

Dear George,

5/7/77

Early this morning I heard a couple of items on WAVA that I presume will reach you through some wire.

One is that Green is now quoted as saying he saw a nervous man near or in a phone booth. This changes nothing in my view. I told you what is real on this.

Then there is Fauntroy saying that the press reaction means that there has to be truth to his fictions.

This is reasonable. Like saying that if you react strongly when I call you a crook you sure as hell have to be a crook.

All this crap should not be printed. No complaint because it does not appear.

However, I'd like to keep up with it. Like is not the word. Should. What I'd like is to be free to write.

If it does not represent too great a problem I'd appreciate it if periodically you could send me these odds and ends of unpublished wire copy. Knowing what is said I can respond better if I'm asked.

Another value is archival.

If we are both free at the same time today I'll tell you the actual gas-station story. If not when we are together again.

Best,
