

Specter can't explain theory

The Times of June 2 carried an article on Sen. Arlen Specter's open house. I am the man who accused Specter of being an accessory after-the-fact in the murder of John Kennedy.

I am happy to repeat this in public print. The senator answered a question I did not ask. I neither did nor would accuse him as accessory to a murder. He was not. His infamous "magic bullet" theory helped the real murderers escape, and he is therefore an accessory after-the-fact.

This accusation has been made often by many people, including Harold Weisberg, Sylvia Meagher and Mark Lane. Each of these, and many others, have explained that a bullet does not smash heavy bones and remain unflattened, something every hunter and shooter knows.

Specter has said that he has no reason to question the single-bullet theory. Of course he doesn't. The theory is his, and he will avoid at all costs any chance of looking at it, or actually discussing it. He dares not. It is the cornerstone of the Warren Report and the cornerstone of his political career. His career is founded upon one egregious lie, and he is an accessory after-the-fact to a murder in Texas and an obstructor of justice in Washington, D.C.

I repeated this in writing on a form issued at the open house. I will repeat it anytime, anywhere.
