Dear Mr. Weisberg:

I have received the five pages of your "a few comments only," dated October 11th. I have even read some of it. That I have not read all of it is due to the low regard in which I hold you. To me, Sir, you are not a writer and will not be one even if you should vanity-publish a hundred of your "volumes." Being a writer presupposes one's control over one's words. You don't have that; you are a man whose words (thoughts and emotions) are all too often utterly compulsive, without your having even the remotest ability to discern their true nature. This being the case, I find myself utterly indifferent to any of your reactions to any of my writings.

Sincerely,

M. S. Arnoni
