Dear Mr. Price,

It will be a happy day when I run out of opponents, for then the job will have been done.

I've got a small but regular commercial publisher for the Manchester book. I've had to lay it aside for a few weeks, but I've got about 25% of it drafted and in the very few minutes I can take from a project that I think will interest you when I can tell you about it I keep plugging away.

Notice the stuff from New Orleans? You've read most of it!

I am very interested in a foundation. A lawyer who wrote me after the Nizer program also has the same idea and says he has had some experience in establishing them. I've just had an unsolicited $200 contribution from a stranger I take to be a working man. I wrote and thanked him but asked him if he were certain that he and his family would not be doing without things they might really want to have. I told him I'd not cash the check, to think it over and let me know. He bounced right back with a letter that wet my eyes and insists I use it, which I can and shall. But you can see how this leads to the question of a foundation. I'd like these people to at least get a tax benefit from such kindness. I've had less than $100 from others, including something he sent earlier.

In a rush, thanks a lot. If you are ill, get well quick, soon and totally.

Regards,

Dear Mr. Weisberg:

My office updated me on yours of February 11.

No wonder Louie Nizer will not face you. You murdered him.

Frankly, you ought to let up a little on your tremendous anger or you will run out of opponents.

Your WHITEWASH II is no where on sale here in Florida and I am complaining every place. My office is sending me a duplicate copy.

Your plan for WHITEWASH III could well wait while you answer Manchester. His looks like the hottest book of many years and invites your answer.

Hope to return shortly and will pick up the important quest of a foundation which you well deserve.

Cordially,

Arthur Price ^{4D}
