

Was Arthur Bremer Programmed To Assassinate Wallace In '72?

by J. David Truby

IS IT POSSIBLE that Arthur Bremer was programmed to kill George Wallace during the 1972 presidential campaign?

R. Gordon Ursul, editor of the Virginia Beach Sun, who has continued an extensive investigation into the Wallace/Bremer case, is convinced he was. Furthermore, he says, "The man who shot Wallace is part of a conspiracy involving mental telepathy and a professional assassination bureau with big money and financial backing." Ursul, whose articles caused Wallace to personally reopen the investigation questioning a possible conspiracy, claims, too, that this mysterious organization may also have connections with other assassinations.

Corroborating this allegation, an aide to the House Assassination Committee agreed the investigators are "aware" of the Ursul story, but added, "I cannot say more than we are taking a very serious look into these leads." (It is not a well known fact, but the House Committee may also examine other murders, including attempted assassinations, particularly when a common link may be established.) The wounding of George Wallace during his bid for the presidency is not being ignored by the Committee, the aide explained.

Ursul says Bremer was "conditioned by hypnosis and other treatment to kill Wallace," under the use of a form of telepathy. "I have documented evidence," he says, "that Bremer's conditioning started in the fall of 1971 and lasted until May, 1972. My evidence came from the man who trained Bremer and put him on his target," reveals Ursul.

The firsthand link to the mysterious assassination bureau is Miroslav Kudrna, a 46-year-old Czechoslovakian, who is, according to Ursul, "anything but memorable looking, the kind of person favored by outfits who hire killers."

In a series of long interviews, Kudrna told Ursul about the assassination bureau.

"Kudrna told me the operation of the bureau dated to the early '60s, when it was organized by Europeans with direct links to CIA fronts. These people were anti-Communist and international in operation. I gathered they had some influence in organized crime, as well. He told me they had arranged teams for the highest level murders in the United States... I assume they meant the Kennedy killings," the bearded, grey-haired Ursul relates.

Of all the lone-man theories, the one purported for the Wallace assassination has seemed to hold up best until now. But why would a group of anti-Communists want to assassinate Wallace, a candidate of the right-wing American Party? Two plausible answers exist: the group was not as anti-Communist as it was promoney, and to insure a Nixon victory.

"Kudrna told me that mental telepathy and mind transfer were part of the technique," Ursul continues, "and that they spent hundreds of thousands of dollars doing research on potential assassins. They select people we'd call 'losers,' and program them to direct their frustration to some target-person. Then, the trainer would set up a hypnotic suggestion that killing that target-person would solve all the frustration problems. George Wallace was Miroslav Kudrna's target-person," explains Ursul.

Like malaria, rabies and other infections, the idea of brainwashing or mind control is a disease of exposure. The human brain is quite capable of programming in almost any direction or to any goal, depending upon the exposure, according to psychiatrist Lewis Addler.

Nobel prize winning geneticist Hermann J. Muller observes that the work done on Arthur Bremer is easily possible, given what we know of the ability to program the human brain to action. "We are all really neurogenetic robots if someone has the key to our nervous systems and can reprogram our individual programs. This programming of Bremer is a prime example," Muller adds. Would Bremer remember the programming and be able to testify about it? Muller says this was not very likely. "I am certain he would be conditioned not to remember anything but what he was told to recall."

Bremer was programmed to appear conspicuously at political rallies and always appear to be by himself — a loner. "The bureau wanted no suggestion of any conspiracy this time, so they really programmed strongly on the lone wolf stuff."

According to Ursul, "The first direct proof I had of this bureau is Kudrna's personal admission to me that he trained Arthur Bremer." Ursul insists he documented this startling fact with direct corroboration by one of Kudrna's fellow instructors, but when pressed for further details about who runs the assassination bureau and who organized the Wallace hit, he offers no details. Ursul is evasive about naming names.

"I wish to protect myself and Mr. Kudrna," he says. It was also learned, however, that several other publications are interested in Ursul's story. He says, "Two or three of the big magazines are still bidding on my story, so I must protect them and me." (Ursul is currently writing a biography of Wallace, which will contain more details of this assassination theory. He hopes to complete the book this year.)

Ursul also talked with Gov. Wallace. Charles Snider, former press spokesman for Wallace, says, "Gov. Wallace is very open-minded on this subject. Obviously, he is very interested in this particular investigation. He wants to know the truth at all times." There was no further comment from the Wallace people.

Ursul adds, though, "I first personally met with Gov. Wallace in May of 1973, and even then he supported my thought that he was the victim of a conspiracy. He is still of this opinion."

Authoritative support for the Ursul theory comes from the well-known and respected international psychiatrists, Dr. Edward Simpson and Dr. Bernard Diamond. Both have testified to the existence of mind-modifying hypnotism to program killers. And, Dr. Richard Popkin, the man who documented at least two "Oswalds" in and around Dallas just before the JFK murder, is even more sure today of a ring of "Manchurian Candidate" killers.

I had heard about this trainer of assassins who wanted to tell his story and you bet I was interested. I was in Miami at the time," says Ursul. Continuing his own leads, Ursul also put out word through underground contacts that he wanted to talk to the assassination bureau's mystery man, Miroslav Kudrna. Finally, the two got together under heavy security, and Kudrna told his sinister tale.

"Kudrna is a Czech who has also lived in Germany," Ursul says. "His original work was spying and espionage, but he wouldn't say for whom. He seems to know his job, though, and he had the documentation, e.g., he showed me he knows the ways and methods of dirty stuff. He told me he was sent to Austria in 1965 and given extensive testing before being 'drafted' as he said, by the assassination bureau. Their medical team told him he had a high degree of telepathic power. He first demonstrated this power to his superiors in Vienna, giving telepathic orders to subjects 10 rooms away with great success.

"They taught him their assassin training method which was based on depressing the subject, directing the depression to a target-person, then conditioning him that the only way to get better was to always listen to the suggestion of the person controlling them. The suggestion was to kill the target-person. Kudrna was to be one of these deadly controllers.

"His bosses told him because he'd done well in training potential assassins in Vienna he would be assigned to America to control subjects. He would live 'the good life,' they told him.

"Kudrna was told to report to a Long Island factory location after the bureau arranged his work visa to America in 1966. The factory building was a front for the bureau's activities and was sanctioned by some organization in the United States government," Ursul says the Czech told him.

Later, on his own, Ursul checked the building location and said he was denied entry by a rough looking foreign man. Ursul reports, "It looked like a good front for whatever they still do there, although I'm sure it's no longer an active training center."

While in New York, Ursul also met several of Kudrna's former bureau colleagues, and conducted a long interview with a co-conspirator who totally and independently confirmed Kudrna's entire story.

"From the day Kudrna came to the United States, he has been a virtual prisoner of the bureau. They used his mental telepathic powers to train and control political assassins, including Arthur Bremer," Ursul contends.

"Kudrna told me he worked with a subject who was a 'short, nice American boy named Arthur who smiled a lot... who spoke no French, German, or Czech, just English.' They worked together, with Kudrna the controller and the young American the trainee, for about two weeks. 'I knew only his first name and his target — Gov. Wallace,' Kudrna told me. Kudrna learned this young man's whole name was Arthur Bremer only after the attempt on Wallace's life. He then positively identified him," Ursul says.

Bremer was programmed to appear conspicuously at political rallies and always appear to be by himself — a loner. "The bureau wanted no suggestion of any conspiracy this time, so they really programmed strongly on the lone wolf stuff," Ursul says Kudrna told him.

"Bremer was also induced to keep a diary supportive of the lone-nut theory. Through mental suggestion he was given the contents for the diary, which explains how it was so much more articulate than Bremer himself."

Bremer was activated, Kudrna told Ursul, in March of 1972, then given extensive telepathic suggestion for his deadly mission in April. "We held this session in New York's Waldorf-Astoria the nights of April 7 and 8" is what Kudrna told me," says Ursul.

"It was after these sessions that Bremer began his carefully programmed travels the media reported as 'aimless.' Actually, they were quite controlled. If you glance at some of the news photos showing Bremer in political crowds you will see a large man nearby. This big fellow is a Czech whose cover name was 'Leon.' He was Bremer's control during this phase of the mission.

"Leon and Bremer bird-dogged Nixon through Canada to test the degree of programming they had over the young American. They also made sure Bremer showed up near the candidate in press photos and in the surveillance pictures taken by security people. This would be useful later as evidence against the 'lone gunman.'

"Kudrna told me Bremer returned to a new Long Island location for more programming on April 20, staying nearly a week. Among other things, he was induced to join the Wallace campaign as an active volunteer.

"He joined in Milwaukee and went to work, hypnotically following his program to become a helpful nuisance in the local campaign," Ursul reports, "all so he would be remembered later.

After this April session, Kudrna said he seemed to be losing his own powers of telepathic concentration. He began to question in his own mind what he was doing. Taking a few days off, he fled the Long Island compound to think things out. He decided to turn himself in, despite the horrible death threat members of the bureau worked under. He went to the local police who thought him a nut. He didn't speak well in English, and they dismissed him as a loony. He next went to the FBI.

"Kudrna said he met with two FBI agents in a building on 69th Street. He then went to the Pentagon where he was interviewed by the CIA and military officials. He showed me official passes verifying these visits. He also carried documents and identification allowing him entrance to classified areas forbidden to the public. All his government credentials were stamped, dated, and in order," Ursul says.

"Kudrna said he told them all in April that this man (Arthur Bremer) was going to shoot George Wallace in a few weeks. He said the Pentagon people seemed interested but no one contacted him again."

Officials at the FBI, CIA, and military intelligence all deny that anyone from their organizations ever met with anyone named Miroslav Kudrna or that there was a tip such as this concerning the Wallace shooting. The New York police issued the same denial. Kudrna told Ursul there were notes kept from these meetings. (However, as veteran Washington newsman Tris Coffin, a former associate of Drew Pearson, points out, "The CIA, FBI, and military also denied knowing anything about anyone named Lee Harvey Oswald, too.")

Fearful for his life as he was sure someone in one of the agencies had reported him back to the bureau, Kudrna fled. He disappeared for two years, finally surfacing to meet with Ursul. Obviously sure of itself, the bureau simply went on with its plan without Kudrna.

"According to Kudrna, Bremer was scheduled for a final session on May 14 at the Long Island compound, then to depart the next day for his mission — to shoot George Wallace. The rest, as they say, is history," Ursul reports. "Arthur Bremer, acting under telepathic hypnosis and control, shot his way into the history books at the direction of an evil political conspiracy."

In a related development late in 1975, an unidentified CIA source told journalist James L. Moore about a top secret military report in that agency's library.

"The 350-page scientific study is about the assassination uses of RHIC-EDOM, the theory of Radio-Hypnotic Intracerebral Control — Electronic Dissolution of Memory," Moore said. "It deals with the scientific and medical evidence for the black uses of an already proved fact — persons can be mind-controlled to do anything, including murder, all without any memory of the act or why it was done. The CIA man told me that Sirhan and Bremer were classic cases," Moore added.

"This study was prepared for the CIA just after the JFK murder in Dallas. Interesting timing. Reading it makes one understand how these so-called 'robot murderers' truly are programmed to kill," the CIA man told Moore. (According to Moore, three unnamed New York scientists conducted RHIC-EDOM experiments on patients in seven Veterans' Administration hospitals in the late '60s, possibly at the direction of the CIA and without the knowledge of the patients.)

Tris Coffin corroborated that U.S. intelligence people have had a longtime interest in murderous mind control. "In the Truman Administration, for example, I knew his national security advisor Admiral Sidney Souers, quite well. One day he showed me a letter sent to the president by a German scientist who had escaped to Mexico after the war's end. The letter indicated Hitler's scientists, and this chap had been one of them, had actually developed these mind-control methods into long-range working models. They had already demonstrated the covert uses over long distances. This scientist had copies of the documents and records with him and wanted to work for the United States. The man said he and his colleagues vowed never to give the plans and documents to the Nazi military because they disagreed with the evil way the war was run. Instead, this work went to the United States in 1947," Coffin said.

"Our early studies with the German methods were verified by Dr. Rhine, the Duke University ESP expert, who testified to their use and validity," Coffin added.

After surfacing to tell his modern mind-control story to Ursul, Kudrna has disappeared again, according to the Virginia newspaperman. "Perhaps he has been swallowed up," says Ursul, "by some monstrous oblivion created by those controlling this ongoing assassination conspiracy."
