Dear Mel and Paul,

The show has just gone off down here, and I must write the apology I owe you. Those few specific things I mentioned to Paul I have not changed my mind about, but the total effect is entirely different in the quiet of the home.

Paul will recall that when he said he didn't feel as I did I said possibly it is because there was so much talk and disturbance at the preview. I believe that is the case and that it also hurt the advance notices of the show. If your Washington people have been in touch with you, they may have reflected what I observe of a large part of the press there, aside from the few drunks.

For example, in today's Washington Post Larry Laurent says of it, "The panel argues for three hours. The wrangling leads to no helpful conclusions but those who enjoy exercises in semantics and skilful rhetoric, colored by passionate discourse (presumably me), will enjoy the program".

I learned much from it. You know I never saw the Burke show or heard any of the others (or saw any except the Cronkite show) before.

If I get any further reaction (the first, from a friend with a transcription business, paraphrases what Mel told me) I'll let you know.

I have never had any experience with press previews before, but if there are to be any more in which you are directly or indirectly involved, maybe I can make a few suggestions.

Is my request to represent the minority on the majority show honored?

Sincerely,

A Re-examination of

A Re-examination

Serious questions have been asked concerning the Warren Commission. Was the scope of its examination into the details surrounding President Kennedy's death too limited? Doubts have been raised as to the validity of the findings. Until now, these questions and doubts have remained in print. At this point, Metropolitan Broadcasting Television presents the controversial detractors of the Warren Commission Report to the television audience.

of the

Warren Commission Findings:

In an unprecedented three-hour program, five argumentative authors confront each other (and the concerned television viewer) with their challenging questions:

- Mark Lane—attorney and author of Rush to Judgment.
- Leo Sauvage—newspaper correspondent and author of The Oswald Affair.
- Harold Weisberg—author of White Wash, the report on the Warren Report.
- Penn Jones—newspaper editor and author of Forget Me Girl.
- Jacob Cohen—educator and author of The Missing Document.

The moderator is columnist Jim Bishop, who is currently writing a book to be entitled The Day Kennedy Was Shot. David Schoenbrun, distinguished news analyst, will serve as host.
