Dear Cyril,

Thank you very much for the helpful data and for the time it took from your days that I am sure are busy.

I've been working away whenever I've had the time and am getting closer to the completion of the rough draft. Dave Wrone has been retyping the rough draft on his computer so I have clean copy instead of the mess my drafts usual are from all the typos in particular.

He has a high opinion of what he's seen and that is encouraging.

The more I think about what Lundberg and AIA did the more incredible I find it.

It was stupid, grossly inaccurate, accomplished nothing of any real meaning and made them all large targets for legitimate criticism.

Humes and Boswell ~~lied~~, Lundberg flaunted his ignorance, and for what?

A reply to Oliver Stone's movie?

Was that worth risking their reputations on?

If they did this at the behest of some official, what official had the interest?

While it all seems orchestrated, I've seen no proof of that.

I guess maybe they are all crazy.

Many thanks, sincerely,

Harold
