Begin by considering that my taking the time for this isn't an ego indulgence and remember that you do not take offense at your professors when they illustrate a point they are trying or have tried to make. And understend that as of this moment, what I'll go into remains preseture. So, this is a kind of locture intended neither to give offense nor to be self-justification. Its purpose is to open your mind to what is foreign to you and is almost without exception not tolerated by the "critical" community, some of my more foreeful letters. As a philosophic base, recall that you recently read Ecclesiastes at my encouragement, so you know about a time and a place, buh?

You are also familiar with my Washington Post file, so you know that their major 5/51/66 play on assassination work, if a doublecross of me, is the direct result of my effort there and that this effort, even with the intercession of a member of the House Judiciary Committee, after at least a year had come to naught. The change was when I change the character of my letters and was close to offensive with Friendly. The Post fed the LATimes, which did a similar story, but having no consciences to escuage, the LATimes made no mantion of me at all.

That was a major break of its day, one of our more important ones, and the direct immediate cause was what I am sure everyone woulf regard as an intemperate outburst from me.

You know the Post's attitude, the news it won't report, etc. Now I'll skip other such cases, and success with the government is rather conspicuous, as you should recall, and again never followed sweetness and light from me, to the interruption earlier. It was again from the Post. Again, that you are most could regard as intemperance in a letter to Sen Bradlee, after one of their nutty pseudo-scientific repetitions of the lone-mut hoosy. I enclosed a carbon of a piece I had written for the National Enquirer on prospects, using the "Can bir. Weisberg Translate" threat as a peg to hang the comput on.

It took a while to filter down, from the in basket on Fradles's deak, but that carbon finally reached the editorof their Sunday magnaine, Potomae, that gets over 500,000 immediate circulation and in number and audience is a bit more influential than, say, the Texas becover. (Ronale Duyger, by the way, was near hore for a year, renting the home of a friend about 20 minutes away.)

Potomac's editor gave it to his managing editor, who called me a while back. I thereefter sew him once to give him the answer to a question he had asked. Out of the blue today he phoned and we talked for more than a hour. He is going to call back and he is then to come up. I have been rather open with him, electing to trust him, but stipulating that i not be used as either a feel or a tin-plate here. He has agreed and I expect him to be honest. As of now, I don't know the form whatever they'll do will take, nor do i know if it will come to pass, given the policy control over navapaper content today. But I'll take the time and the chance, and perhaps we'll not all appear to be frustrated nuts.

By point lies in Ecclements: there is a time and a place for everything, not only a time to be born and a time to die, a time to sow and a time to reap the which has been sown. There is also a time for anger, a time for indignation, and a time when it is unually not to be. If I may well be guilty of oberindulgence on this, and I surely recognize the possibility if not the probability, I encourage you to learn that it is NOT that there is NEVER a time for the kind of thing I do and to which I was can attribute some of the major discoveries. Have an open mind. Don't be the greature of modern education and its atcreetypes. In the most recent past, confider that with all the refusals to even accept responsibility for my foundations file and a blind insistence that there was none and it would not be returned, a rather pointed letter to which in today's mail you take exception seems to have gotten at least the promise of its prompt return.

Don't accept blindly. But don't reject blindly, wither. As Al Smith said, look at the record. Those old boys said it like it is in Ecclesiastes.

Best, MV
