Xointelpro comes from Counter Intelligence Program. However, the program was not the collection of counterintelligence or intelligence information. It was operations, what came to be known as dirty tricks.

It was to create suspicion, dissention, fear, etc., among those the FBI didn't like, politically.

I don't think you were involved in that and from the disclosed records you weren't.

What the FBI did to King is what it called Spintelpro but it really isn't intelligence. Aside from hurting him and destroying his leadership they were interested in details of his private life. Any other information collected, from the records I've seen, was described as valueless.

In the Klan they tried to make some men believe their wives were sleeping around, including with other Klansmen, to stir things up.

They tried to make it appear that militants of right and left were their informants, in the expectation that this would destroy their following - at the least.

Thinks like these.

Yes, it was harassment,

Could you please define for me what COINTELPRO was?

I understand from you, I think that I was a part of that program.

If I am recalled to testify for John I should know what this group was for - harassment etc. or what?

I hope you are feeling better.
