event were crowded around the opposite side of the corridor from where the car which was to transport OSWALD was waiting. As this car was backed to a point even with Detective LEAVELLE, a man broke from among the newsmen who were standing about six to eight feet away, and ran directly toward OSWALD. This man was later identified as JACK L. RUBY. He had a .38 caliber revolver in his hand and shot OSWALD from a distance of approximately 15 inches. Detective GRAVES immediately grabbed RUBY's left hand and with his right hand, took the gun from RUBY's hand. Almost simultaneous to this action, several officers subdued RUBY and took him into custody. Almost immediately an ambulance arrived and took the mortally wounded OSWALD to Parkland Hospital, Dallas, where he died at 1:07 p.m.
