Deadlinitis

JIM DEACH of Reno wouldn't say the younger generation is completely out of touch, but — . While standing in line with his wife to see "JFK" a few nights ago, he said to her, "And where were you on the day Kennedy was killed?" at which a kid standing behind them snapped disgustedly, "Hey, thanks a lot, man! You just gave away the ending" . . . Unsolicited opinion: No, I don't subscribe to the single-assassin theory, but I think Oliver Stone's movie is among the most dishonest I've ever seen. He was out to make a hit and he got it by fooling and confusing the viewers with all the razzle-dazzle of modern film making. It's impossible to tell, in his version, where reality stops and fantasy begins but yes, it is entertaining, and no, I don't believe that everybody except the Daly City Lions Club and the S.F. Giants was involved in the conspiracy. However, I'm watching the Junior League's every move.
