food crisis is no real, no serious, that those who have specific knowledge of it cannot be silent.

Last September I saw the food crisis coming. In November on a broadcast I warned: "Unless our farm policy is changed, we face disaster." Disaster is now here.

The three-day food conference in New York, which has just closed, furnished abundant evidence that we face a alarming food shortage, as I predicted. There simply will not be enough to feed our own citizens, our allies, the people whom we may rescue from Nazi rule, and our own people at home.

LEND-LEASE HOARDING.
 Congressman Robert F. Jones of Ohio obtained a report from Edward R. Stettinius, lend-lease administrator, showing that this bureau of international largess has piled up 2,800,000 tons of goods, including 1,204,848 tons of food, for shipment to Great Britain, Russia, and presumably a little of it to China.

While this New Deal bureau hoards our food and our goods to give it away to other nations, Americans are going hungry and doing without vital consumer goods.

Americans are deprived of food in order that the international banker, Lehman, and Stettinius, the son of a Morgan partner, may be established in world trade.

When congress returns to Washington, one of its first acts should be to insist upon the dismissal of Herbert Lehman, the former Democratic governor of New York who is now the bureaucratic administrator charged with feeding Europe whether we eat or not.

A Preview of the New 1943 Autumn Fashions for American Appeasers, Isolationists and "Negotiated Peace" Advocates

THE NEW "FAMINE" PROPAGANDA LINE combines a vicious attack on our government with a clever undermining of the whole war purposes of the United Nations. "Americans are going hungry," cries the CHICAGO TRIBUNE, typical exponent of this new attack on our fighting unity, while the government takes our food "to give it away to other nations."

At (1) above, appears a 52-page pamphlet on heavy paper with a two-color cover job, issued in huge quantities by Joseph P. Kamp's "Constitutional Educational League," an organization mentioned in the recent Federal Grand Jury indictments naming Viereck, Felley and other alleged seditionists as defendants.

(2) is the front cover of Gerald L. K. Smith's CROSS AND THE FLAG (publication mentioned in the 1942 sedition indictments), which seems to get the honor of having fired the first journalistic shot in the "famine" campaign. Frank Gannett, isolationist politician-publisher who has been trying to get up a national conference on "the food crisis" likes headlines such as that from his Rochester TIMES UNION, seen at (3) above.

(4) is a typical excerpt from a Gannett news release recently sent to leading members of Congress and to the press.

Items (5) and (6) show how Col. McCormick's CHICAGO TRIBUNE has come loyally to the support of Messrs. Kamp, Smith and Gannett, while the isolationist New York DAILY NEWS does its part through cartoons partly visible at (7) and (8).

THE GAELIC AMERICAN headline (9), shows how the Coughlinite press develops this same motif, while (10) is an excerpt from Frank Barke's GREEN MOUNTAIN-EER, one of the mimeographed "Gib-Nard" sheets published ever since pre-Pearl Harbor days.

Even the READER'S DIGEST seems to have succumbed to the same idea - temporarily, we trust - judging from the titles of the two lead articles in their August 1943 issue (11).

A thought commonly combined with the "Famine Scare" is dramatically illustrated in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE editorial at (6), blaming the "famine" upon Lend-Lease and help to our Allies, particularly Great Britain and Russia.

"Butter for Americans First" was one of the slogans displayed on posters carried in a Convention Hall parade at the recent organization meeting of the "America First" Party. See portion of their own news release on this, at (12). The same approach ("Feed the World and Starve America?") is featured in Gerald L. K. Smith's August CROSS AND THE FLAG, in an article attacking Governor Lehman's Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation. See (13).

Thus the cry of "Famine!" is conjured up to replace the exploded isolationist propaganda of 1942.

League Officials At Cox Probe

Professor James H. Sheldon, Administrative Chairman of the Anti-Nazi League testified on August 19 before the Select Congressional Committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission, popularly known as the Cox Committee, at hearings in the Federal Courthouse in New York City. In answer to the Committee's subpoena, information was offered regarding the League's origins, aims and methods.

Mr. Sheldon, under questioning by Eugene L. Garry of New York, Committee Counsel, stated that the League maintains a small staff of investigators to check charges or indications of disloyal conduct, and that when these investigations prove fruitful, the persons investigated are usually reported to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or the Foreign Funds Control Unit of the Treasury. Data from the League's files, he added, has been supplied on request to the investigating branches of the Army, Navy, and Coast Guard, to various municipal authorities, the U. S. Secret Service, the FCC and the Office of War Information.

With regard to one of the League's investigators, whose name had been brought briefly before the Committee, Mr. Sheldon emphasized the necessity of giving the utmost possible protection to men and women on whose work our security in part depends. It was pointed out that a Cox Committee employee, calling at the League's offices and asking for the investigator in question, refused to give his name or show his credentials. Under such circumstances the League could give him no assistance, although it, of course, offers the Cox Committee the same cooperation extended to other government agencies.

Dr. de Hofmannsthal, a member of the Academie Diplomatique Internationale and a leading member of the former Austrian bar, is an authority on legal problems affecting the status of refugees. He has made a careful and scholarly survey of the questions involved in working to secure some reparation for Axis outrages perpetrated against helpless individuals.

His pamphlet provides a good starting point for anyone who is at all interested in these complex and urgently important problems, concerning the care of our millions of allies who have been driven from their homes and made to bear the brunt of the war's suffering.

Send in the coupon to reserve your copy. It will be sent you as soon as it comes from the press.

EDWARD JAMES SMYTHE
Political Director

FOR PRESIDENT - 1944

Col. ROBERT R. McCORMACK from Illinois

No introduction is necessary in the proposed candidate for the high office of Vice-President. He has long been a member of the United States Senate. His record in the upper house of Congress is well known to every household. His sterling reputation has been born in the side of every Alan Minded Communist and New Dealer. We, the REPUBLICAN NATIONALIST PARTY, present to you on behalf of millions of PATRIOTIC AMERICANS, A PROGRESSIVE JEFFERSONIAN DEMOCRATIC believer in AMERICA... FOR AMERICANS FIRST AND ALWAYS... FOR VICE-PRESIDENT - 1944

Hon. BURTON K. WHEELER United States Senator from Montana.

Party" (slogan: "Butter and meat for Americans first") has become something more than a joke, and has established branches in a number of leading Middle-Western cities. So much activity in this section of the country bears out predictions made in the April Anti-Nazi Bulletin as to the establishment of a kind of isolationist "cartel" in Chicago for the purpose of either running an outright "Back to Munich" man for President on the ticket of one of the national parties in 1944, or, failing probable success in either Party convention, organizing a sufficient third party movement to be able to blackmail one of the major parties into accepting an isolationist standard-bearer.

The outcome of the battle which is beginning to take form around these issues, will be one of the most important events of the war.

Army Calls Schroeder

Mr. Gerhard Schroeder, on September 4, 1943, will become the eighth member of the League's administrative family to enter the Armed Forces of the United States.

Mr. Schroeder was secretary of a major anti-Nazi organization in Central Europe from the rise of Hitler until 1937, when he came to America to join the staff of the League in New York, under the late Samuel Untermyer. For the past several years, he has been secretary of the League's New York Council of Organizations, and in charge of the Organization Department of the National office.

Our members know him as the man primarily responsible for arranging and stage-managing the annual conferences of the Council of Organizations and the League's National Conventions.

During Mr. Schroeder's connection, affiliations with the League have multiplied, from year to year, until the latest count shows in excess of 2200 different civic, labor, fraternal, business, trade, and patriotic societies actively participating in our work and eligible for representation in League Conventions.

GERHARD SCHROEDER

Mr. Schroeder is regarded as an authority on Nazi propaganda and political methods.

The best wishes of the League go with him as he puts on uniform to continue the good battle in which he has already been so long and effectively engaged.

NEWS BRIEFS--

As a suitable symbol for a McCormick-Wheeler Third Party, we recommend Mr. Neville Chamberlain's umbrella — tightly rolled and with a blunted point.

Our April issue headlined news of an impending concentration of isolationist forces in Chicago.

Merwin K. Hart's National Economic Council provides the newest item in this front. The "Council" has blossomed out with a Chicago branch, which now shares offices at 1559 Continental Bank Building, Chicago, with Otto W. Berg and Walter Brewer, attorneys. The 717 square feet of space, at $150 monthly rental, consists of an entry, with a receptionist to the right of the double doors, and three private offices in the rear. Only the names of Attorneys Berg and Brewer appear on the office doors. The National Economic Council, however, is listed on the directory in the building lobby.

We trust the above information will be of interest to Mr. Hart's good friend, Harry A. Jung, Honorary General Manager of the American Vigilant Intelligence Federation (Chicago Tribune Bldg., Chicago.)

The League has in Mr. Hart more than a passing interest. Our concern is rooted in the League's exposure in September, 1941, of Mr. Hart's close associations with propagandist Allen Zoll and with John E. Kelly, who is now serving a Federal prison term for violation of the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

Apparently the old adage about "Once bitten, twice shy," is no longer valid in Washington. An AP dispatch, dated August 22 and printed in the New York Daily News, states that Representative Walter C. Ploeser, Missouri isolationist, will introduce a resolution to investigate whether the motion picture industry "is being used for political

TO THE DELEGATES AND ALTERNATES
OF THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION OF 1940:

Smart Political Strategists are planning to manipulate the Republican National Convention of 1944 for the purpose of beclouding the issue which confronts the American People. They propose to nominate a Candidate who will be subservient to the international interests seeking the surrender of American Independence. Wendell Willkie is their candidate - he clearly represents the Internationalists in the Republican Party. Col. Robert R. McCormick clearly represents Traditional Republican American National Principles.

A contest in the Illinois Presidential Preferential Primaries between Willkie and McCormick will be "healthy for the Party and for the Nation". (Wendell Willkie July 16, 1943).

William H. Stuart, noted political editor and Columnist, discusses the issues in the enclosed reprint from his Weekly News Letter "HEARD and SEEN" two of his co-workers, whose names the Anti-Nazi League can supply.

In addition to his subway maintenance job, Mike Crowe works Saturdays and Sundays on a New Jersey dock, loading food and ammunition on United Nations' ships. The dock is under the supervision of the United States Coast Guard. Tirelli used to belong to the Kyffhauser Bund and claims close friendship with Ku-Kluxer Edward James Smythe, head of the Protestant War Veterans, who is now under Federal indictment for sedition. Tirelli boasts he has a sub-machine gun and 1,000 rounds of ammunition in his Pelham Bay house.

Under questioning by city authorities, Tirelli broke down and cried, admitted it's all true. To date however, no action has been taken. The Anti-Nazi League refers the matter to the New York City Civil Service Commission, the Board of Transportation, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the Police Commissioner and the Coast Guard.

Airplane inspector Juenemann has been closely associated with the Christian Front, McWilliams James True, Joseph P. Kamp and George E. Deatherage. He has long been the New York-advance man for Deatherage, former National Commander of the Knights of the White Camellia, now under Federal indictment for attempting to impair the morale of the armed forces.

Mrs. Mary McCafferty, the head of a Florida religious cult, once gave Juenemann $200 to be delivered to Peter Stahrenberg as advance payment for a printing of her anti-Semitic "Tomahawk." Somehow the messenger was "way-laid," the money never got to Stahrenberg, and it is doubtful that Mrs. McCafferty was one of the three references which Juenemann must have furnished to the United States Civil Service Commission.

The Anti-Nazi League has inquired of the proper authorities how such a man acquires civil service rating.

purposes in domestic affairs" by the Government, as soon as Congress reconvenes. Senator Wheeler, please note.

An interesting partnership seems to be developing between Frank Gannett's Committee for Constitutional Government and the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Each is distributing the other's literature. Recently the Klan and the Committee mailed out copies of two booklets — one entitled "Capitalism the Creator" published by the Gannett group, the other published by the Klan, entitled "The Truth About the Book SABOTAGE." Copies were mailed from headquarters of the KKK Klan in Atlanta, Georgia, with the Gannett pamphlet slipped inside the Klan material. The packing process was reversed in shipments from the office of the Committee for Constitutional Government at 205 East 42nd Street, New York City. The Anti-Nazi League will report to you regarding further efforts of this promising team.

In our last issue, we promised to keep you informed about RURAL JUSTICE, the pale imitation of Charles Coughlin's SOCIAL JUSTICE, published in Troy, Alabama, by the Rev. A. W. Termicino. The latest and, we hope, final development is that this paper has suspended publication.

Westbrook Pegler, the columnist with the "zoot suit" mind, has discovered a new and copyrighted explanation for the Detroit riots. While pool-pooling the idea that there might have been any Axis agitators around Detroit in historic times, he accuses "the popular Negro press of this country" which he declares "has recklessly, violently and persistently preached race hatred." This reminds us of the standard Japanese radio propagandists' explanation of Jap atrocities — namely, that the poor, gentle-natured Japanese soldiers had to defend themselves against the villainous attack of the voracious Chinese women and children.
