'Sunday Today' makes a capital move in January

It's official: NBC's Sunday Today is moving to Washington, D.C., effective January. The program will continue to consist of taped reports, but co-anchors Maria Shriver and Garrick Utley will work out of Washington. The move, which was reported in October in USA TODAY, is largely seen as a cost-saving measure. Sunday Today will use the same crews and studio used by Meet the Press.

JFK PERSPECTIVE: Everywhere you look for the next week, you'll see TV remembrances of John F. Kennedy, who was assassinated Nov. 22, 1963. Kicking them off this week will be two CBS series: a seven-parter on CBS This Morning and an eight-parter on CBS Evening News.

The morning series will touch on such topics as JFK's career, assassination theories, media coverage (with Dan Rather as guest Thursday) and race relations. The Evening News will investigate doubts surrounding the Warren Commission report.

KENNEDY: TV will mark the anniversary of his killing.
