

Dear Tony,

5/5/79

You're lucky. When your letter came this mornigg it was my intention to suggest that you phone and we discuss Moore and what relates to the name because of the time a full explanation would take. But it seems that I've <sup>8/2</sup>done the exercise a bit, something I never know until I react, so this nice sunny day I'll spend some time catching up on the mail, instead of getting more exercise - for a while.

Of course I know nothing about your book or your views. Nor do I know that the Moore I have in mind as a possibility is any more than that.

There is one Jose Morejon, who also called himself Jose More and Joe Moore, who was a Bay of Pigs prisoner. This is fairly well known and is totally absent in the Commission records of which I know or the FBI's records I've read. I've gotten what they claim is the entire New Orleans file note released as part of the FBIHQ records, which I also have, and there is no reference to him or to any checking of the name, in any form. Goes for Dallas in all respects, I have those files, too, and have read every word of them.

I had two sources on Morejon that I recall now. There could have been more. Both Bay of Pigs prisoners.

The copy Paul Hoch gave you is from the N.O. files. If Garrison did anything with this I'm not aware of it.

Not long after Jones Harris talked the NYTimes into his anti-Warren approach and misrepresented never-secret records to make a case of Warren hiding from the staff I was asked by Channel 5 in DC to appear with him and Howard Willens, who as you know was liaison with his employer, DJ, and staff director. I took with me copies of the records Harris had talked the Times into believing Warren had hidden from the staff, the Hoover fear that an imposter would use the Oswald papers if sent to the USSR, and anticipating that Willens would lie and claim the records were ~~withheld~~ withheld when they weren't, had the DeSlatte record for him to contend with. He couldn't. The show's producer said to me afterward that it had taken him a decade to get out of his shell and he was back in it forever.

All I did was turn to Willens while reading the record and remind him that he was the liaison so why had he not followed that particular imposter up.

I believe that Garrison claimed that one Bill Dalzell also used the Moore name. Mary should know.

If you want to use anything about <sup>Moore</sup>core I think you should do your own digging. You might begin with Alberto Fowler, who when I last knew was in the p.r. dept of the ~~XXXXXXXXXX~~ City of N.O. And Mary's indices on the name. I think it is in Haynes Johnson's book.

Odd, the recurrence of vehicles, which he never had, with the Oswald name.

It wasn't an FOIA request of 1969. It is Civil Action 78-0420, a 1978 lawsuit still in court.

Dear Harold,

Thank you very much for your prompt reply on Deslatte. I shall simply say "obtained by H.W. under FOI request, 1979". I am curious about your remark that "Moore" can be a provocative name. Clearly, I see what you mean if one were to do the labour -as somebody should - to find out who Moore was. But do you already know something that makes him provocative now? If so, I think the Deslatte thing is potentially (the "something" on Moore) important enough to include it in my writings and even perhaps to do some more digging on my own.

Would you advise?

Thanks again.

Sincerely,

Anthony Summers
