Dear Gary,

Please keep this in strictest confidence.

I send it only to inform you about "insults."

Jim is a fine person who at the same time is his own worst enemy.

Along with having strange notions.

My wife does his tax work. That is all confidential from me not only because I want it that way but because she would insist on ~~p~~ it. But there is what I cannot help knowing because he gives me messages for her and because from my hearing problems we use speaker phones.

Jim can't keep his own records straight no matter what the cost to him. ^{and his wife,} Or as it works out to my wife, who is a year older than I and has her own physical limitations. She does an inordinate amount of work trying to straighten his messes out and does not bill him for it when she really ought not be in that position and is really not up to it. He can't keep his own records straight because he has no time and he takes a case like the Exner case?

Or takes that time from his Hickey case?

And wastes whatever money IRG gets from his wife, him or both?

While efforts to straighten him out seem to fail, he is worth the effort.

That is not to insult him.

The prior pleading referred to is at least a half-inch thick. I did go over it for him and then never heard a word from him. That wasted that much time for me.

If he did not want my help, why did he ask it and then waste that time for me?

He even had Zaid, from the return address, mail this to me.

No time. But for Exner he has time.

Best,
