Stone Can Make

So Richard M. Mosk concludes that there's a conspiracy "by publishers and the entertainment industry to distort history for profit" ("The Plot to Assassinate the Warren Commission," Dec. 30).

If so, then what a grand opportunity it would be for director Oliver Stone to delve back into the '60s and make a movie about how the space program and the moon landings never really took place. Here, he would show the "moon landings" faked for the public on a Hollywood sound stage and the immense sums appropriated for the space program divided up among Nixon and his cronies!

Regarding Mosk's Counterpunch: Nice try! I'm sure you realize that you did not successfully rebut anything that Stone suggests. Your belief in the "magic bullet" leads me to believe that you're expecting a visit from the tooth fairy.
