

3rd Man

12/2/79

Dear Earl,

Thanks for the explanations in your 11/27 in which you say you are not going doing a story on the unknown who was with Oswald in his N.O. operations. Your cautions are understandable. However, there are other factors, other accounts of a third man with Oswald - the reason I have this file titled "Third Man" and that it is one of my older files.

Others, including Dean Andrews, described the man.

I'm not arguing. I'm informing you for the future.

The Bringier testimony cannot relate to the earlier picketing of the Wasp and the prints on those flyers not Oswald's, or to the later ITM picketing.

The FBI and the Commission ignored most of this. I learned from a number of people, particularly Mrs. Elise Cerniglia, then head of Catholic Cuban Relief in N.O., that Oswald's leafletting was much more extensive. There was hardly a day on which she did not get complaints from Cubans who saw him.

Most of this was in that small section of Canal Street.

Please don't forget to get the Doyle film back to me, preferably insured in the event it is lost.

One of the things I'm working on that may interest you, particularly because of the acoustical tape and the nadirce the sanctimonious Blakely is making, has to do with other shooting, reported but not necessarily actual. With all the withholding from me I can't be certain.

The impact reported by Aldridge was tested. I've not gotten the results. Trying.

A bullet was found near where Tague was hit. Later and by a road crew.

Other bullets were found, one behind the picket fence.

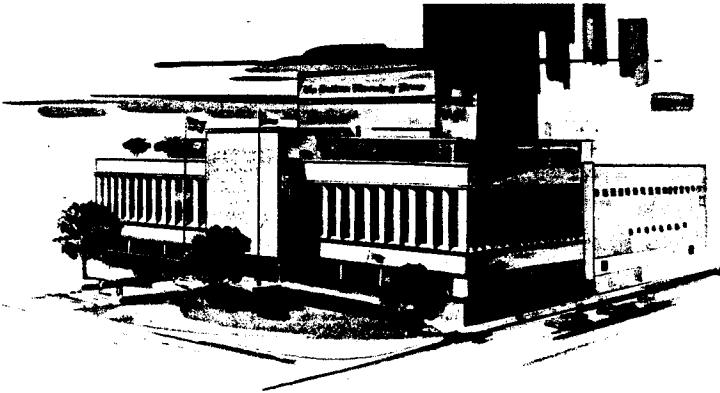

Another in a roof on St. Monica.

I recall a .303 and a .45 revolver bullet.

Best wishes,

TEXAS' LEADING NEWSPAPER

Dear Harold:

I have decided against writing the story about the unidentified partner of Oswald's at the scuffle in New Orleans. The reason is that I now think the man mistakenly thought to be Oswald's partner actually was Carlos Bringuier.

I am writing you because I wanted to enclose the reason why I think it was Bringuier. First, I cite the FBI report of what Sharon Doyle, Jim's sister, had to say. She remembers the Oswald partner as carrying a placard showing the figure of the ~~Statue~~ Statue of Liberty and some wording like "Cuba in Chains" and "Only 90 miles from the U.S." (See enclosed FBI report)

Second, I have enclosed Bringuier's testimony where he refers to getting a big sign before going out to search for Oswald. He describes it as showing the Statue of Liberty with wording almost identical to what Sharon Doyle recalled seeing.

I also have enclosed another page of Bringuier's testimony where he talks about a policeman first appearing, then leaving the scene to apparently phone headquarters. Shortly thereafter a number of policemen arrive at the scene of the scuffle. This description pretty well matches the three sequences on the Doyle film that we thought were not in proper rotation: First a policeman and Oswald and Bringuier and others, then no policeman on the scene and finally several policemen.

As for the Doyle film itself, it may have been tampered with because the sprocket area doesn't match with 37 other films he made with the same camera. But without a check by an expert like Bob Groden, this doesn't leave much of a story.

Yours truly,

Earl Golz

With DOYLE, he was attending an electrical contractors' convention in New Orleans. DOYLE is president of the National Electrical Contractors in Portland, and WILSON is governor of the Northwest Line Construction Contractors.

-At approximately 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Friday, August 9, 1963, the two families were walking on Canal Street in New Orleans when they observed two young men who were carrying pro-Cuban signs and distributing leaflets. One carried a placard on a stick. According to young SHARON DOYLE, this placard bore the figure of the Statue of Liberty and some such wording as "Cuba in Chains" and "Only 90 Miles from the U. S." The other man, possibly OJWLD, was wearing on his front a yellowish or orange-colored sign which bore the wording, "Viva la Fidel" and other wording believed similar to that on the above placard. The DOYLE family were agreed on the "Viva la Fidel."

The DOYLEs said that the demonstration was taking place in the approximate middle of a block on Canal Street, some five blocks toward the Mississippi River from the Jung Hotel.

As the DOYLEs and WILSONs passed the area, the two demonstrators were "rushed" by eight Cubans (Mr. DOYLE counted them), who argued vigorously with the two men, and trouble appeared imminent. Several police officers arrived on the scene immediately, however, both by car and on foot, and after talking to the two demonstrators for a time, apparently arrested them and placed them in a patrol car. This, however, was not before the placard on the stick had been smashed and the leaflets scattered on the sidewalk. It was believed by the DOYLEs that the pieces of the placard were picked up and placed in the police car. Mr. DOYLE commented that the policemen were able to arrive on the scene so hurriedly apparently because they had been "keeping an eye" on some picketing by Negroes which was taking place across the street a short distance away.

The pictures of the incident in the enclosed roll of film were taken by young JIM DOYLE. It will be noted that other vacation pictures appear on the roll, both before and after the New Orleans incident. The pertinent portion of the film occurs immediately following scenes showing SHARON DOYLE in front of a statue and a brief view of Mrs. DOYLE standing alone. It ends with a view of what appears to be a warehouse on the river.

him some copies of the Cuban report printed by the Cuban Student Directorate. After that, Oswald told me that he had been in the Marine Corps and that he had training in guerrilla warfare and that he was willing to train Cubans to fight against Castro. Even more, he told me that he was willing to go himself to fight against Castro. That was on August 5.

I turned down his offer. I told him that I don't have nothing to do with military activities, that my only duties here in New Orleans are propaganda and information and not military activities. That was my answer to him. He insisted, and he told me that he will bring to me next day one book as a present, as a gift to me, to train Cubans to fight against Castro.

Before he left—

Mr. LIEBELER. Was Geraci present throughout this entire conversation?

Mr. BRINGUER. Pardon? Was there a Mr. Blalock there?

Mr. LIEBELER. Blalock, Bi-a-lo-c-k. Do you remember him?

Mr. BRINGUER. Well, there was another young boy. What was his name did you say?

Mr. LIEBELER. Blalock, Bi-a-lo-c-k.

Mr. BRINGUER. I could not tell you, because I don't remember the name of the other boy who was there, but I think that I saw him just one time in my life. Geraci was with another person over there, another young boy, and—

Mr. LIEBELER. Did Oswald mention during this conversation that he could easily derail a train, for example, by securing and fastening a chain around the railroad truck? Do you remember him mentioning something like that?

Mr. BRINGUER. Well, you see; I do not exactly remember all the details, because we were talking for about—I believe about 1 hour, something like that, and at that moment I didn't know what was going to happen and I didn't pay too much attention to all the things that was being telling over there, but the result of the conversation were this that I am telling to you. Maybe he mentioned that. I could not tell to you that he mentioned that, because I am not—I don't remember. He could have mentioned that, because he was talking about the experience that he had in guerrilla warfare in the Marine Corps.

Before he left the store, he put his hand in the pocket and he offered me money.

Mr. LIEBELER. Oswald did?

Mr. BRINGUER. Yes.

Mr. LIEBELER. How much did he offer you?

Mr. BRINGUER. Well, I don't know. As soon as he put the hand in the pocket and he told me, "Well, at least let me contribute to your group with some money," at that moment I didn't have the permit from the city hall here in New Orleans to collect money in the city, and I told him that I could not accept his money, and I told him that if he want to contribute to our group, he could send the money directly to the headquarters in Miami, because they had the authorization over there in Miami, and I gave him the number of the post office box of the organization in Miami.

And after that, I left the store, because I had to go to the bank to make the deposit, and Oswald was in the store talking to my brother-in-law—that is my partner in the store—Rolando Paez.

Mr. LIEBELER. Is that P-e-i-a-e-z?

Mr. BRINGUER. That is right. Oswald was talking to him for about half an hour, and later on when I came back from the bank I asked to my brother-in-law, "Well, what do you think about this guy who was here?"

Mr. LIEBELER. Did he tell you his name was Lee Oswald?

Mr. BRINGUER. Yes; he told me that his name was Lee Oswald, and he told me one address in Magazine Street, but I didn't remember at that moment the number, and when I asked to my brother-in-law that, he told me that Oswald looked like really a smart person and really interested in the fight against communism, and he gave to my brother a good impression, and I told my brother that I could not trust him, because—I didn't know what was inside of me, but I had some feeling that I could not trust him. I told that to my brother that day. Next day, on August 6, Oswald came back to the store, but more—on August 9 I was coming back to the store at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and one friend of mine with the name of Celso Hernandez came to me and told me that in Canal Street there was a young man carrying a sign telling "Viva Fidel!" in Spanish, and some other thing about Cuba, but my friend don't speak nothing in English, and the only thing that he understood was the "Viva Fidel!" in Spanish. He told me that he was blaming the person in Spanish, but that the person maybe didn't understand what he was telling to him and he came to me to let me know what was going on over there.

At that moment was in the store another Cuban with the name of Miguel Cruz, and we went all three with a big sign that I have in the store in color. The sign is the Statue of Liberty with a knife in the back, and the hand, knifing her in the back. Just the initials of the Soviet Union, and it said, "Danger. Only 90 Miles from the United States Cuban Lies in Chains." We pick up the sign and we went to Canal Street to find the guy.

We were walking all Canal Street to Rampart Street, but we could not find him. We were asking to different people in the street, but nobody saw him, nobody told us. Yes, I saw him, or, He went to this side, I decided to get a Canal streetcar to search for him, and we went in the Canal streetcar until about the 2700 block of Canal Street, and we came back in the Canal streetcar, but we could not find him at that moment.

I went back to the store, but just 3 or 4 minutes later one of my two friends, Miguel Cruz, came back running and told me that the guy was another time in Canal Street and that Celso was watching him over there. I went over there with the sign another time, and I was surprised when I recognized that the guy with the sign hanging on the chest, said, "Viva Fidel" and "Hands off Cuba," was Lee Harvey Oswald. Until that moment I only knew Oswald as a guy who was offering his service to train Cubans, and when I saw that he was with a sign defending Fidel Castro and praising Fidel Castro, I became angry. That was in the 700 block of Canal Street just in front of the store where I was working my first year here in New Orleans.

Mr. LIEBELER. Was that the International Trade Mart?

Mr. BRINGUER. No; Ward Discount House. He make another appearance in the International Trade Mart, later, and I will go into that, too.

When I saw that was Oswald and he recognized me, he was also surprised, but just for a few seconds. Immediately he smiled to me and he offered the hand to shake hands with me. I became more angry and I start to tell him that he don't have any face to do that, with what face he was doing that, because he had just come to me 4 days ago offering me his service and that he was a Castro agent, and I start to blame him in the street.

That was a Friday around 3 o'clock at this moment, and many people start to gather around us to see what was going on over there. I start to explain to the people what Oswald did to me, because I wanted to move the American people against him, not to take the fight for myself as a Cuban but to move the American people to fight him, and I told them that that was a Castro agent, that he was a pro-Communist, and that he was trying to do to them exactly what he did to us in Cuba, kill them and send their children to the execution wall. Those were my phrases at the moment.

The people in the street became angry and they started to shout to him, "Traitor! Communist! Go to Cuba! Kill him!" and some other phrases that I do not know if I could tell in the record.

Mr. LIEBELER. You mean they cursed at him, they swore at him?

Mr. BRINGUER. That is right, some bad phrases, bad words.

Mr. BRINGUER. And at that moment, one of the Americans push him by one arm. One policeman came. When policeman came to me and asked me to keep him was handing out yellow leaflets of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. New Orleans Chapter—and I told to the policeman that I was Cuban, I explained to him what Oswald did to me, and I told him that I don't know if I was against the law, but that I will not leave that place until Oswald left and that I will make some trouble.

The policeman left. I believe going to some place to call the headquarters, and at one moment my friend Celso took the literature from Oswald, the yellow sheets, and broke it and threw it on the air. There were a lot of yellow sheets flying. And I was more angry and I went near to Oswald to hit him. I took my glasses off and I went near to him to hit him, but when he sensed my intention, he put his arm down as an X like this here (demonstrating).

Mr. LIEBELER. He crossed his arms in front of him?

Mr. BRINGUER. That is right, put his face and told me, "O.K. Carlos, if you want to hit me, hit me."

At that moment, that made me to reaction that he was trying to appear as a martyr if I will hit him, and I decide not to hit him, and just a few seconds later arrive two police cars, and one of the policeman over there was Lieutenant Gaillot, G-a-i-l-o-t. They put Oswald and my two friends in one of the police cars, and I went with Lieutenant Gaillot in the other police car to the First District of Police here in New Orleans.

When we were in the First District of Police, we were in the same room, one small room over there, and some of the policemen start to question Oswald if he was a Communist, what he was doing that, and all those things, and Oswald at that moment—what was in front of myself—was really cold blood. He was answering the questions that he would like to answer, and he was not nervous, he was not out of control, he was confident in himself at that moment over there.

One of the questions that they asked to him was about his organization, the Fair Play for Cuba, and I saw him showing some papers that—I believe they were the credentials of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, that the Fair Play for Cuba Committee is a national organization, and when he told that, he was so kind of proud that it was not a small group but a national group all over the United States, and they asked of him the name of the members. No. Excuse me. Before they asked him if he has any office. He told them no, that there were—they were holding the meetings in different house, different homes, different members of the organization, one night in one house, another night in another house, but in front of me he didn't told nothing about any office. When they asked him about the name of the members, he answered that he could not tell the name of the members in front of myself, because he will not like to let me know who were the ones who were helping him here in the city, and at that moment the police came out of the room and that was the last time that I saw him that day.

Mr. LIEBELER. Did the police keep you in jail too?

Mr. BRINGUER. Well, yes. I had to put—the they took my fingerprints and my picture, and I have to put $25 bond that night with my two friends too, and I don't know, but after the assassination I heard that Oswald didn't put the $25 bond, that somebody went to the First District and make—I believe you call that an affidavit or something like that, and he will appear in court and he will not have to put the $25. He didn't put the $25 bond. That is what I heard. I didn't saw that. I am not sure of that. Next time that I saw him—

Mr. LIEBELER. Did you appear in court later?

Mr. BRINGUER. Yes, sir, later. That was August 12.

Mr. LIEBELER. Yes, on Monday.

Mr. LIEBELER. And you pleaded not guilty to the offense that you were charged with?

Mr. BRINGUER. That is right; that is right. And he plead guilty.

Mr. LIEBELER. Oswald was there in court?

Mr. BRINGUER. Yes, sir.

Mr. LIEBELER. And you saw him in court?

Mr. BRINGUER. Yes, sir.

Mr. LIEBELER. And that is what you were just about to tell me?

Mr. BRINGUER. Go ahead.

Mr. BARKOUTER. In August 12, we appear in the second municipal court in New Orleans. I came first with my friends, and there were some other Cubans over there, and I saw when Oswald came inside the court. I saw him. He went directly to sit down in the middle of the seat of the colored people. See, here in the court you have two sides, one for the white people and one for the colored people, and he walked directly inside of the colored people and he sat directly among them in the middle, and that made me to be angry too, because I saw that he was trying to win the colored people for his side. When he will appear in the court, he will defend Fidel Castro, he will defend the Fair Play for Cuba, and the colored people will feel good for him, and that is a tremendous work of propaganda for his cause. That is one of the things that made me to think that he was a really smart guy and not a nut.

When the judge call us, he plead guilty, I plead guilty, and my friends plead not guilty. I brought the Marines guidebook, the guidebook for Marines, and I explain to the judge that the incident was originated when Oswald tried to infiltrate the organization and that if he will not do that, I will not have any fight with him in the street, and I showed to him the guidebook for Marines with the name of Oswald on the top of the first page, and the judge dismisses the charges against us and fined him $10.

Mr. LIEBELER. Fined Oswald $10?

Mr. BRINGUER. Ten dollars, that is right. In the court was at that moment one cameraman from WDSU, and he make—he did an interview to Oswald after the trial and he took some movies of ourselves, and later I receive one phone call from Bill Stuckey. I had talk to Stuckey the day of the trial in the morning. I met him in the bank and I explained to him what was going on in the second municipal court, and he was the one who send the reporter over there to the trial. I am not sure if was the same day or next day of the trial Stuckey called me asking for Oswald's address. I get the affidavit from the court dissertation, and I give to him the address in dissertation, and I asked him why he was looking for that. He told me that he was going to make an interview to Oswald. I disagreed with him at that moment, I told him that I was thinking that it was not good to let a Communist go to radio station and tell all his lies, because there are many people who understand what was happening in Cuba, but there are many people who do not know exactly what is happening in Cuba. Stuckey offered me to make another interview to me next Saturday in his program, but I didn't agree with that neither, and I asked him to arrange a radio debate, because in that way we could tell our point of view at the same moment in the same place.

On August 16 another friend of mine left to me a message in the store that Oswald was another time handing out pro-Castro propaganda for the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, this time in front of the International Trade Mart here in New Orleans.

I wasn't in the store at that moment, and when I came back and I received the message, I went to the International Trade Mart, but I could not find Oswald. He had already left, and I was talking later on with my friend, and the information that I received was that he was over there with two other persons. Later I saw the picture of those two persons, and they have a Latin aspect. I do not know if they are Latin Americans or not, but at least there is one who is.

Mr. LIEBELER. Did somebody show you pictures of these individuals?

Mr. BRINGUER. Who did?

Mr. BRINGUER. The Secret Service tried to see if I know them, if I could identify them.

Mr. LIEBELER. [Exhibiting photograph to witness.] I show you a picture, which has previously been marked as "Pizzo Exhibit 453-A," and I ask you if
