FILM & TV OUTTAKES

After a year without a single full-length feature, Dallas is stirring again as a film-making center.

Oliver Stone's shock troops have returned to prepare for his film about the Kennedy assassination. In mid-April, they'll begin six weeks of production in Dallas. Then the Oscar winner takes his shoot to The Big Easy.

Open call

Ever been told you look like John Fitzgerald Kennedy? How about Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis? If so, Dallas casting director Kris Nicolau wants you.

The zippy New Zealander is doing the location casting for Oliver Stone, and will hold an open call for locals on Feb. 16. Time and place will be published in this column.

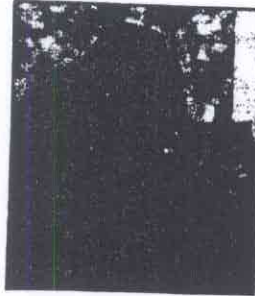

"There are speaking parts and featured roles for Texas people," Kris says, "but mostly they're for Texas men. There are very few for women."

And, of course, she reminds, "The film takes place in 1963."

play John Connally, Nellie Connally and Lee Harvey Oswald.

If you'd like to be considered for a role, send a non-returnable photo with phone numbers and availability data to: CASTING, Camelot Productions, 2927 Maple Ave., Dallas, Texas 75219.

m o v i e s

Oliver Stone will be filming in Dallas.

ACTION: As soon as he puts the final touches on his new movie about the legendary rock group the Doors, director Oliver Stone will begin work on a motion picture about the assassination of President Kennedy in Dallas. Film scouts already have been checking out scene locations in Dallas. Stone will have competition: A&M Films and HBO are teaming on an adaptation of Don DeLillo's "Libra," a fictionalized meditation on Lee Harvey Oswald and his role in the shooting.
