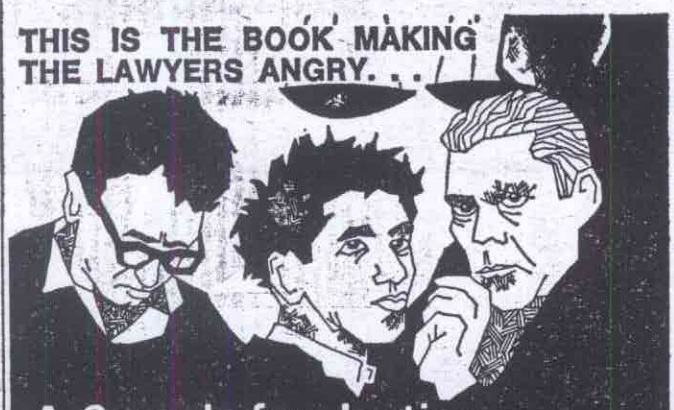
THIS IS THE BOOK MAKING THE LAWYERS ANGRY. . .



A Search for Justice

JOHN SEIGENTHALER
Contributors: James Squires, John Hemphill and Frank Ritter

In 1969, the American system of justice was confronted with the problem of how to deal with persons charged with the crime of political assassination. In a brief period of six months three men were tried in three separate state court jurisdictions—Clay Shaw, James Earl Ray, and Sirhan Sirhan.

A SEARCH FOR JUSTICE is an analysis of these trials. It is a book that questions whether "equal justice" in the courts of the land is equal, just—or even possible.
A SEARCH FOR JUSTICE emphasizes that different persons tried for identical crimes may be victims of uneven or irregular justice; that justice as administered in the various states has many deficiencies; that prosecutors and judges err with impunity; that the courts are ill-equipped to deal with these problems and are controlled by complacent lawyers.
