

Above is a picture of the missing general --- Dimiter Adamov Dimitrov, a Bulgarian national who, in 1943, founded the Bulgarian Democratic Liberation Movement to fight the Nazis. In late 1943 and early 1944, Dimitrov, now in the U.S. fleeing the Communist takeover, was declared a U.S. citizen, made a titular general, and given a new name by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. From this moment on, Dimitrov was to be referred to as General Donald A. Donaldson. Donaldson was entrusted with a mission from Roosevelt to persuade Ivan Bagrianoff, Prime Minister of Bulgaria, to join the west instead of the Communists.

In 1947, General Donaldson also served in the Greek Civil War, fighting the Communists with Generals Skobie, Commander of the British Army, and James A. Van Fleet of the U.S. Army. This missing general (Donaldson) becomes important now, since he claims he was a special advisor to President Kennedy on Eastern European Communism. Donaldson claims that he was ordered by President Kennedy "to investigate the plot against my life." His story follows, because Kennedy was tipped off through the Soviet Embassy in Washington that a plot against his life had been ordered by Allen Dulles. Donaldson's investigation was thwarted by the cross fire in Dallas, and he went underground on the entire Kennedy assassination until 1975/1976.

Gallery

PRESS RELEASE

General Donald A. Donaldson (Dimitar Adamov Dimitrov): the missing U.S. General who just may hold the key to who ordered the assassination of John F. Kennedy.