Dear Mr. Weisberg,

a different story of Sprague and the "tiny transmitters".

Best Wishes,
Barbara Golden Rinley

Dear BGK, thanks for the New Times 2/18 and the prior clips I do not always have time to acknowledge. Helpful. In this case Policoff, who I know, was deceived by Sprague. In an interview published later Sprague repeated the Edwards interpretation. Besides, those devices have no place in a proper investigation. If they are needed there is no competent investigation. There also is no way of preventing their misuse, regardless of policy and/or intent. With all their investigators former police and at least most of the lawyers former prosecutors do you expect temptation to be resisted? I do not. I am taking this time so you may come to understand on your own that having an investigation is not good and having an investigation that as this one has been, a bad investigation, also is neither good nor one that can now enjoy any credibility. I'm sorry about it. From my personal experience they are not good people and are not of good intent. It is important to avoid wish-fulfilment to avoid later feelings of frustration and futility. Thanks and best,
