10/12/69 Recently two things have coincided. In answering Paul/Jim recent mailing, I've realized how many untranscribed tapes I have. It would be good is at least some of them could be typed and you and Paul and his boys has access to their content. I will not have time, nor will Bill, and there is no one locally I can get. I have also splurged (for us), esp. because of finances are so much worse than their usual bad, and bought two second-hand sofas each opening into a bed. We have one in the living room, the other is the half of Bill's office in which you have slept. Therefore, we have private accomodations for two people who might not sleep together (although there might be those who would prefer otherwise). So, if you have a friend by summertime who would be willing to transcribe any of these taped (which could simultaneously be dubbed, because I have two identical Concord 330s), I have an extra typewriter, a foot-control for the machines, and you could be doing other things if you do not have to work, like going over what I'll have written by the coming summer. If it is far away, it is not to remote to think about.
