Dear Mr. Demangone,

Beginning a year and a half ago with the book you request we had to initiate a new policy because my books do not get into commercial distribution and attention in itself does not help us recover costs that usually mean we go into debt.

Since then, including the newest book, POST MORTEM, we have not been able to afford either review or press copies. My books are news. Those reporters who want copies buy them.

This is exceptional but we have no practical alternative and the reviews have been virtually non-existent. News coverages has been exceptional, but when it does not include direction on how to get the book it is meaningless to us.

I make countless radio broadcast by phone but always with the understanding that my name and address and the price of the book will be given. Otherwise it is a futility for the listener and for me. Radio has been different. There is no single station among hundreds that has not understood this and has not done it.

Since October I have been more restricted than you would expect of a one-man/one woman operation that does everything from the beginning of research to the actual wrapping and mailing of packages. I have phlebitis and it has reduced the length of the day for me.

Sorry, but I hope you can understand. We also are without means of subsidy. Our only regular income is the three and a half months a year my wife works. On WHITEWASH IV after more than a year we have recovered only the actual printing and mailing costs. On POST MORTEM about a third of them.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg

Dear Mr. Weisberg,

Please send a review copy of WHITEWASH IV

We have looked at and reviewed several of the
