Rush Replies Indirectly to Schlesinger

Washington Post Staff Writer By John M. Goshko

tion, that is, a period of peace," Rusk said in indirect Rusk replied yesterday to a Secretary of State. mer presidential adviser Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. that reply to a statement by forple will call a boring situabring about what some peo-State Department to try to al and banal by asserting that it's his duty to be dull. foreign policy is conventioncharge that his conduct of planned to replace Rusk as President Kennedy had "It is the purpose of the Secretary of State Dean was published recently in Life magazine, which ex-cerpted his forthcoming book on Mr. Kennedy, "One Thousand Days." In it, the one-time Harvard history Schlesinger's assertion > professor reports that Ken-nedy, while admiring many plodding ways. ability to shake the State Department out of its often things about Rusk, had been disappointed in Rusk's in-

was following his own advice about being dull yesanticlimax. report. At the very least, his comments came as a distinct himself to the Schlesinger terday when he addressed In the view of many, Rusk

Washington had hummed with authoritative reports that Rusk intended to make article. first question was for his comments on the Life a public reply to Schlesinger. And at his news conference yesterday, the inevitable For the past week, official not going to comment on these particular remarks or In answer, Rusk said: "I'm papers become available." the relevant ies to be made public "when Kennedy or Johnson librar-He then went on to say that his papers and his "own impressions" of his period in office will be given to the presidential they deal with me on the basis on confidence, that confidence will be respect-And, in what appeared to be a swipe at Schlesinger, on the assurance that when colleagues abroad can rest ates in Government and my he added: "But my associabout attacks on the effec-tiveness of the State Deswered with a bow to his subordinates as "competent from him personally. He anpartment, as distinguished Rusk then was asked similar remarks that might be made while I am in pub-lic office."

Nation has to face."

um and banality in diplomost comfortable with tediconventional," that he "mis-trusted the flashy or sensa-tional" and that he seemed and clarity was irrevocably mind "for all its strength inger's assertion that Rusk's ing so, Rusk turned to Schles-Then, without actually say about dramatizing issues, if drama gets in the way of settlement." "There are times," Rusk contended, "when some wish is to act with more drama, but there are problems about an editor's admonition that "no blood means no He reminded the news-men packed into the State Department Auditorium and dedicated officers who have to grapple every day with the most complex and difficult problems that this page for a while." object if we got internationnews," adding: "I should not al relations off the front gossip that are the staples of the cocktail circuit in the more fashionable parts of than to the rumors and town. ment officials to pay attention to their jobs rather preted as a call for Governthat most spectators interdiscussion with a comment Finally, Rusk closed of

Asked if he was uneasy amidst the intrigue of Washington, Rusk replied:
"Not at all. I feel very tion with my official duties, and not in some of the suburbs." town because the part of the town that I see is in conneccomfortable around this all comment. Schlesinger later declined