Dear Hal,

The paperback edition of "Case Closed" is odd.

Books Am Annotate/Doubleday published with the permission of ^{RANDOM} Random House.

There is a new four page introduction in which the writer of your "Harold Weisberg one of the deans of the conspiracy press, found his first publisher (He had previously self published six conspiracy books) - - - - ."

How can Doubleday editors miss that I'm no lawyer but this seems remarkable.

"His books make no bad
nobody would publish them." That's the implication

Why didn't a checker or editor catch this?

It raises major questions about this
"book".

Let me know how Doubleday responds.

Always,

EO
