Inadequate Records Management and Filing Practices.—Improvement in agency records management practices and filing procedures can also help speed the response to FOIA requests and appeals. Although the FOIA regulations of the Central Intelligence Agency, for example, call for "the prompt and expeditious processing" of requests, 4 the CIA has informed the Subcommittee that it is unable to comply with the 10-and 20-day response times, in large part, because the agency has "no single centralized records system" or index to record its holdings. 95 Thus, it often takes the agency several days just to locate requested documents. 96 The CIA, or any other agency without a centralized records system, needs to reassess and improve its filing and records system in order to respond to requests for information more expeditiously.97 Deliberate Dilatory Tactics.—The most questionable and objectionable causes of delay are those that stem from improper agency attitudes, including outright hostility to the FOIA, access to public information or the individual requester. 98 Where such attitudes exist, agency personnel can easily use delay "as a deliberate stalling tactic." 99 Hoping, for example, "that the passage of time will exhaust the requester's interest in documents that the agency is reluctant to produce," an agency may improperly delay any reply for a substantial period of time, only eventually to reject a request "for a reason that should have been apparent at the time it was received." 2 Or the agency may not deny a request outright but deem it "in-adequate for lack of specificity" or sufficient identifying information, "with the result that final action on the unpopular request is delayed while the requester attempts to reformulate it with more particularity." 3

It is difficult to determine precisely the extent to which the agencies and departments are employing deliberate, dilatory tactics to frustrate FOIA requests and appeals. At least one such case, however, was brought to the attention of the Subcommittee, and there well may be more.4

4 See Hearings, pp. 139-141, 174-175, 941-942. One witness brought to the subcommittee's attention three internal FBI memoranda regarding an FOIA request submitted to the FBI in 1969 by Harold Weisberg. In the words of the witness, the memo, dated October 20, 1969, stated that Mr. Weisberg"...was a leading critic of the FBI's Warren Commission Report and various government law enforcement agencies. Referring to the request submitted by Mr. Weisberg, which sought information on the FBI memo conclude [d] that "it was approved that this letter not be acknowledged."

Although it is now 8 years later, is is my understanding that despite hit. Weisberg's attorney informs me that there are approximately 25 of Mr. Weisberg's FOIA requests which have never been answered, although some of this information, it has never been received. In fact, Mr. Weisberg's attorney informs me that there are approximately 25 of Mr. Weisberg's FOIA requests which have never been answered, although some of this information has been generally relessed to the press. We hope the subcommittee will demand an explanation from FBI and Justice Department witnesses. Acknowledging that Mr. Weisberg had "reason to complain about the way he was treated in the past," the Department witness said the Civil Division was "going to try to straighten out" the matter. Id., p. 140.

According to Mr. Weisberg, however, as of January 1979, neither the FBI nor the Department of Justice have begun to comply with his specific requestes regarding both the King and Kennedy assassinations. In the King case, for example, Mr. Weisberg said the FBI "continues to make substitutes for my actual request," and has "deliberately misniterpreted" his requests. He also claimed
