

BY JANE CIABATTARI
Parade's Special
Intelligence Report

Newt's Sister Spills the Beans

AP/Wide World

Candace and Newt Gingrich on Capitol Hill

The Gingrich family certainly can't blame its instability on any other group of people," writes Candace Gingrich in her upcoming memoir, The Accidental Activist. Candace, 30, the half-sister of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, goes on to explain that their mom divorced Newt's dad, Newton McPherson. She wed Robert Gingrich, who adopted Newt and whose own parents had given him up for adoption.

At 19, Newt (now 53) married his former math teacher, Jackie Battley, and they had two daughters. After he divorced Jackie, Newt wed Marianne Ginther. "The couple decided not to have children," writes Candace, a gay-rights activist, "and Newt had a vasectomy. I always chuckle when I see those 'Newter Newt' bumper stickers, because he already was!"

Invited to respond, Newt Gingrich had no comment.

Sunday Freebie for Investors

A call or letter offering big profits with little risk should raise a red flag with investors. The first line of defense is to ask things like: "Where did you get my name? Would you mind explaining your proposal to some third party, such as my attorney? Can you provide references?"

Those are some of the questions recommended in a new 20-page pamphlet. For a free copy of Investment Swindles: How They Work and How To Avoid Them, write to: Consumer Information Center, Dept. 57, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. You'll also receive the Investors' Bill of Rights.