Hickory Hill, the mansion in McLean, Va., ... occupied by Ethel and Bobby Kennedy—who were its previous owners?—J. N. Taylor, Charlottesville, Va. Parade 3/5/67

A. After they were married, John and Jacqueline Kennedy bought the house from the estate of Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson. In 1957 when Jacqueline Kennedy decided to move into Washington, D.C., the house was sold to her in-laws, Joseph P. and Rose Kennedy. (In 1965 the house was deeded by Joseph Kennedy and wife to Ethel S. Kennedy as "a sole and separate estate free from debts, control or marital rights, including courtesy of her present or any future husband.")

this angle is very intriguing. Ethel is there multi-millionaires

New Orleans Acting Police Superintendent Presley Trosclair reported an extensive probe has cleared Lynn Losel and Louis Ivon, two of Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's investigators, of coercion and bribery charges. Mr. Trosclair admitted the officers had offered money and a job to Alvin Beaubouef in exchange for information on the Kennedy assassination but added "I don't interpret this as a violation of any law."

Attorneys for Clay Shaw, the retired New Orleans businessman under indictment for an alleged role in a razzle dazzle New Orleans "plot" in the death of President John F. Kennedy, plans to call 30 witnesses to a hearing. One of them is New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison who will be asked to name the "others" he claims were involved in the "plot."
