LBJ SWORN ON FUNERAL PLANE

Dallas, Nov. 22 (Special)—Lyndon Baines Johnson was sworn in as 36th President of the United States at 2:39 P. M. (3:39 P. M., New York time) today aboard the Presidential plane just before it carried the body of the assassinated President back to Washington.

The oath was administered in the forward compartment by U. S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes. Kennedy's body was in the rear compartment.

Present at the solemn ceremony at Dallas' Love Field were Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy and Mrs. Ladybird Johnson, the new First Lady. Johnson asked as many members of the White House staff as possible to crowd into the executive suite of the plane to witness the ceremony. Judge Hughes, a Kennedy appointee, went as she administered the oath to the former Vice President. Mrs. Kennedy also wept.

Johnson Calls for National Unity

"This is a sad time for all people. We have suffered a loss that cannot be weighed. For me it is a deep personal tragedy. I know the world shares the sorrow that Mrs. Kennedy and her family bear. I will do my best. That is all I can do. I ask your help—and God's."—President Johnson, standing with his wife as they arrive at the airport in Washington last night, made this statement, his first to the nation.

They Won't Forget the Day

By JOSEPH CASSIDY, EDWARD DILLON and HENRY LEE
The way they reacted in April almost a hundred years ago was the way New Yorkers reacted yesterday. News of Lincoln's assassination was so horrifying, Carl Sandburg wrote, that for the rest of their lives men remembered where they were, what they were doing when they heard about it.

New Yorkers—from City Hall Plaza to Grand Central, from the Long Island Rail Road terminal in Brooklyn to Logan's Bar at 880 Gerard Ave. in the Bronx—will always remember yesterday.

"Must Have Been a Fanatic"
First, there was stunned disbelief that President Kennedy had been assassinated.

At International Airport, Jackson Meyer, a salesman of 13 Union Ave., Spring Lake, N. J., exclaimed: "I'm positively stunned! The person who did it must have been a fanatic."

Up in Logan's, where Matt Logan, the owner, was tending bar, a patron started shaking when the flash came over TV. Then he pushed his drink aside, left his change and ran out.

"I'm shocked and dumfounded!" Norman Weiner of Brooklyn said as the news came over the loudspeakers in Grand Central. A man coming out of the Valencia Theatre, 165th St. and Jamaica Ave., Jamaica, Queens, exclaimed: "Is this Candid Camera! I don't believe it!"

"I'm Shocked Speechless"
Then he looked behind the reporter's back for the hidden camera.

Even a man to whom violence is no stranger, Acting Chief of Detectives Walter Henning, could only say: "I'm terribly shocked, I'm shocked speechless..."

All over town, for the first half hour, there was mostly silence, except for the flashes coming over transistor radios on the streets and the TVs in the crowd.

people neither ate nor drank. Then there was anger. In mingled grief and rage, (Continued on page 8 col. 1)

The President Is Assassinated As Dallas Multitude Hails Him

By PAUL HEALY
Of The News Washington Bureau

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 22—President Kennedy was mortally wounded by a rifle bullet at 12:31 P. M. (1:31 P. M. New York time) today as he rode in an open convertible limousine leading a motorcade through the streets of Dallas. He died in Parkland Hospital 29 minutes later. Gov. John Connally of Texas was gravely wounded by the same assassin while seated directly in front of the President.

Seized soon after as the suspected slayer was a Soviet-loving young Texan, Lee Harvey Oswald of Fort Worth. Police think he may have fired the fatal round from the fifth floor of a building which the motorcade was passing.

Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, riding two cars behind, was unscathed, but in severe shock. He was admitted to the same hospital as the President and the Governor a few minutes after the shooting. But Johnson was soon released.

Johnson was sworn in as the 36th President of the United States at 2:39 P.M. (3:39 P.M. New York time) in the forward compartment of the Presidential plane at the airport. The new President and the body of the assassinated President were then flown to Washington.

An Enthusiastic Welcome

Kennedy and his wife, Jacqueline, had landed at Love Field, Dallas, in bright sunny weather with the 46-year-old Governor and his wife and the Johnsons just over two hours before and had received an enthusiastic ovation from 250,000 Texans in this Republican city.

The Kennedys and the Connallys were discussing the warmth of the welcome when the bullet entered Kennedy's head.

A half hour later, the nation's first Catholic President was dead. The last rites were administered in the hospital by the Rev. Oscar Huber, pastor of nearby Holy Trinity Church.

The sudden death of Kennedy, 46, the nation's youngest elected President, stunned the nation.

The assassination left the citizens of Dallas in shock. They had just begun to congratulate themselves on giving a dignified, friendly reception to the President, particularly after the humiliation of the Adlai Stevenson incident just last month. On Oct. 21, Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, was spat upon and struck with a pocket sign here.

All Taken by Surprise

The swiftness of the attack caught Secret Servicemen and motorcycle outriders by surprise. They quickly unlimbered automatic rifles and pistols, but it was too late. Kennedy was dying.

Mrs. Kennedy cradled her husband's bloodsoaked head in her arms as the limousine rushed to Parkland Hospital. She had screamed in horror, "Oh, no!" as the shots rang out and he slumped down, but she did not give way to hysteria. She repeated unbelievably, again and again, "Oh, no!"

Even as the car arrived at the hospital, a hurry-up call was sent out for blood and for top specialists. But the President died without regaining consciousness.

Dr. Malcolm Perry, 34, later reported: "There was an

Leftist Accused of Murders Of Kennedy and Dallas Cop

By HENRY MACHIRELLA

(Staff Correspondent of THE NEWS)

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 22—Lee Harvey Oswald, a 24-year old ex-marine who once tried to renounce his U. S. citizenship and become a Soviet citizen, was charged tonight with the murder of President Kennedy. Oswald was also charged with the murder of a Dallas policeman.

(Associated Press Wirefoto) Lee Harvey Oswald, 24, waves hands in Dallas police station. Previously charged in murder of a Dallas policeman, he also was charged last night with the assassination of President Kennedy.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade and Dallas Police Chief Jesse E. Curry said in a joint statement that the murder charges were based on "physical evidence." They added that Oswald had not confessed either crime.

Captured in Theatre

Oswald was captured in a movie theatre in a Dallas residential district, a 10-minute drive from where Kennedy was ambushed, one hour and 14 minutes after the President was shot.

He was pulled, kicking and screaming, from the theatre after, police said, he killed Dallas policeman J.D. Tippett, 37, the father of three.

That shooting occurred 47 minutes after Kennedy was assassinated.

Wade said that Oswald "has been charged with both murders—Officer Tippett and President Kennedy."

The district attorney said that Oswald has denied everything but added: "We figure we have sufficient evidence to convict him."

Mourning Is Proclaimed

Gov. Rockefeller yesterday proclaimed a 30-day period of mourning throughout the state for murdered President Kennedy, and Mayor Wagner issued a similar order for the city. The Governor directed all state officials to close the day of the funeral. Wagner hailed the President's contribution to the cause of free men. He ordered all city flags lowered to half staff.

entrance wound below his Adam's apple. There was another wound in the back of his head." Both wounds, some of the specialists explained, could have been caused by a single bullet.

Dr. Perry said medical help was immediately available, "but at this point the President's condition was critical and moribund."

Mrs. Kennedy was spattered with blood from her husband's wound. Mrs. Connally was drenched with blood. She clutched her husband, lying on the floorboard as he slumped from his jump seat.

A Connally assistant, Bill Stinson, said he talked to the Governor in the hospital operating room where Connally was undergoing emergency treatment. Stinson asked Connally how it happened and the Governor replied: "I don't know. I guess from the back. They got the President, too."

Governor Conscious
Doctors said Connally "seems to have been struck by just one bullet, which entered the back of his chest and moved outward, taking out and fragmenting a portion of a rib. The bullet emerged from his chest and struck his wrist and thigh. The thigh wound is trivial."

Connally later was reported fully conscious and responding to questions. He was described as being in satisfactory condition. In a four-hour operation surgeons removed the shattered rib and mended a damaged lung. They said that if he had not turned after the first shot, the slug would probably have pierced his heart.

He gasped to an aid, right after being wounded. "Take care of Nellie" (his wife).

Wife Recalls Scene
Mrs. Connally said later that when the firing broke out "Jackie grabbed the President and I grabbed John and we both ducked down in the car."

Connally's wife was given a room next to his. Their oldest son, John, 17, also was at the hospital. Two younger children stayed at the Governor's mansion in Austin.

Julian A. Read, aid to the Governor, told newsmen that "Mrs. Connally said her husband and the President and the two wives had just been commenting on what a friendly reception the President had received in Dallas."

Connally Turned
"She said she observed: 'You can't say Dallas wasn't friendly to you today.' She said it was then the President was struck by the bullet. She said she saw her rounding a slight curve where there is a triple overpass. By this time, the motorcade was in a more industrialized area and the huge crowds had thinned out.

What Yarborough Saw
Sen. Ralph Yarborough (D-Tex.), who was riding with Vice President Johnson two cars behind the Kennedy limousine, with a Secret Service car in between, told newsmen later in a voice choked with emotion: "It is too horrible to describe. We did not see them shot, but we knew immediately they were. I saw a Secret Service man in the car beating his fists on the back as they drove off, in frustration, anger and despair."

Newsmen Heard Shots
The press bus in which I was riding was farther back. We also heard the shots as the motorcade ahead of us was just rounding a curve.

Then the Presidential limousine left the motorcade at furious speed. We found later that it was bound for Parkland Memorial Hospital, three miles away—five minutes at fast city speed.

Our press bus did not stop, but proceeded to the Trade Mart Building, where the President was to have been guest at a luncheon given in his honor by three Dallas civic organizations.

2 Boys Witnessed It.
Two 17-year-old boys sitting atop a signboard, waiting to take pictures of the motorcade, witnessed the shooting. They were Mike Cargile and Charles Hopkins.

Cargile said that when they looked at the car, right after the shots rang out, they saw Mrs. Kennedy lying across the President on the floorboards and a Secret Service man shielding them both with his body.

Connally, they said, was lying

A Last Kiss on the Lips Of Her Dead Husband

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 22 (AP)—Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio said tonight he watched the nation's First Lady, caked with blood, kiss her lifeless husband on the lips in a last good-bye and take the ring off her finger and place it on his.

"I couldn't take it," Gonzalez said. "I walked away." Minutes later, Gonzalez said, four attendants wheeled the bronze coffin containing the body of John F. Kennedy out of Dallas' Parkland Hospital for the last trip home.

slumped in the limp seat, his wife kneeling next to him, trying to tend him.

Charles Brohm, 38, who was standing five yards away from the car, reported: "He (Kennedy) was waving as the first shot hit him—and then that awful look crossed his face."

Later Assistant Presidential Press Secretary Malcolm Kidduff hustled newsmen into a hospital classroom, mounted the lectern and read in a choked voice:

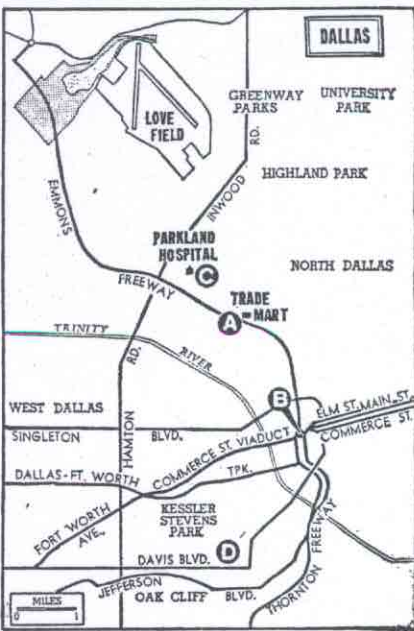

"President John F. Kennedy died at approximately 1 P. M. here in Dallas. He died of a gunshot wound in the brain. I have no other details regarding the assassination of the President." He said in reply to a question:

"No, he did not regain consciousness."

The President had arrived in Texas yesterday morning for a two-day, five-city swing which had been billed as "hospitential," except for a fund-raising dinner at $100 a plate which had been scheduled for Austin, the capital, tonight.

The President spoke in San Antonio at noon yesterday and at Houston last night, when Mrs. Kennedy also addressed an assembly in Spanish.

Friends said that her first thought following her husband's death was for her children, Caroline, 6, and John Jr., 3 next week. A third child, Patrick Bouvier Kennedy, died in August after less than two days of life.

President Kennedy was on route to Trade Mart (A) when shot on motorcade vehicle (B) on FRANKLIN ST. in PARKLAND HOSP. AREA. Within hour suspect was captured in the area (C).

Talented Lady Bird Is Now the First Lady

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—The new First Lady of the United States is a petite 50-year-old brunette who once said of the prospects of her husband becoming President: "I regard the job with awe."

For 20 years Lady Bird Johnson has been at her husband's side in Washington, jacking his bags for campaign trips, standing with him on receiving lines, taking notes for him in the shorthand she learned in college.

She is a successful business woman, owning radio and television stations in Texas, and maintaining supervision over them from an office in her home here.

Today she was with her husband in Dallas when an assassin's bullet killed President Kennedy and made Lyndon Johnson the 36th President.

Mrs. Johnson was born Claudia Alta Taylor here, 22, 1912, but no one has called her that since she was 2, when a nursemaid dubbed her "Lady Bird."

An All-LBJ Family

As such, her initials conform to those of the rest of the family. Their daughters are Lynda Bird, 19, and Lucy Barnes, 15; there is Lyndon B. of course. The family dog is Little Beazie, and even the family's ranch at Johnson City, Tex., is the LBJ ranch.

The daughter of a wealthy Texas rancher, Thomas Jefferson Taylor, Mrs. Johnson studied journalism at the University of Texas, took graduate courses qualifying her to teach the second grade and was prepared, with shorthand, typing and business courses, to work as a secretary if need be.

One day with Johnson in 1934—she was 21 then and he 26—changed all that when he asked her to marry him.

Johnson was then just starting out in politics as secretary to a Texas Congressman. The political pace quickened, and for 24 years Mrs. Johnson stamped Texas when her husband ran for the House and Senate.

"I Regard It With Awe"

Like many another politician's wife, she has readily admitted "I'm not deeply informed on political issues." When the idea of Johnson for President was mentioned in 1956 she said, "I regard the job with awe."

Mrs. Johnson worries about her husband's health. There is the memory of his heart attack in 1955; also "simply because he works too hard and too long."

As the wife of a Vice President Mrs. Johnson's role expanded far beyond the confines of Texas and Washington. She has toured the world, entertained a Russian astronaut and occasionally pinched his for Jacqueline Kennedy.

Unostentatious Party Giver

She will step into the role of hostess of the White House with much experience. As the mistress of a big house in the fashionable Spring Valley section of Washington, she has given numerous parties—though she has not sought to attain the title of the previous occupant, Mrs. Pele-Mesta. The Johnsons purchased the house from Mrs. Mesta in 1951.

Mrs. Johnson not only manages the daily affairs of her home here, but also those of the LBJ ranch. She enjoys hunting deer and doves, says she "adores"

With her husband's government role so heavy, Mrs. Johnson has had to serve, at times, as father and mother to their daughters. Lynda is a sophomore at the University of Texas and engaged to a Navy ensign. Lucy attends the National Cathedral School for Girls in Washington.

In March, 1960, when her husband was seeking the Presidential nomination, Mrs. Johnson was asked what she'd actually like to do.

"I'd just like to go home and live in Austin and have a regular solid sort of life, lots of time for the children, go to church and participate in civic and cultural life of the town."

This now seems beyond the realm of possibility in the immediate future.

Caroline and John Jr. Not Told; Mother Must Break the News

By FRANK HOLEMAN

Washington, Nov. 22 (News Bureau)—Winsome Caroline Kennedy and her frisky little brother, John Fitzgerald Kennedy Jr., were busy at their normal, happy activities in the White House today when their father was slain by an assassin's bullet in Dallas.

Caroline, who will be 6 Thanksgiving Day, was attending her first grade classes at the special White House school on the second floor of the executive mansion.

John Jr., who will be 3 next Monday, was frolicking in the family quarters under the care of Maud Shaw, the children's British nurse.

Disclosure Awaits Jackie

The task of telling them that their father was dead was left to Mrs. Kennedy when she arrived home from Texas.

At the Kennedy compound in Hyannis Port, on Cape Cod, Kennedy's parents learned of the shooting from a workman.

Hearing a radio report, the workman rushed into the house to tell Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy. The slain President's father, Joseph, 75, was awakened from a nap to hear about the tragedy. He is a semi-invalid, having suffered a stroke in December, 1959. Mrs. Kennedy is 72.

At this time, the Kennedys did not know that the shot had been fatal. They telephoned Parkland Hospital in Dallas and later were told of their son's death. The President had planned to spend the Thanksgiving holiday at Hyannis Port next week.

The Kennedys remained in seclusion inside their house. On a sidewalk outside, three or four children stood weeping.

The dead President's brother, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, was having lunch at his home here when the news reached him. His personal secretary said the Attorney General planned to stay at the Kennedy Hickory Hill, 1999 1/2, in Hyannis Port.

At 2:10 P.M., shortly after the President's death was announced, he drove to his Georgetown home. Later, with his sister, Mrs. Eunice Shriver, he flew to the Kennedy compound at Hyannis Port.

Rosemary Hears It on TV

Jefferson, Wis., Nov. 22 (UPI)—President Kennedy's younger sister, Rosemary, learned of his assassination today while watching a TV broadcast from Dallas, where he was shot.

Rosemary, who is 44, has lived for the past 20 years at St. Colleta's, a school for exceptional children and retarded older persons.

The Kennedy Heritage: Triumph and Tragedy

By GERRY VAN DER HEUVEL

Washington, Nov. 22 (News Bureau)—Tragedy, that icy, familiar specter for the Kennedys, stalked the family again today with the President's assassination, the climax of a series of searing misfortunes.

Joseph P. Kennedy and his wife, the indomitable Rose, have worn their joys proudly for the world to see and share. They have shared their sorrows, too, with a notable strength that hid their grief from the public eye.

Didn't Give Up

Possessing great wealth and blessed with a large closely knit family, their gifts were great. They chose to bear their unpopularity without recoiling from life's struggle.

The first cloud to darken their lives was an attack of spinal meningitis which left their first daughter, Rosemary, mentally retarded. They took strength from it to go on to help others similarly afflicted.

World War II and its aftermath, however, provided a series of misfortunes that shook the family to its roots.

First the future President, then a naval lieutenant, was reported missing after his PT boat had been rammed and sunk by a Japanese destroyer off the Solomon Islands. After one of the war's near-miraculous rescue missions, he was recovering in a naval hospital when the family received word that his older brother, Joe Jr., had been killed in a plane explosion over the English Channel.

Still More Death

Three weeks later daughter Kathleen's husband, the Marquess of Hartington, was killed in action in Normandy. Kathleen herself, was killed four years later in a plane crash in France. The President came near death, once more as he was operated on for the back injury he received during the war, his wife, Jacqueline suffered two miscarriages, and in 1951, after his son had attained the crowning ambition of his life, the Presidency, Joe Sr. suffered a stroke.

The tough, energetic head of the family now could neither speak nor move about without assistance. The greatest blow to Jack and Jackie Kennedy, however, was the death of their infant son, born prematurely at the Otis Air Force Base Hospital on Cape Cod last August.

Spartans-Illini Will Play Today

By Dana Mozley

While Princeton, Dartmouth, Harvard and Yale postponed their Ivy League games today because of the death of President Kennedy, Michigan State officials overruled Gov. George Romney's postponement request and elected to go through with the Spartans' game against Illinois.

The Michigan Governor had asked that the game, which will decide the Big Ten's Rose Bowl representative, be postponed. MSU's Board of Trustees, however, met and voted to play the game as scheduled at East Lansing.

THE STILL UNSETTLED Ivy League title, which would have been decided had Yale played Harvard and Princeton met Dartmouth today, may be settled next Saturday.

The Tigers, who need only a win or tie against Dartmouth to clinch Ivy honors, will meet the Big Green, Nov. 30, at Princeton.

In announcing the postponement or cancellation of the Harvard-Yale classic, the university presidents, Nathan Marsh Pusey of Harvard and Kingman Brewster Jr. of Yale, said in a joint statement:

"OUT OF RESPECT for the memory of the late President of the United States, we have decided that athletic and social activities between Harvard and Yale Universities shall not take place this weekend."

This marks the first postponement of an event between the two schools since the inauguration of their athletic rivalry in 1875.

WHETHER THE Harvard-Yale game will be played at a later date is doubtful. A Harvard spokesman, who wished to remain anonymous, said last night he was "sure" it would be cancelled.

Harvard-Yale was the first of the football games called off. In short order yesterday afternoon, Princeton-Dartmouth, Columbia-Rutgers, Boston College-Hover University, Colorado-Air Force, North Carolina-Duke and others were postponed.

MICHIGAN STATE was a 5½-point favorite to beat the upstart, coming Illinois on the Spartans turf. State, with a 4-0-1 record through the conference, could get to the Rose Bowl with either a win or tie. Illinois, 4-1-1, needed to win.

The MSU-Illini game is on the 10th anniversary of the date the Spartans won their first berth in the Rose Bowl.

The smallest player on the field will be giving Illinois congnition. Six, Sherman Lewis, the Spartans' 152-pound halfback, has five runs of 80 yards or better and is ever ready to break any game wide open.

THE ILLINI, like the Spartans, have an exceptionally solid defense, built around their All-America center-linebacker, Dick Butkus. They also have a fullback, Joe Grabowski, who has hammered 406 yards rushing.

Another game, in Lincoln, Neb., would determine whether Oklahomo or Nebraska will win the Big Eight title and go to the Orange Bowl. In all likelihood, the second party in Miami on New Year's Day will be Pittsburgh.

Only in the East, where most football has been called off, was the weather forecast as good today. The Midwest will range from showers to snow flurries and there'll be rain everywhere else except in Southern California.

McElhenny Set to Shine If Webster Can't Play

By Red Foley

With Alex Webster's participation against the Cardinals still doubtful, Hugh McElhenny may finally find out if every cloud really does have a silver lining. Webster jogged during yesterday's brief Stadium workout, but Allie Sherman admitted the fullback's condition was questionable.

If Webster's muscle injury keeps him idle, his absence will create a backfield berth for the 34-year-old McElhenny, Sherman probably will open with Y. A. Tittle, Joe Morrison, Frank Gifford and Phil King.

SO FAR THIS season he has carried the ball only 43 times for 181 yards. Up to now he has been used primarily as a punt returner. McElhenny has been sharing the spot with Eddie Dove. The latter fields the majority of enemy punts because of the booters' longtime respect for McElhenny's ability.

The narrow-waisted veteran has handled only a dozen punts. He's averaging 6.2 per return. McElhenny hasn't been thrusting for a shot at a backfield berth. In recent practices he has shown he still possesses a great many of his oldtime moves, feints, stops and starts.

McELHENNY FEELS he can recapture some of his former flare if he's granted a prolonged opportunity at halfback. With Webster limping and Morrison moving to Alex's spot, Sherman may have to afford Mac the chance he has been seeking. Actually, he has been seeking.

fense may be worse off than its running backfield. Dick Lynch, KO'd against the 49ers Sunday and bedded for two days at St. Elizabeth's, may not be able to go all the way.

He worked out yesterday. While he reported no ill aftereffects, Sherman said he wanted to wait a bit longer before making a decision on Lynch.

The fact the Cardinals own two of the league's top pass catchers, Umo (Sonny) Randie and Bobby Joe Conrad, makes it doubly tough on the Giants' anti-aircraft unit.

Local pricemakers peg the Giants 9½-point favorites to knock off the Redskins for the second time this season. They trimmed them, 38-21, in St. Louis, Nov. 3. Still, a Giant defeat coupled with a Brown defeat of Dallas would create a three-way tie at the top.

Conrad: Long Wait for Stardom

St. Louis, Nov. 22 (AP)—The Giants will have their hands full Sunday stopping the Cardinals' Bobby Joe Conrad.

Conrad, the NFL's newest pass-catching sensation, has his hands full catching footballs after years of patient waiting.

THE SANDY-HAIRED, boyish-looking Texan, who wandered from defensive back to running back, to punt and kickoff return man in seven years of football, finally got his chance as a receiver last season. He wasted little time showing what he could do.

The shifty flanker caught 62 passes, third best in the league, for 984 yards. He's better now. He will take 56 catches, tops in the league, for 692 yards and seven TDs into the battle against the first-place Giants of the Eastern Division.

BUT, IT'S BEEN a long wait. "I was a defensive back for Texas A&M in college," he said, "and the third running back on the same team with John David Crow. I didn't do any receiving.

"The Giants drafted me fifth in 1958 as a defensive back, but I was traded to the Cardinals before even playing for New York."

Conrad played defense the first year and then, reunited with Crow, was a running back the next two years, also doubling as a kickoff and punt return man and the club's part time placekicker.

HE MANAGED TO catch 30 passes in 1961, although still a running back.

Then, Wally Lemm took over as Cardinal coach and switched Conrad to flanker.

"I wish I could take all the credit for the idea," said Lemm. "But when I was coaching at Houston in the American League, Walt Schinkman, my assistant coach, was impressed by Bobby's great hands the first time he saw him."

SCHINKMAN AND Lemm had been assistant coaches together with the Cardinals when they were in Chicago.

Appling to KC

Kansas City, Nov. 22 (AP)

—Luke Appling, who spent 20 years as a major league player, has been named a coach for the Athletics.

The club said Appling's primary duty will be instructing hitters. During his playing years with the White Sox, 1930 to 1950, Appling failed to hit 300 in only four seasons and finished with a lifetime BA of .310.

Appling served as coach of the Orioles last season.

Ford Lands Lions for $6 Million

Detroit, Nov. 22 (AP)—As expected, Detroit Lions stockholders wasted little time today in accepting William Clay Ford's $6 million offer to purchase the NFL club.

There were 85 of the 144 stockholders present at Friday morning's meeting in a Detroit hotel. Less than an hour after the doors were closed, it was announced that the offer had been approved and the Detroit Football Co. would be dissolved as a corporation by Jan. 10, 1964.

THE 38-YEAR-OLD Ford, vice-president of Ford Motor Co., has been president of the Lions for the past 2½ years.

It was reported that 94% of the stockholders approved the sale. Only 75% approval was needed to make the offer binding.

The new corporation will be known as Detroit Lions Inc. Ford would be the sole owner.

ASKED IF HE would make any changes in either the management or the coaching staffs, Ford said these announcements would be made after he assumes control of the company on or after Jan. 10, 1964.

Ford is expected to petition the NFL for acceptance. The other 13 clubs are expected to comply.

Shocked, Dismayed Leaders Express Grief.

DAILY NEWS, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1963

By ARTHUR MULLIGAN

Elected officials, political personalities, business executives and religious leaders expressed shock and dismay yesterday at the assassination of President Kennedy.

Gov. Rockefeller, only declared candidate for the Presidency in 1964, canceled a stump tour scheduled to start Sunday in New Hampshire for that state's primaries. Rockefeller said that Kennedy's death was a "terrible tragedy for the nation and the world."

Heartfelt Sympathy

"Mrs. Rockefeller and I join with all New Yorkers and every American in extending heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Kennedy and the President's family. May God grant strength and guidance to Lyndon Johnson as he assumes his grave responsibilities under the tragic circumstances. The prayers of all of us will be with him," he said.

Calls Him Friend

Mayor Wagner, his eyes glistening and his voice breaking with emotion, said at City Hall: "President Kennedy has joined the company of martyrs. 'The enormity of the loss the world has today suffered is incalculable. We pray for the repose of his soul and for the comfort of his widow and children and loved ones.

"The world mourns; the nation mourns; the city mourns. My grief and that of all New Yorkers, I know, is personal and irreplaceable. He was my friend, he was also a friend of man, a friend of peace, a champion and avenger of justice."

Steps at Church

"We each and all have suffered a loss—many losses—for which we cannot be consoled. Hints has reaped its harvest. Now we must not lose by looking any of the great works he was doing and doing so valiantly, so eagerly, so brilliantly. A light has gone out in the world."

Wagner heard the news while he was lunching at the Lotus Club, 5 E. 66th St. Before returning to City Hall, he stopped in to pray at St. Vincent Ferrer's Church, Lexington Ave. and 66th St. Later he wired condolences to Mrs. Jackie Kennedy and assurances of support to Johnson.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower rallied Kennedy's assassination "a despicable act." "I share the sense of shock and dismay that all Americans feel," he said. "Mrs. Eisenhower and I also join with all other citizens in expressing our personal grief and prayerful concern to Mrs. Kennedy and all other members of the family."

Hoover Is Shocked

Former President Herbert Hoover said he was "shocked and grieved." He said that President Kennedy "loved America and has given his life for his country. I join our bereaved nation in heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Kennedy and the President's family."

said that "the nation and the world will share a deep sense of shock and grief over the brutal assassination of the President."

"Mrs. Dewey and I extend to Mrs. Kennedy and the family our heartfelt sympathy in the terrible tragedy which has befallen them."

Baruch's Statement

Bernard Baruch, elder statesman and adviser to Presidents, said: "The American people and the whole world have lost a friend. Peace was John F. Kennedy's dominant goal and he brought the world closer to it. He inherited problems greater and more difficult than those that have faced any other American President. He made progress on these problems and, given time, I believe would have mastered them."

General of the Army Douglas MacArthur sent the following telegram to Mrs. Kennedy:

"I realize the utter futility of words at such a time, but the poignancy of this monumental tragedy. As a former comrade-in-arms, his death kills something within me."

"Tragedy for Nation"

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the man Kennedy defeated for the Presidency, called it a "terrible tragedy for the nation."

"Mrs. Nixon and I have sent a personal message expressing our deepest sympathy to the members of the family in this hour of sorrow."

Nixon also canceled his scheduled appearance next Wednesday as "fall guy" to the Circus Saints and Sinners Club, "out of respect to the memory of the President."

"A Devastating Blow"

Sen. Jacob K. Javits said that the death "has been struck a devastating blow. All our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to Mrs. Kennedy, the President's children and his family. The President, though a political opponent, was a personal friend and I feel his loss very deeply."

Phoned From Florida

City Council President Paul R. Screevano, recuperating in Florida from an operation, phoned his office to state that it was "a terrible shock, an irreparable loss." He said that "President Kennedy has joined martyrs of our nation in the hearts and history of his country and its people."

State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz said he was "utterly shocked at this vile and ruthless act. This is a sad day for all of our civilization."

Manhattan Borough President Edward R. Dudley, a Negro, said: "It's the worst thing that happened in our country in my memory. It is just unbelievable."

Prayers Asked

Prayers for Kennedy and Johnson were asked of all worshippers here in a joint statement issued by Catholic, Jewish and Protestant leaders.

Kennedy Is 4th U.S. President Slain

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—John F. Kennedy is the fourth U. S. President to die at the hands of assassins.

Here are those who have been killed by gunfire:

Abraham Lincoln died April 15, 1865, shot by John Wilkes Booth while he was attending Ford's Theatre here.

Shooting of McKinley

James A. Garfield died Sept. 19, 1881, after having been shot by Charles J. Guiteau on July 2 of that year. Garfield was gunned down while he was passing through the railroad station here about to take a vacation trip.

Johnson Asks For Unity in Tragic Hour

He just across the street in the Executive Office Building. First he met briefly with acting Secretary of State George Ball, Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, and President Kennedy's foreign affairs adviser, McGeorge Bundy. Then he conferred for 45 minutes with Democratic and Republican Congressional leaders.

The White House announced that he had asked for—and received—the leaders' pledge of "united support." Sen. George Smathers (D-Fla.), a personal friend of the slain President, said his "total help and cooperation."

Johnson also called former Presidents Truman and Eisenhower and discussed the funeral arrangements with Kennedy's brother-in-law, Lt. Sargent Shriver. Truman and Eisenhower were scheduled to arrive in Washington to over the weekend.

When the Air Force jet arrived from Dallas with the slain President's body, a yellow elevator truck moved slowly up to the rear door. Members of the White House staff carried the casket from the plane to the truck.

Mrs. Kennedy, with Robert Kennedy holding her hand, stood just behind the casket as the truck's elevator slowly lowered to ground level.

Bircher Regrets

Belmont, Mass., Nov. 22 (AP)—Robert Welch, founder of the John Birch Society, sent a telegram of condolence today to Mrs. John F. Kennedy.

The message read in part: "On behalf of the council of John Birch Society and our members and myself, I wish to express our deep sorrow at so untimely a loss to our nation of its youngest elected President and to convey more particularly to you and to all members of President Kennedy's family our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in your overwhelming personal loss."

The group stood silently, well away from the plane, while Kennedy's body was transferred to the ambulance. The dignitaries did not move forward until the ambulance had left. They met briefly with Johnson and stood at his side as he made his brief address before radio and TV microphones. Afterward, Johnson shook hands with a few officials and then flew to the White House.

At the White House, a somber Johnson walked into the mansion without a word. James Rowley, chief of the Secret Service, escorted Johnson into his new office, the oval room where Kennedy's rocking chair was a prominent feature.

HST Mourns Tragic Loss

Independence, Mo., Nov. 22 (AP)—Former President Harry S. Truman, an intended victim of assassins' bullets 13 years ago this month, said today the assassination of President Kennedy was a tragedy for the nation.

"I am shocked beyond words at the tragedy that has happened to our country and to President Kennedy's family today," Truman said. "He was an able President of State W. Averell Harriman, and members of Johnson's staff.

curtains, hauled up to the truck and the casket was lifted aboard. Both Jacqueline and Robert Kennedy rode in the ambulance. With a final salute from the honor guard, the small cortege moved away from the airport.

Members of the Cabinet and acting department heads led the sorrowing delegation at the airport. Besides Ball and McNamara, Senate leaders Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) and Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill.) also were on hand. Others present included Justice Arthur Goldberg, Undersecretary of State W. Averell Harriman, and members of Johnson's staff.

"This a great nation with great strength, and we have much unfinished business," Rusk said, after praising the "gallantry and wisdom and grace" with which Kennedy had carried his "awesome responsibility" while President.

Rusk spoke at Andrews Air Force Base on his arrival early today with Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon, Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges, Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman, Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall and Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz. The Cabinet group had been on its way to Japan and the third annual U.S.-Japan economic conference, opening Monday, when it received word of Kennedy's assassination. Their plane turned around in mid-Pacific and sped back to Washington.

Six in Cabinet Return, Urge Support for LBJ

Washington, Saturday, Nov. 23 (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk, speaking for a half-dozen members of President Kennedy's Cabinet, today praised President Johnson as "one of our greatest Americans" and urged that he be given full support.

"This a great nation with great strength, and we have much unfinished business," Rusk said, after praising the "gallantry and wisdom and grace" with which Kennedy had carried his "awesome responsibility" while President.

Rusk spoke at Andrews Air Force Base on his arrival early today with Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon, Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges, Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman, Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall and Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz. The Cabinet group had been on its way to Japan and the third annual U.S.-Japan economic conference, opening Monday, when it received word of Kennedy's assassination. Their plane turned around in mid-Pacific and sped back to Washington.

Two Puerto Ricans attempted on Nov. 2, 1950, to storm Blair House where President Harry S. Truman was living during renovation of the White House. One assassin was killed, the other wounded, and three White House Guards were wounded, one fatally. The wounded assassin, Oscar Collazo, was sentenced to die, but Truman commuted his sentence to life imprisonment.

Lincoln's assassin, actor John Wilkes Booth, was tracked down and slain by soldiers. Garfield's slayer, a disappointed office-seeker, was hanged. Leon Czolgosz, McKinley's demented attacker, also was executed, as was Zangara.

William McKinley died Sept. 14, 1901, shot by an anarchist eight days earlier while he was attending the Pan American Exposition in Buffalo.

Kennedy died today, slain by a hidden sniper while driving down a street in Dallas, Tex.

Assassination attempts have stepped up in recent years.

Blair House Incident

Franklin D. Roosevelt was shot at in Miami Feb. 15, 1933, while he was President-elect. Giuseppe Zangara, an unemployed bricklayer with an ulcerated stomach, shot at F.D.R. and killed Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago.

longshoremen walked off the piers. Outside the Public Library at Fifth Ave. and 42d St., one of four young sailors on shore leave from a destroyer escort said: "We ought to go down with our ship and destroy Dallas! We need a drink."

A Young Man Screams
Tears streaming down his face, a young man screamed in City Hall Plaza. "What's wrong with you people! Don't you know your President's been shot. I loved the guy—those bastards. Look at them! They don't care that their President was shot!"

A policeman escorted him away.
In Grand Central, Russian-born Anne Odnovalenko, recently arrived from San Francisco, took off her sunglasses, dried her eyes and blurted:

"I'm angry at these groups who call themselves Americans and don't know the meaning—the Bitchers, Gen. Walker. Is this what they wanted? I'm sure this has crushed the hearts of everyone."

Driving through midtown, hackie Morris Knobel heard the news on his cab radio and shouted: "They should take all the people of Dallas and turn them upside down and find who shot him. Would I give them torture? The Russians don't shoot Khrushchev, do they?"

As the city came to life, telephone service was badly slowed, and a company spokesman reported, "Apparently everyone in

New York picked up the phone at once."

He'd Like to Get the Killer
At the Brooklyn Long Island Rail Road terminal, Frank Fusco, 42, a salesman, said: "I didn't like him, but it's a shame. It's horrible! I'd like to go down to Texas and get the guy that did it."

"I was down in El Paso a couple of weeks ago," added Hyman Stein, a manufacturer of 1021 Bryant Ave., Bronx, who was standing nearby. "I'm not surprised. They're a rough bunch down there."

In a tavern just off Times Square, Edwin C. Allen of Rowayton, Conn., a partner in a textile firm, said slowly: "This is shocking. I'm a Republican, but a life is a life. This is not the American way."

In front of Pennsylvania Station, a woman collapsed, and another fainted on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

On a Queens bus, a girl was holding a transistor radio close to her ear. Suddenly, the tears began streaming down her face. "It's true," she said. "He's dead."

The Barber Cries
In his little shop near Times Square, Michopolous Georges, a Greek-born barber, cried, too. "I feel he was a very good boy," he explained. "I cry."

John Faircloth, a Negro, standing in front of a newsstand at 42d St. and Third Ave., was crying as he said, "This can't be! Without doubt, this was the greatest man who has ever been President of the United States."

So was Negro hackie Joseph L. Dailey, who heard the news while bringing a couple from Brooklyn to Manhattan. "It was the first time I cried with white people," he said.

On Canal St., traffic jammed as truck drivers stopped to ask traffic cops if the rumors were true.

"This is going to be one hell of a Thanksgiving Day," observed Thomas Horner, a Volunteer of American Santa Claus, who was standing beside his chimney on Broadway near 4th St.

Lips quivering, Mrs. Grady Jaques, 60, a Negro, heard the news on Jamaica Ave., Queens, and said, "Terrible, terrible! So much hatred and malice against everyone in this country."

At Presentation Church, Parsons Blvd. and 80th Ave., Jamaica, seven-year-old Jim Clark, a parochial school student, said of his nun teacher, "It was the first time I saw my sister cry." And in Pennsylvania Station, another nun was crying over her rosary beads.

Inadequately, but after all there wasn't anything more that could be done, officials reacted by half-staffing flags on public buildings and adjourning courts and UN sessions. The municipal radio-TV stations, WNYC and WNYC-TV, canceled all scheduled programs to give the rest of yesterday's program time—and all of today's—to news of the assassination and memorial music.

The Board of Education announced that schools would open as usual on Monday, and principals will arrange appropriate exercises then or on Tuesday. In many parochial schools, the students were called into assembly to pray and were dismissed early.

Orchestra Silenced
In Wall St., prices went into a tailspin, a flood of orders kept the stock tape 20 minutes behind floor trading and at 2:10 P.M. the market was ordered closed. The American, Cotton, Wool, and Coffee and Sugar Exchanges quickly followed.

Many stores and business firms also announced early closings, and the Broadway legitimate theatre went dark last evening. So did the Metropolitan Opera, where "Goetz and Dancberg" had been scheduled. All off-Broadway theaters went dark, too.

The Philharmonic Orchestra, giving a matinee performance at Philharmonic Hall, abandoned its concert after playing the first number, Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3, with George Szell conducting.

At the Waldorf-Astoria, where former President Eisenhower was to have received an award for distinguished leadership in combating Communism, the Order of Lafayette canceled its annual Freedom Award dinner. At the Astor, the annual Front Page Dinner Dinner scheduled by the Newspaper Women's Club of New York for last night was canceled. At 5 P.M., Radio City Music Hall closed for the night.

On Wall St., people walked with bowed heads as the bells of historic Trinity Church tolled a requiem. At St. Thomas Church uptown, the carillon tolled 10 minutes, then went into "America."

The Cathedral of St. John the Divine was ordered kept open an additional three hours until 3 P.M., and a service by patriotic societies of New York at 4 P.M. is being rescheduled into a memorial service. St. Bartholomew's also will hold a memorial at 11 A.M. tomorrow.

In St. Patrick's Cathedral, an empty easel was before the altar rail, an American flag over it. At either end, three candles flickered. Many women, caught without hats or even handkerchiefs—used paper or facial tissues to cover their heads. In a front pew a young girl dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief and asked of everyone and of no one: "Why?"

Just Last Week, He Wanted No Special Guard

By EDWARD KIRKMAN

Top city police with many years of experience in guarding Presidents and visiting heads of state said yesterday that President Kennedy took too many chances.

On Nov. 14—eight days before the assassin's bullet struck him down—the President rode through New York City without a motorcycle escort and with fewer guards than police and the Secret Service wanted him to have.

Authorities believed that Kennedy was too responsive to criticism for his own good.

Heavily Guarded Until Last Week

A frequent visitor to New York City, the President until last week had been heavily guarded, had a motorcycle escort, and traveled heavily-guarded streets which had been cleared of other traffic to make way for him.

There were those who spoke disparagingly of the interruption of normal living occasioned by the President's visits, and this disturbed him.

Small Guard Not Enough for Safety

He insisted last week that there be no motorcycle escort and that his motorcade stop for traffic lights. His principal protection on the ride from LaGuardia Field to the Hotel Carlyle, 76th St. and Madison Ave., was two city police cars in front of his limousine and one car with Secret Service men immediately behind the limousine.

During the ride into Manhattan, cars containing newsmen on occasion came dangerously close to the side of the President's car before being waved off. While the President's car was stopped for a red light at 72d St. and Madison Ave., an amateur photographer stepped up close and took pictures before he was chased off.

All this was clear evidence to security men that the small guard insisted upon by the President was not adequate to insure his safety.

Queried on this point, Police Commissioner Michael Murphy officially said, "No comment." But those close to him knew that he and his top brass and the Secret Service were deeply concerned.

New President—Hard-Driving, Soft-Spoken Old Political Pro

By JERRY GREENE

Washington, Nov. 22 (NEWS Bureau) — Lyndon Baines Johnson, 55, the 36th President of the U. S., is a proud practicing politician whose devotion to his public career has been absolute from the start.

Certainly no Vice President other than Richard Nixon ever worked so hard to make that office a living piece of the governmental machinery and to prepare himself for the fateful occasion that struck with the assassin's bullet today.

A Hard Worker

Johnson is a big man, 6-foot-3 and weighing about 185 pounds. His thinning hair is black, his eyes dark and restless. His face usually is tanned for, despite the back-breaking work schedule he has kept in Washington and elsewhere around the globe, Johnson manages to spend frequent but always hectic leisure hours outdoors at his LBJ ranch near Austin, Tex.

For all his bigness, the new President is a bundle of nervous energy, impatient, working early and late, driving himself and his staff to a point near but never quite to exhaustion.

No tougher politician ever hit the national scene, yet Johnson is as sensitive as the rest. He complained once that newspapers were always referring to him as a "back-room operator." "They say I'm sensitive," he said bitterly. "How would you like your little daughter to read that you are a back-room operator?"

Some Truth in It

There has been, in fact, little of the back-room way of operating about the President's public life. He accomplished much of his persuasion in private conversations—but there has been little secret about what he was doing and why and with whom. Johnson's customary rising hour during a normal working week has been around 7 A. M., and he has been a man who liked a substantial breakfast, brought to his bedroom while he was catching up on his morning reading, newspapers and official documents and reports.

He has been a great family man; his family has been close and affectionate. Johnson met Claudia Alta Taylor in 1934 in an office in Austin where she was working after graduating from Texas University with degrees in liberal arts and journalism. Miss Taylor's Negro nurse said shortly after her birth that she looked just like a little lady bird—and Lady Bird has been her name since that time.

An Old-Line Texan

Johnson's family had been in Texas six generations. He was born on a farm near Stonewall, Aug. 27, 1908, and the family moved in 1913 to Johnson City.

The President's father served a term in the State Legislature with the late House Speaker Sam Rayburn, and from a friendship development of the man in the nation's highest office today. The President was graduated from Southwest State Teachers College at San Marcos in 1930 and for two years taught in Houston, Tex., public schools, leaving to become secretary to Rep. Richard Kleberg (D-Tex.) in 1932.

The Direct Approach He was serving as secretary and learning his way around Washington when, on a visit home, he met Lady Bird. Two months later, after incessant wooing by long-distance telephone, Lady Bird accepted the impetuous young man. In 1935 he left the Congressional office to become state director of the National Youth Administration, and two years later he was elected to Congress to fill a vacancy.

Johnson was an ardent New Dealer. (At the time he was picked as Vice Presidential nominee by John Kennedy, the ultra-left liberals in the party assailed Johnson as an arch-conservative.)

The late President Roosevelt became fond of Johnson, and the young Congressman began to move up swiftly in party circles.

His Political "Daddy" Roosevelt was high on the young politician even before he met him—for Johnson had been elected while running on a platform supporting FDR's plan to pack the Supreme Court, and dedication of that sort was hard to find. Roosevelt saw to it that Johnson was given a place on the powerful Naval Affairs Committee.

It did no harm that Johnson also was the protégé of Sam Rayburn. The tutelage of that veteran was invaluable.

to the House. On Dec. 9, 1941, he was commissioned a lieutenant commander in the Navy, saw active duty with the fleet in the Southwest Pacific, then was recalled to his Congressional seat with others who had gone into the armed forces in the summer of 1942.

Johnson was pretty much a straight New Dealer while he was in the House. In 1941 he had run for the Senate against W. Lee (Poppy) O'Daniel and was beaten by only 1,411 votes. They count them close in some Texas counties. When Johnson ran for the Senate again in 1948, he won by just 87 votes out of a million cast, earning the nickname Landslide Lyndon, which he would quite readily forget.

A Legend in His Time Johnson's manipulation of his office, his maneuvering of the Senate itself became almost legendary while the man was still at it.

He was a skillful compromiser, careful always to win and maintain support from important Senators in both parties. His record put him in the middle of the road on many important issues, and this rapidly cost him the backing of the leftist elements in the Democratic Party.

Johnson sensed Ike's tremendous popularity with the public, and, instead of putting himself in the position of a petty sniper, he led the Senate Democrats time and again in support of the GOP Administration's programs.

Hardly a Shy Type

He is a vain man. His clothes are expensive but tasteful and conservative. He has a passion for seeing his own initials on everything in sight—the LBJ brand. Ray would call it back in Texas. He has the brand on

UN Assembly Stunned; Envoys Pray, Adjourn

By PETER WALLENBERG

The UN General Assembly and all its committees adjourned their meetings yesterday out of respect to the memory of President Kennedy.

Death Every 20 Years

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—President Kennedy's death continues the coincidence that Presidents elected at 20-year intervals die in zero-numbered years dis in office.

The list includes:
1840—William Henry Harrison
1860—Abraham Lincoln
1880—James A. Garfield
1900—William McKinley
1920—Warren G. Harding
1940—Franklin D. Roosevelt
1960—John F. Kennedy

Three of the previous Presidents on the list were assassinated—Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley.

his handkerchiefs, his shirts, his cuff links.

He had a dog named Little Roanoke Johnson. And when his daughters were born—they were Lynda Bird, March 19, 1944, and Lucy Baines, July 2, 1947.

Almost from his earliest days in the Senate, Johnson's most powerful backer was Sen. Richard Russell (D-Ga.), and it was Russell who largely was responsible for the election of Johnson as Democratic leader in 1953.

Johnson suffered a severe heart attack in mid-1955, and for a time was given no better than a 50-50 chance to live. But, like Ike, he came back from this one strong and since then has been running at a pace here and in frequent worldwide travels that leaves his staff worn and haggard.

His voice is soft and gentle in casual conversation, with a touch of drawl. But when he gets up to speak, he can go on indefinitely without a sign of a note, on any or all subjects. His oratory is loud and vigorous; he is a thumper of the old school.

A Driving Man

Johnson has always demanded a high degree of efficiency from his staff, along with the long hours. When he was Senator, his secretaries sometimes were answering 600 letters a day and catching a blast if there were any left unanswered.

He was picked as Vice President to the surprise of almost everybody, including himself, for he had fought an aggressive campaign against Kennedy. Then Johnson in his grimly serious way—there isn't a lot of humor about the man—set out determinedly to see that he would not become like former Vice Presidents, men with little to do except slide downhill into obscurity. Johnson was trained deliberately for the Presidency almost as if they had been a responsibility in Kennedy's mind.

Delegates heard the announcement of the President's assassination in stunned silence from Assembly President Carlos Sosa-Rodriguez of Venezuela. Both he and UN Secretary General U Thant expressed their "profound sorrow at this most tragic event." The envoys of 111 nations then rose to their feet for a minute of silent prayer.

Adlai Learns at Luncheon All national flags outside the Assembly building were taken down and the blue UN flag lowered to half staff.

U.S. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, who was lunching with fellow diplomats in a private dining room at the UN was informed by an aid that the President had been shot.

Thant was informed of the shooting while attending a lunch with former President Eisenhower at the Chatham Hotel, given by an organization called "UN, We Believe." He immediately returned to the UN and sent a message to Mrs. Kennedy.

'47 Congress Set Order of Succession

Washington, Nov. 22 (Special) —The order of succession to the Presidency as amended by an Act of Congress in 1947 provides that the Vice President shall be sworn into office immediately on the death of a President.

If there is no Vice President at the time, the Speaker of the House becomes President. The president pro tempore of the Senate is next in line.

Following these, the succession is as follows: Secretary of State; Secretary of Defense; Attorney General; Postmaster General; Secretary of the Interior; Secretary of Agriculture; Secretary of Commerce, and Secretary of Labor.

One Cabinet post, that of Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, is not on the list. The post was created after the law was amended and has never been written in.

Schools Will Mourn

Flags on all city schools yesterday were down at half-staff in mourning for President Kennedy on instructions of Acting Schools Superintendent Bernard E. Donovan. Donovan said the schools will be open as usual next week, with principals under instructions to hold appropriate exercises in the President's memory on Monday of the week.

Suspect Collared In Assassination

Wade said that he will ask the death penalty for Oswald. Looking tired, and sunken eyed, Oswald told reporters: "The first I heard of it (the President's assassination) was when I read about it in the papers."

Oswald, dressed in a rumpled brown shirt, open to the waist, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace David Johnson and charged with the murder of Kennedy at 11:26 P.M. (12:26 A.M. New York time).

Like Russia, He Says
After an earlier arraignment on the charge of killing Tippett, Oswald said: "This isn't justice. I might as well be in Russia."

Over and over he told police: "I didn't kill nobody, sir."

Kennedy and Texas Gov. John Connally were shot at a 45-degree angle, apparently from the fifth floor of the Texas School Book Depository Building, where Oswald worked.

Police said it was determined that Oswald was in the building when the President was shot, at 12:31 P.M. (1:31 P.M. New York time).

A cheap Italian-made 7.05 mm. rifle, mounted with a four-power telescopic sight, was found on the fifth floor of the building. Three bullets had been fired from the weapon.

Dallas police Lt. Carl Day carries rifle believed to be assassination weapon.

Has Russian Wife
Oswald, who grew up in nearby Fort Worth, is about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs about 160 pounds. He has light brown hair, and is slightly balding. His eyes are dark, and intent.

He has a Russian wife, Marina, who is still being questioned by police, and two small children.

Oswald joined the Marines only 23 days after starting high school. He served on active duty for almost three years, and twice received summary courts-martial for insubordination while stationed in Japan.

Undesirable Discharge
Because he attempted to renounce his U. S. citizenship in Russia, Oswald was given an undesirable discharge from the Marine Reserves in 1960.

He was 20 when he went to Russia as a tourist. Two weeks after his arrival, on Oct. 31, 1959, he strode into the U.S. Embassy in the Soviet capital and slapped his American passport down on the consul's desk, announcing: "I've made up my mind, I'm through."

He said he wanted to renounce his American citizenship and become a Soviet citizen for "political reasons." He said he "could not be happy living under capitalism" and would "never return to the United States for any reason."

He swore to this affidavit: "I affirm that my allegiance is to the Soviet Socialist Republic." The embassy urged him not to sign any papers renouncing his citizenship until he was sure the Soviet Union would accept him. He apparently never actually renounced U. S. citizenship.

Asked Senator's Help
He stayed in Russia three years, working in a factory in Minsk.

After meeting and marrying a Russian girl, he had a change of heart. Early last year he wrote to Sen. John Tower (R-Tex.) seeking the Senator's aid in getting permission to return home. He said the Russians had refused him an exit visa.

"I beseech you, Sen. Tower, to raise the question of holding by the Soviet Union of a citizen of the U.S., against his will and expressed desires," Oswald wrote.

In the summer last year, the U.S. Embassy issued a passport to Oswald, his pregnant wife and one infant for a return trip to the U.S. The embassy loaned him $425 for ship passage. Although he said then that he had become disillusioned with life under Communism, he slung into left wing causes soon after returning to the U.S.

He first went to New Orleans, where relatives lived, and tried to infiltrate an anti-Castro organization.

Rented Room in Dallas
"He offered himself as a former marine to train Cubans for an invasion," related Carlos Bringer, New Orleans delegate for the Miami-based Cuban Student Directorate. "I was suspicious of him from the start. But, frankly, I thought he might be an agent from the FBI or CIA trying to find out what we might be up to."

"Then, a few days later, I encountered him on Canal Street distributing 'Viva Fidel Castro' literature."

Oswald became an open pro-Castro propagandist when he returned to Texas later in the year.

Oswald's Russian wife and children live in suburban Irving. Six weeks ago, he rented a box-like room in Dallas for $8 a week, under the alias of O. H. Lee.

In Oswald's room police found

Body Will Lie in State Today In East Room of White House

Washington, Nov. 22 (NEWS Bureau)—President Kennedy's body will lie in state in the East Room of the White House tomorrow, when his family, his successor, high government officials and diplomats pay last respects.

The family will view the body at 10 A. M., President Johnson at 11, with House Speaker John W. McCormack, the ex-Presidents and members of the executive branch of the government. The Supreme Court, members of Congress and governors will pay their respects in the afternoon, and members of the diplomatic corps at 5 P. M.

Sunday the casket will be taken in solemn state up Pennsylvania Ave. to the Capitol, where it will lie in state in the vast Rotunda until 10 A. M. Monday on the catafalque first used to hold the casket of Abraham Lincoln. It will then be taken to St. Matthew's Cathedral, where a Pontifical Requiem Mass will be celebrated at noon by Richard Cardinal Cushing, archbishop of Boston.

After making speech in Fort Worth yesterday morning, President Kennedy shakes hands with member of Tarrant County sheriff's posse.

a leather pistol holster and some books on Communism and political magazines.

Tippett was shot down in the street in the Oak Cliff District, about four miles from the scene of the President's assassination and five blocks from the Texas Theatre, where Oswald was captured later.

Fitted Description
Police said Tippett stopped Oswald because he fitted the description broadcast over the police radio of one of the "auspicious persons" seen in the neighborhood where Kennedy was shot.

Apparently, before Tippett could say anything, Oswald fired, killing him instantly.

Several persons saw Oswald stuff a pistol into his belt, run down the street and enter the movie house. A theatre cushioner phoned police.

Four policemen went in after him. As the officers approached, Oswald rose and said:

"This is it." Police said he aimed his revolver at Patrolman M. N. MacDonald and pulled the trigger, but that the pistol misfired.

Officers Ray Hawkins, C. T. Walker and Bob Carroll leaped at him.

Oswald fought with his hands and also kicked. When he arrived at police headquarters in handcuffs there was a cut over his eye. His face appeared swollen.

He charged police brutality.

Kennedy Was Hit First, Says Governor's Wife

Dallas, Nov. 22 (UPI)—Mrs. John Connally, wife of the wounded Governor of Texas, said today she thinks President Kennedy was shot first.

She told the story of the shooting to Julian Read, an aid to the Governor.

She said the President was in the right rear seat of the open-top limousine. Mrs. Kennedy was at his left. Connally faced the President on a jump seat and Mrs. Connally faced the First Lady.

Then the Shots
"They had just gone through town. They were pleased at the reception they had just received," Read said.

"They got ready to go through the underpass. Mrs. Connally heard a shot. When the first shot was fired, Connally turned in his seat and almost instantly was hit.

"Straight to Hospital"
"She does not know about the third shot, but it may have been the one that hit the Governor's wrist," Read said.

"Jackie grabbed the President and Mrs. Connally grabbed Con-

Two Secret Servicemen were in the front of the telephone-equipped limousine.

"Mrs. Connally does not remember her husband saying anything."

Oswald Tags Self as Marxist, Denies He's a Commie

New Orleans, Nov. 22 (AP)—Lee Harvey Oswald described himself in a radio interview here last summer as a Marxist but denied he was a Communist.

Oswald, 24, a onetime U.S. Marine who lived three years in Russia and married a Russian girl, was arrested today in Dallas.

He was seized in the slaying of a Dallas policeman and is being questioned in connection with President Kennedy's death.

Oswald appeared on a panel titled "Conversation with Lee Harvey Oswald" at the Fair Play for Cuba committee.

On the panel, Oswald was asked what the difference between a Marxist and a Communist.

"Well," Oswald replied, "the difference is primarily the difference between a country like Ghana, Guinea, Yugoslavia, China or Russia."

"The difference, I said," Oswald continued, "is a very great difference. Many parties, many countries, are based on Marxism. Many nations such as Great Britain, display very, very, very specific characteristics. I might wanted to give up his American citizenship.

"At no time, as I say, was I... did I, renounce my citizenship or attempt to renounce my citizenship," Oswald said.

An interviewer questioned Oswald about reports that he had turned in his passport at the American embassy in Moscow, telling officials he had applied for soviet citizenship.

"It seems to me," the interviewer said, "you've renounced your American citizenship. You've renounced in connection with..."

LEGAL STEAL

By E.X. Ferrars

THEY STAY SO FAR. DR. COLIN LOCKIE is being hard over the nation and Scotland as he arrives in London from Scotland. It is CLYDE of his childhood days. She tells him the picture they used to call the Decoral death-woman, missing in the car theft, has turned up at an auction sale near her home. A woman, it was bought by FORTUNA GIBBER for 110 pounds. There comes an English law that provides if stolen property is sold on the open market and the purchaser has no knowledge of the theft, it can't be reclaimed. MR. DICKMAN, solicitor, explains the secret law doesn't apply in Scotland. Colin has a friend who has been in the law who sold him up. They get into the picture and together they drive to Scotland and find the picture in the hands of a woman. With FORTUNA SMITH, once engaged to Colin's Aunt Dolly, tried to be a solicitor. He had an affair with Dolly's mother and must have told her he stole the picture. She was valuable, and she in turn told the police. They hide the picture until their legal position is determined.

A Tentative Answer

AS SOON as the sisters had gone to bed, Colin took it down, made a parcel of it with some sacking and string and carried it up to the loft. If its hiding place behind the water tank was unlikely to save it from Edmund Greer, if he ever came looking for it again, at least there was not much chance that Sergeant Campbell would hear of it as long as it was up there.

Next morning, promising to visit the aunts' solicitors in Edinburgh as soon as they could see him and to let the aunts know the results of the interview, Colin and Ginny set off again in Harriest car along the narrow, rough road round the loch.

For a long time, Ginny was silent. Once or twice, when Colin tried to talk to her, she gave no sign that she had even heard.

"All right," he exploded at last, suddenly becoming intensely angry himself. "Let's talk about Foster-Smith. And your mother. And let's not forget John Clitheroe."

"Let's have it all out in the open. I'll tell you what I think. I think Foster-Smith discovered the value of the picture. I think he told your mother about it. I think she told Greer. I think he came up to take a look at the picture, dressed in a bee veil, agreed with Foster-Smith about what it was, held me up and did everything else, including rigging the market overt business with the Lakes. And, at the time of the sale, he sent your mother off to Spain to protect her, in case it could ever be said that she ought to have recognized the picture."

He paused. There was no answer. Colin began to think that he might as well lapse into a walk himself. But there was still one thing on his mind that insisted on being said.

"Ginny, I didn't want to talk to Aunt Clara about your mother. But I had to tell her a good deal of the story. For their safety, now that they've got the picture back, they had to know the sort of man Greer is. And once I'd told Aunt Clara a little, she very quickly filled in the rest herself."

URGES HIM TO SEEK MORE FACTS

A few minutes later, Ginny at last broke her silence, to speak in a soft, detached voice, as if she were discussing the weather with a stranger.

"Colin, I know very little about the sort of work you do," she said, "but doesn't it ever happen to you that you collect a whole lot of data about something or other and then when you try to find a theory to explain things, you find there are several that seem to fit equally well?"

"Yes, of course," he said.

"And what do you do then? Do you just pick one at random, because you like it, or do you try to find out a few more facts?"

"All right, I see what you mean," he answered. "Well, when we got to Edinburgh, I'm going looking for a few more facts. I'm going to call on Willie Foster-Smith. I got his address from Aunt Clara. Meanwhile, suppose you tell me the true facts about John Clitheroe."

"You're quite right about him, he doesn't exist," she said in the same remote tone.

"And, leaving out everything to do with the picture for the moment, it was through Foster-Smith you know so much about me?"

"Yes."

"You probably know him yourself."

"Of course."

"Then in God's name," he said desperately, "why didn't you tell me so straight away?"

"Because I'm quite friendly with your aunts and I didn't think that would last if they knew he still saw my mother."

ASSUMED THE AIR OF POLITE STANGERS

"But what has that got to do with me? I thought I was supposed to be trying to help you."

"Yes, but I can't see any reason why you should know everything about me," she said.

After that, Colin sped her withdrawal and when they talked it was like polite strangers.

They reached Edinburgh in the early afternoon. The rain had been steady for the last hour and the city was wearing its blunkest face. Prince's Street was a cold gray channel of wind. The human faces in the streets looked pinched and blue. It would have seemed that the spring had been forgotten and winter come back again but for the crocuses in the grass in Charlotte Square, which Colin had to circle three times before he found a parking space near to the offices of Messrs. Davitt and Gunn, W.S.

As Vickerman and Ogg to Ginny's mother, so Messrs. Davitt and Gunn to Colin's aunts were names that stood for all the worldly good sense that they feared they lacked themselves. The names had been familiar to Colin all his life, but he had never yet had to pass through the dignified Adam doorway or make his way through the warren of offices concealed by the handsome stone front of the house.

Admitted by an old man, Colin and Ginny were taken to a waiting room and left there while the old man went to find out if any of the partners could see them. Eventually, they were fetched to see Mr. Davitt.

He rose to greet them from behind a very neat desk. He was a slender, neat-looking man, who moved and spoke quietly and was very much more

Treated as Outcast by Her In-Laws

By DORIS BLAKE

"I have one big problem — my in-laws! When my husband's mother or sister call the house, they ask for my husband, but if he is not home, they just hang up. They don't leave a message or even talk to me. All the time, they tell my husband to come over and visit them and my husband goes, but they never ask me or put a foot in my house."

"What can I do? Don't they act funny?" NERVOUS.

Just answering your question on its surface value, we have to admit that your in-laws do act strangely and that their telephone technique is rude and ignorant in the extreme. However, we'd like to probe deeper to be sure that their behavior isn't a reaction to something you've done — or haven't done.

FOR EXAMPLE, THEIR failure to invite you to their home may stem from your failure to invite them to yours. Too often these days, a bride becomes so accustomed to being showered and feted that she fails to repay social obligations to her new relatives.

In-laws are particularly touchy on such a matter because they are entering into a new relationship and wary of all alicits, real or imagined.

IT MAY BE THAT your mother and sister-in-law sense that you either dislike them or would prefer to stand at arm's length. Their behavior strongly suggests that they are cutting you down to size. If you sincerely want to set things to rights, extend a friendly invitation to come for dinner and then do your best to make the occasion enjoyable.

Of course, there's the distinct possibility that your in-laws disapproved of your marriage all along, and now, despite the fact that the wedding's taken place, they are determined to set as if you didn't exist. If such is the case, you'll need all the patience you can muster not to allow their stubbornness to drive a wedge between you and your husband.

Doris Blake will answer letters concerning affairs of the heart. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope to MISS DORIS BLAKE, THE NEWS, 226 E. 42D ST., NEW YORK 10017.

Cambodia Goes to Peking

Phnom Penh, Cambodia, Nov. 22 (Reuters) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk said today that "Cambodia's best friend" was Communist China.

After requesting Wednesday that the United States aid program be canceled, the prince disclosed that he received a note from the Chinese government promising full military, political and diplomatic support in case of "aggression" from South Viet Nam or Thailand.

The prince said Cambodia would not turn Communist if there was no aggression, but could turn Red if other Communist countries allowed it to be free like Yugoslavia.

3 LI Men Plead Innocent In Trooper Shotgun Killing

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 22 (AP)—Three Long Island men, accused of the shot-gun slaying of Delaware state trooper Robert A. Paris, pleaded innocent today at their arraignment on a first-degree murder indictment.

Thomas H. Winaett, 30, Wilbert A. Weekley, 26, both of Long Beach, and Edward J. Mayerhofer, 29, of Island Park, also pleaded innocent to two charges of fourth degree burglary, and two charges of grand larceny. The state charges that Winaett fatally shot Paris on Oct. 17, when the trooper—in plain clothes—caught the men with a carload of stolen television sets and other furnishings at a motel.

Weekly and Mayerhofer are charged with being accomplices in the slaying.

The three were captured the following day in the woods, about one mile from the motel. Police units from three states which had participated in an around-the-clock manhunt.

The trio's court appointed attorneys have until next Friday to show cause why indictments should be set aside.

The robbery, apparently carefully planned, was pulled in seconds at 12:40 P.M., in view of 50 workmen only 25 yards away.

Inside the Fence

The bandits wore ordinary work clothes and were not noticed as they waited inside the fence surrounding the site, standing in front of the trailer-shack used by the Bartley Construction Co. of Bayside.

When the car pulled up with the firm's payroll clerk, Anthony Lauro, 37, and two other men employes, the robbers immediately produced guns and demanded the payroll.

The driver, Walter Newling, 28, of Wantagh, jumped out and made a grab for one of the thugs. The robber fired a .25 caliber pistol, and the bullet grazed

Cancel Opera

Because of the assassination of President Kennedy the Brooklyn Academy of Music has cancelled this afternoon's presentation of Wagner's opera "Rienzi." Lauro, who was in the back seat with Kenneth McAlpin, 26, of South Setauket, threw two manila envelopes with the money out of the window. The bandits grabbed them, raced to the street and south on 34th St. to New York Ave. There, they jumped into a 1961 white auto and sped off.

Newling was treated across the street at the Medical Center and sent home. Two 15-story dormitories for the center are being built at the site.

Shalleck dismissed the larceny charge because of insufficient evidence. But fined Creque $750 dollars for double parking.

Boldly, Kennedy Risked A-War in Cuba Crisis

The youngest man ever elected President of the United States, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, was the first Chief Executive to risk the possibility of nuclear war.

Unhesitatingly, he faced the danger with a show of force that caused Soviet Premier Khrushchev to back down. The Soviet leader withdrew missiles from their threatening positions in Cuba in late 1962, and set the stage for a new round in U.S.-Soviet relations.

That new round was climaxed with the signing by the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union of a limited nuclear test ban agreement this year.

But upon the shoulders of the 46-year-old President rested the unusual cares of war times, unusual throughout the world and at home.

Strengthened Forces In West Germany

With characteristic sureness, Kennedy faced Russia's determination to rid West Berlin of Allied occupation; his answer was to strengthen American forces in West Germany. He also kept American troops in Southeast Asia to thwart Communist penetration in that area.

Through economic aid, he sought to hold Latin America against determined Communist penetration and the spread of Castroism from Communist Cuba. He offered the hand of aid to the newly-formed nations of Africa feeling their way toward stability.

In Europe, he faced the problem of holding together the North Atlantic Treaty Organization despite French President de Gaulle's determination not to take direction or protection from the U.S.

At home, he faced a growing crisis over integration and became embroiled with the steel industry over a threatened price increase. He faced a nationwide rail strike and fought for a tax cut that he felt was necessary to spur the economy and to avoid the possibility of a recession.

Called for Public Support On Rights, Aid, Taxes

Time and again, he took his fight to the people, calling for support in his battle to prevent Congressional cuts in his foreign aid program, for support of his civil rights program, and to enact aid for his tax program.

Perhaps his most dramatic and important appearance before the people came in October, 1962, when he told them that Russian nuclear missiles were poised in Cuba—94 miles from U.S. shores—and aimed at the heart of this country.

Moving with certainty, he demanded that Khrushchev remove the missiles, ordered a naval quarantine on such offensive weapons being sent to Cuba and turned the southern tip of Florida into an armed camp.

For five days a tense world waited, then heaved a huge sigh of relief when Khrushchev announced he had ordered work stopped on the Cuban missile bases, that the offensive missiles in Cuba would be crated and returned to the Soviet Union, and that the United Nations could verify the dismantling. Such inspection, however, was barred by Cuban Premier Castro.

Bay of Pigs Invasion Is Repelled by Castro

Since his inauguration on Jan. 20, 1961, Cuba was a constant irritation to Kennedy. Shortly after the inauguration, Cuban refugees, in an operation supported by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, attempted to wrest their homeland from Castro in the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Without U.S. military aid, however, the invasion was a fiasco—crushed by Castro's Russian-built military machine. And U.S. prestige abroad sank.

After the easing of the Cuban missile crisis, the 1,113 Cubans captured in the invasion were released through negotiations conducted with Castro by James B. Donovan, New York attorney.

In an emotional ceremony in Miami's Orange Bowl just before Christmas, 1962, Kennedy accepted the invasion flag from the released prisoners and told them: "I can assure you that this flag will be returned to this brigade in a free Cuba."

Brought in Youthful, Vigorous Administration

Kennedy, the first Catholic to be elected President, was swept into the office with his youthful, vigorous administration in a storm of parties, extravaganzas and oratory.

The inauguration climaxed a hectic and glorious year for Kennedy. It had been a year of victories—in seven primary contests, at the Democratic National Convention in July and, finally, at the polls in November. And, in addition, his 31-year-old wife, Jacqueline, presented him with his first son, John F. Jr., on Nov. 25, 1960.

He entered office in a surge of personal popularity. With his strikingly attractive wife and their children—there was just one then, the irreplaceable Caroline—they made one of the most appealing and photogenic families ever to occupy the White House.

Their style, their tastes, their preferences in sports from touch football to water skiing, swept the nation in a Jack and Jackie fad.

His undisputed personal popularity did not protect Kennedy from the lash of criticism that accompanied some of the efforts of his Administration. Lawmakers did not fall over themselves to get his program passed.

Created Peace Corps, Raised Minimum Wage

But among his major accomplishments were creation of the Peace Corps, increase of the minimum wage to $1.25, increased Social Security benefits, creation of the Alliance for Progress for aid to Latin America, and passage of the Trade Expansion Act, which gave the President unprecedented tariff-cutting powers.

Also, Congressional approval to purchase up to $100 million in United Nations bonds to help the world organization over its financial crisis, adoption of Congressional resolution calling for armed resistance, if necessary, to the forcible extension of aggression or subversive activities by Cuba's Communist regime to other countries in the hemisphere.

No man to stand on formality, Kennedy whipped around Palm Beach, Fla., his winter vacation home, behind the wheel of his own convertible.

Bodyguards Get Slip in New York

On trips to New York, he sometimes gave his bodyguards the slip, sneaking out of a side door of the Carlyle Hotel for dinner and a show. In Washington, Secret Service agents threw up their hands in despair when Kennedy wound up a fatiguing Inauguration Day by attending five inaugurations, balls, and then dropping in at a neighbor's party for an hour and a half.

Kennedy, born in the Boston suburb of Brookline on May 29, 1917, had an impressive record behind him years before he reached the Presidency. He was a best-selling author at 23, a war hero at 26, a U.S. Representative at 30 and a Senator at 35.

Harvard-educated, scion of one of the nation's wealthiest families, he avoided the life of ease that could have been his and, instead, directed his sights on the highest office in the land. At 31, Kennedy became the beneficiary of a $3 million trust fund (his father had promised to set one up for each of his nine children, and made good on the promise), and when he assumed the Presidency his annual income from trust funds was considerably more than $100,000.

Jacqueline, Caroline Contributed to Picture

His wife was the former Jacqueline Lee Bouvier, daughter of a wealthy New York stock broker, reared in Park Avenue and Newport, R. I., and schooled at the Sorbonne. The Kennedys were married at Newport in 1953 by Archbishop (now Cardinal) Richard Cushing of Boston. Pope Pius XII sent a special blessing.

The Kennedy's two young children—John F. Jr. and Caroline—were another source of the President's appeal. Diapers and Dr. Spock had never before been adjuncts of the White House. The alert and pixyish Caroline, 3 years old when her parents became the first couple of the land, was photographed almost as much as her daddy and her antics received wide coverage.

Kennedy was the second of the nine children of Joseph P. Kennedy, a controversial figure who piled up a fortune estimated at $200 million to $400 million in real estate, banking, liquor, finance and motion pictures.

He and Father Differed About Foreign Policy

When Kennedy began his Senate career in 1952, he and his father found themselves "in complete disagreement," in the elder Kennedy's own words, on foreign policy. They observed a truce of silence on political affairs, particularly during the 1960 campaign, and the father emerged from the shadows only after his son had won the Presidency.

During World War II, Kennedy joined the Navy and became a PT boat commander. The Army had rejected him because of a back injury he suffered while playing junior varsity football at Harvard.

On Aug. 2, 1943, a Japanese destroyer knifed through the fog off the Solomon Islands and sliced his PT boat in two. Two men were killed and Kennedy clung to the bow of the vessel, which miraculously stayed afloat for 10 hours, with 10 other survivors.

His First Book at 23; 2d Won Pulitzer Prize

The back injury resulted in two major operations, one in 1945 and one in 1954. The second brought him close to death. Pope Pius XII called him a special benediction and the last rites of the Catholic Church were administered.

Kennedy was a product of Chestnut School, Harvard, where Economics. He produced his first book, "Why England Slept," in 1940 at the age of 23. On his second literary try in 1956, he won a Pulitzer Prize for his widely acclaimed "Profiles in Courage."

In 1946, despite the fact that veteran Boston politicians called him "the kid," Kennedy overwhelmed four opponents and was elected to the House from the 11th Congressional District. He entered the House with another freshman Representative, Richard M. Nixon, and the two served together on the House Labor Committee.

Kennedy was reelected easily to two more terms and then decided to go for the Senate. He had no trouble nailing down the Democratic nomination in 1952; nobody else wanted it. His opponent was Henry Cabot Lodge, who was rated unbeatable. Ironically, Lodge's isolationist grandfather, Henry Cabot Lodge, had defeated Kennedy's grandfather, Honey Fitz Fitzgerald, in their race for the Senate in 1916.

The Young Pro Amazed the Old Pros

Kennedy amazed politicians with his efficient, professional and devastatingly through campaign.

Lodge, meanwhile, was not watching the store; he was off campaigning for Eisenhower in the general's first bid for the Presidency. While Ike was carrying Massachusetts by 210,000 votes, Kennedy astounded politicians by whipping Lodge by 65,060 votes.

His unprecedented headlong drive for the Presidency brought out in 1960 the largest turnout of voters in history. And when the votes were finally counted, Kennedy had defeated Vice President Nixon by about 118,000 ballots. Kennedy's 34,227,096 popular votes gave him an Electoral College edge of 330 to 219 over Nixon, who got 24,168,546 pop-

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY

While riding yesterday in a gala political parade through downtown Dallas, Tex., President John F. Kennedy was shot in the head by an assassin.

The late President John Fitzgerald Kennedy

President Lyndon Baines Johnson

The 35th President of the United States died at 1 P.M. CST—2 P.M. EST—yesterday.

Thus ends, in a terrible tragedy mourned by the nation and, we feel sure, most of the world, a career that was brilliant and a life that was crowded with excitement, adventure and achievement.

He was a fine figure of a man physically, a charming and magnetic speaker, a genial and delightful host.

And he leaves a family—Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, Caroline, John Jr.—who long since captured the affections of all who admire lovely women and beautiful children.

To them, and to all surviving members of the dramatic Kennedy clan, our deepest and most heartfelt sympathy. Deep sympathy, too, to Texas' Gov. John Connally, who was shot and seriously wounded by the same assassin.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation moved into the case at once. It is a certainty that the FBI's hunt for the killer will be skilled and relentless. We hope—we pray, indeed—that it may be successful.

President Kennedy was succeeded at once by—

—who was at first rumored to have been slightly wounded but later turned out to be safe and sound.

To the new President, we wish the best of luck and a most constructive serving-out of the late President's unexpired term.

We Wish LBJ Luck

LBJ, as he is affectionately called, knows his way around Washington, and particularly around the powerful and sometimes persnickety U.S. Senate.

In wishing him luck in his new post—the most powerful secular office on earth—we are merely wishing the nation luck, because a nation's luck habitually goes up and down with that of its Chief Executive.

We'll refrain from offering the new President any advice at this time, strong though the temptation is and good though the advice might be.

Instead, we'll make a few remarks on the—

IDIOTCY OF ASSASSINATION

—as a means of gaining desired ends in a republic.

Assassination has its uses in such backward countries as Red Russia and Red China. One could indeed, if pressed, nominate several choice candidates for such treatment in both of those nations.

It Works Out In Reverse

In a country such as ours, though, assassination tends only to weaken the cause for which the killer kills.

A prime illustration of this fact was the murder of President Abraham Lincoln by John Wilkes Booth a few days after the Civil War ended in victory for the Union.

Booth thought he was killing a tyrant. In fact, he killed one of the best friends the conquered South had. Lincoln wanted to treat the South like a prodigal son.

His death only put the South's fiercest Northern enemies in charge, and his successor—Andrew Johnson—was not able to defeat their plans to clamp assorted shackles on the South and keep them there for years.

We shall see what the consequences of the assassination of President Kennedy will be. May he rest in peace, as a nation mourns.

THE QUESTION

Frank Leahy maintains that the spirit of winning football is no longer present at Notre Dame, but he doesn't know why. Do you? (Asked of former Notre Dame gridiron stars.)

HOW ASKED

By telephone.

THE ANSWERS

George Vergara, New Rochelle, president Touch-down Club: "Frank is wrong. Who has a more murderous schedule, year in and year out, than Notre Dame? When I played with the Four Horsemen, we were years ahead in football. Today, that superiority no longer exists."

Fred J. Carideo, Philadelphia, former Notre Dame All American: "Yes. The legend of Notre Dame was accomplished by the record of its teams. Every year, a new boy wanted to play for Notre Dame. The poor football record in recent years has discouraged the best players from going there. You can't have a winning spirit with a mediocre team."

Jim Crowley, Scranton, Pa., one of the Four Horsemen: "I don't agree that Notre Dame has lost the winning spirit. I'm sure the present team's spirit and desire are as great as ours were. Blocking and tackling are a good indication of spirit and they do them very well."

Thomas A. Bannon, Staten Island, restaurant executive: "Yes. Notre Dame simply isn't trying to get the players as it once did. I induced Bill Shakespeare to go to Notre Dame. But the alumni can't act as scouts any longer. It's too bad, too, because football brought Notre Dame to prominence."

Joe Kuharich, New York, former Notre Dame football coach: "I have to take exception to Frank's remarks. He's confusing winning spirit with actual victory. The real test of spirit is when a team is losing. Even in defeat, Notre Dame plays aggressively."

Harry Wright, head football coach Merchant Marine Academy: "Well, the tradition and spirit on the campus aren't any less, but Notre Dame doesn't have the caliber of players they once had. Also, the Notre Dame schedule is tougher. For years, we always had an edge, but many other top schools have caught up and surpassed us in getting material."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Please give name and address with letter. We will withhold both on request.

DEBATE GOES ON

Manhattan: One thing became apparent at the recent City Hall hearing on fluoridation—this subject has become more a matter of political principle than of reason. Labor leaders and the Liberal Party were all for compulsory mass medication in our water. And what do they know about it? Mrs. FREEDOM FIRST.

Queens: The Mayor saw fit to hold a referendum on off-track betting, which he knew would benefit him. Why, then, is the public being denied its basic right to vote yes or no on this vital issue? After all, it's the public's money that is to be used, the public health that is in question. RAMON SABBATINI.

Manhattan: Can anyone answer the million dollar question? Whose brother-in-law or cousin—once-removed will turn up as the sole distributor of the untreated water New Yorkers will have to buy, including all bars, grills and restaurants? MARGARET BEADLE.

Carlstadt, N.J.: Would it be impractical to add fluoride to milk at the dairies? Thus, children who consume this milk would get their required dosages of fluoride. Milk so treated could be specially labeled. WENDELL J. KOCH.

Brooklyn: Some object to sodium fluoride as a water additive because this is the same poison used as a roach killer. True. However, chlorine killed thousands in World War I, yet is useful and harmless now in our water supply. Even sodium chloride—common table salt—is a true poison in large amounts. Even an excess of water can be fatal. The amounts of sodium fluoride proposed for our water supply are sufficiently infinitesimal to eliminate any possibility of ill effects. P. CANTALUPO Jr.

WHEN VOTERS ARE IGNORED Brooklyn: I hate gambling, but the coin of democracy is majority rule. Gov. Rockefeller seems oblivious of this fact, judging from his post-election reaction to the off-track betting referendum. It's the Republican Party he belongs, in, not under, the GOP eagle. DENNIS RUSSO.

MORE ON MIKE

Brooklyn: Your Inquiring Photographer goes around asking people dumb questions about Mike Quill. Mike Quill demands that the people of this city ride free on subway and bus lines. Why not? The people of this city paid to buy out the privately owned transportation companies; and those transportation lines belong to them; and they should ride free. And if the city could take over the bus and subway lines it can also take over all other public utilities and operate them for the benefit of the people. H. ZUCKERMAN.

Brooklyn: Once again our gutless Mayor is going to take good care of his pal Mike Quill. The taxpayer and subway sucker be damned. Next candidates: For President, Hoffa; Vice President, Quill; Senator, Wagner, V. A. S.

DOMINICAN MOURNS

Queens: The "Ugly American" seems to be powerful right now in the Dominican Republic's affairs. What is the matter, aim of the U.S. State Department? Do you now know that, if you still defend Juan Bosch and his "titers" government, with the Communists, rabble and the "assnos," you are helping Fidel Castro to become powerful in my long-suffering country? Please do not allow the Communists to become the owners of my beloved country. R. O.

UNCLE SAM'S CASH

Manhattan: Cambodia says to us that they don't want our tarnished $30 million a year of military and economic aid, and our State Department retreats them to please reconsider. The Erie-Lackawanna Railroad asks for a loan of $5 million to keep running a facility necessary to our economy, and the Government says no. To quote from Alice in Wonderland: "This gets curiously and curiously." FRANK A. WHITE.

HOW TO SUCCEED

Oxford, Conn.: The Democrats always said that a poor boy has a better chance in their party. Billie Sol Estes and Bobby (Page-boy) Baker are thriving examples. These two nonentities rose to millionaire status in no time. You never see them rise that fast in the Republican ranks. HORATIO ALGER.

Parted By An Assassin's Shot

The people loved President Kennedy and wherever he went, there were eager hands reaching out to grasp his in greeting and in welcome. This was how it was when he visited Fort Worth, Texas, early yesterday. The people were there and the hands were outstretched. Glum on Disarmament

Detroit, Nov. 22 (AP)—Disarmament Director William C. Foster said today the U. S. economy should be able to switch healthily from defense spending to civilian production if general and complete disarmament occurs. But he saw little prospect that a general disarmament agreement will be reached in the near future. He told a conference on disarmament at the Rockham Educational Memorial that finding alternatives to arms spending is difficult only in the sense of deciding what non-defense spending would be most desirable.

Recess Called In Thompson's Slaying Trial

By THEO WILSON
Staff Correspondent of THE NEWS
Cincinnati, Nov. 22 — While women wept in the corridors outside his trial room, listening to radios turned up full blast, Judge Rolf Fossum adjourned attorney Gene Thompson's murder trial today until Monday. He informed jurors there would be no more testimony until then because of the President's death. The news of the assassination came to the court house immediately after the trial was recessed for lunch. The jurors had returned to their room for the afternoon session when a bailiff was sent to tell them to go home. During the luncheon recess, the corridors were filled with people listening to transistors brought in by some of the trial spectators, who milled around outside the courtroom, waiting to get in. Before court adjourned, Prosecutor William Randall got into testimony the fact that a telephone had been seen in Thompson's auto on the day, March 8, that his wife, Carol, was stabbed and pistol-whipped to death.

The state says Thompson removed the bedroom phone so that his wife would have to answer a call from him in the kitchen. The killer, according to the state, was waiting for her in the basement.

He Breaks Down

During the morning session, Thompson began to cry at the counsel table as he heard attorney R. Donald Kelly describe Gene's "uncontrollable" breakdown on the night Carol was murdered. As Kelly told how Gene wept and "broke down very badly," Thompson buried his eyes in his left hand, clenched his jaws trying to keep from weeping, then removed his glasses and mopped his eyes and blew his nose.

U.S. JUDGE BACKS COHN INDICTMENT

Cohn, attorney and businessman, charged with complicity in efforts to prevent the indictment of four men in a stock fraud case. Judge Dawson held that proof was lacking that the prosecuting attorneys had sufficient evidence

Arrest Aid, Bare 500G Tax Fraud

A $5,500-a-year tax technician, a veteran of 16 years with the Internal Revenue Service, was arrested yesterday on charges of approving fraudulent income tax returns over the last two years which swindled the government out of at least $500,000.

One hundred phony returns have been found so far. The investigation is continuing. The technician, Hyman Marks, 62, of 68 E. 52d St., Brooklyn, was arrested by IRS agents at his work in IRS offices at 210 Livingston St., Brooklyn. He was held in $10,000 bail by U. S. Commissioner Max Schiffman for federal grand jury action.

Accountants Sought

Three accountants, who had prepared the phony returns for individual taxpayers, were to be arrested. Marks allegedly admitted to Assistant U. S. Attorney Michael Gillen that he was paid $10,000 cash by the three accountants to condone the two-year fraud. He faces a possible five-year imprisonment and a $10,000 fine or both. Marks, a polio victim, is married.

Gillen would not say how the swindle was discovered. He said refunds made by the U.S. on the phony returns were divided equally between individual taxpayers and the accountants. The taxpayers will not be prosecuted, but must make full restitution. They allegedly deducted their payroll withholding taxes, by making exorbitant claims for business expenses. Marks was said to have okayed deduction of $4,500 for a man who earned only $7,000. Normally, Marks' okay was final, and no further check was made.

Promote Cops; Rite Cut Short By JFK Death

In police promotion ceremonies, cut short because of the assassination of President Kennedy, Mrs. Margaret Disco was sworn in yesterday as director of the Police Women's Bureau and 47 men were elevated in rank—two to captain, 15 to lieutenant, and 30 to sergeant. Commissioner Murphy, addressing the 200 family members and guests in the lineup room at Police Headquarters, said austere: "In view of the shocking and horrible assassination of our beloved President, today's ceremonies will be very brief."

Urges Prayers for JFK

The Rev. William G. Kalaidjian, pastor of Bedford Park Congregational Church in the Bronx, then recited an invocation, urging all to pray for the soul of President Kennedy, and to pray for strength for his successor. The promoted men and Mrs. Disco took their oaths, and the assemblage filed out.

A Friend in Need...
By SALLY JOY BROWN

Although clothing her family for the colder weather is the most important problem facing Mrs. L. M., a large carriage or twin stroller is needed as well. Her letter:

"I'm so afraid my husband and I aren't going to be able to buy winter clothes that I'm asking for your assistance. He is working but his weekly wage is low. It just doesn't seem possible to make it cover food, rent and apparel. Whatever other children have outgrown or grownups no longer want will help us.

"We have three daughter, 6, 3 and 1½. They can use coats, sweaters, dresses and underwear in sizes 7, 4, 2; shoes 1, 7, 4½. My baby boy is 5 months old. He could use little overalls and tee shirts in size 2 and a baby shoe. A snowsuit will make it possible to take him outdoors. My husband's sizes are 38 jacket, 34 trouser, 16½ shirt, 10½ shoe. I wear 11 in dresses, a 9 shoe.

"Do you think anyone might have a used carriage of a type that would hold my two youngest children? I have difficulty taking them out together. A large one would help, but unfortunately this is way beyond our means.

Please write for Mrs. L. M.'s name and address if you are going to dispose of clothes in the given sizes or have the carriage or twin stroller she needs.

Latest from Paris
by MONIQUE

The most influential single factor determining popular taste in France is probably the chain of 310 Prusnic stores, about to be extended by 40 more outlets. A few years ago, no one with a sense of style or fashion would have gone near them, but part of the new wind blowing through France is the Prusnic team of top fashion and design coordinators led by Parisienne Denise Fayolle, stamping a brand new "home and sidewalk" look. A dazzling all-white silhouette for next summer is keyed to a $6 blouson top, midway between shirt and jacket, cut with an officer collar, patch pockets, shoulder bands and cuffed sleeves. In snowy gabardine, it can be paired to shorts, pants or skirts and capped by a dashing Sherlock Holmes deer-stalker hat with front and back visor—all in the same white fabric. More white brings out a stunning ribbed cotton shirt top with narrow collarband and short sleeves, married to $5 Bermuda shorts or $10 full-length pants. Bands of bright red and mustard braid run down the trouser side-seams and the front zip fastener of the shirt. As a variation on white, the Prusnic palette introduces unusual combinations of cinnamon and faded pink for checked shirts and skirts and pairs black and white checked shirts to sun-faded orange-pink skirts.

As a TV repairman, I was asked by the man of the house, "What's wrong with the set that the picture comes on so dark?" After my replying, "Well, it's merely due to what I told you long ago, my visit here not too long ago, the glass is supposed to be kept clean. Just what do those women do all day long?" You can just imagine my cheeks, when this wife walked into the room and crossly said, "Well, I happen to go to business all day long!"

Parents and Children

Help Handicapped Child

By GLADYS BEVANS

Sickness, tragedy in one form or another, birth defects—these strike regardless of position, power or wealth. Reading the newspaper, one becomes aware of how true this is. In a prominent family, a longed-for baby is born blind, a child is found to be mentally retarded and so on. The prevalence of physical or mental handicaps has a double impact. One is the deprivation suffered by the baby or child who cannot live life fully from a physical or mental or emotional standpoint. The second is visualizing the dedication and the hour-by-hour courage of the parents who must see this child through life. OF COURSE MY admiration goes out too to those who, stricken in adulthood like the eminent columnist Victor Riesel, go on to victory. But at the moment it's children and their parents that I have in mind.

Now, in all the advice (aside from that concerning physical cure, operation and therapy) which doctors and psychologists have to offer the parents of handicapped children, two outstanding aims are to help the children (1) toward a normal relationship with other children and people in general and (2) to achieve a maximum of independence.

Shortcake a Delight In Autumn, Too

By ELLA ELVIN

Don't limit the delights of shortcake desserts to summer. One of the best we ever ate was a lightly-spiced biscuit with canned crushed pineapple, and how gloriously golden it seemed on a recent gray day.

Use your own biscuit recipe, with a little ginger and nutmeg, or use ours. Ginger is an excellent flavor choice with pineapple. Bake double-decker shortcakes (sometimes we use a slightly smaller cutter for the upper biscuit) and split and fill with snowy whipped cream and the crushed fruit. Canned peaches and apricots are also delicious; be sure to drain well.

Pineapple Spiced Shortcake
 Two cups sifted flour
 Three teaspoons baking powder
 One teaspoon salt
 Two tablespoons sugar
 One teaspoon ginger
 One-half teaspoon nutmeg
 One-third cup shortening
 Two-thirds cup milk
 One tablespoon melted butter
 One egg, separated, at 65 degrees
 Bake: Twelve minutes
 One-half pint heavy cream, or more
 Sugar
 One egg
 One can (No. 2) crushed pineapple
 Servings: Eight or more

Sift together into a bowl the flour, baking powder, salt, sugar, ginger and nutmeg. Cut in the shortening, using two knives or a pastry blender until the mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in the milk. Turn dough out on a floured board and pat or roll out to between one fourth and one half inch in thickness. Cut out biscuits and place on baking sheets. Brush half the biscuits with the melted butter and top with another to make the double individual shortcakes. Bake in a hot oven for about 12 minutes or until delicately browned. Remove from oven. In a bowl, beat the heavy cream with a spoonful of sugar and pinch each of ginger and nutmeg until it holds soft peaks. While shortcakes are still slightly warm split and put together with the whipped cream and spoonfuls of drained, crushed pineapple.

Second Round Of 'Mariandl'

"Mariandl's Homecoming," at the 86th St. Casino Theatre, picks up where "Mariandl" left off, and this time the cause of strife is Mariandl's own topsyturvy romance with a hapless government official (Peter Weck).

A silly plot is concocted to salvage her grandfather's horses from the glue factory.

Nothing fresh has been added to part two except two or three unmemorable tunes. Even the cast remains unchanged, so liars Moser still corners the laughs.

The film runs 1 hour, 30 minutes and is not titled. "Budienbrooks" (Part II) is co-featured. KATHLEEN CARROLL

This Delicate Subject Shouldn't Be Avoided

By MAUREEN COUNIHAN

Any lapse, however temporary, from the highest standard of fastidiousness never seems applicable to oneself. All the same, a checkup on this delicate subject is especially necessary in the colder months.

Contrary to popular belief, problems of daintiness do not disappear as the thermometer goes down. Body mechanisms must work even harder to combat the onslaught of cold.

AT THE SAME time, we change from light, self-ventilating clothing to a wardrobe of heavier fabrics and more enveloping design. Fortunately, many of these take to water nowadays but others must go to the cleaners for the absolute fastidiousness we all want.

For all these reasons, you'll want to be sure the deodorant or anti-perspirant you use is serving as efficiently in cold weather as in hot. If it does not, you should investigate a change of product, for you may have built up an immunity to its formula. A switch to a different base formula will re-establish the protection you need.

ALSO, NEVER apply your perfume or cologne directly to your clothing; these scents cling to heavy fabrics and become distorted as the day progresses. Fragrance applied behind the ears, at elbow crooks, etc. is delightful, heightening its bouquet. But it's wiser to limit its use on personal effects to lighter items such as handkerchiefs and scarves.

Careful attention to these pointers will keep the truly fastidious woman as fresh as a summer flower, even in the winter.

All-White Is Season Favorite for Parties

By KAY THOMAS

Have you been anywhere this season where at least one woman was not dressed in a white tweed suit or woolen dress? Chances are that at least three in every daytime gathering have been so attired.

Now the popularity of white has carried over into the late day picture, too.

You will see short theatre suits, long woolen dinner dresses, and of course ball gowns in this most flattering color.

SKETCHED HERE is a late day dress which uses a blend of silk and woolen flecked with gold. It is from Herbert Sondheim.

Flattering to most figures, this dress has a curved and fitted bodice, a softly slim skirt. The sleeves are cut dolman fashion and reach well below the elbow. But it is the little vertical line of the bodice which adds slenderness to the waist. And it is the curved seam from shoulder to below the bust which reveals the figure so effectively.

This dress would be pretty under dark furs or a white or pastel evening coat.

CHATTER!

Ask any doctor. Patients were more venturesome long ago. What modern patient would gulp down the mixture of chopped mice, lynx claws and elk hooves prescribed for rheumatism? Renaissance patients did—and survived. But a Renaissance smoker also emptied his tobacco jar with the blessing of apothecary, barber-surgeon and physician. Why not? Everyone knew tobacco fumes cured lung disease and colds . . . Life-or-death problems were smallpox and plague. Plague was prevented by a morning pick-me-up of boiled sie laced with herbs; plague sores were cured by the application of half a fowl from the kitchen storeroom. But woe to the smallpox sufferer. But woe to the chicken for him. Instead, he himself was literally sopped into the nearest meat-pickling vat—and fumigated. This was followed by a drastic sweating-and-starving treatment . . . Even wilder, however, were the home remedies. Francis Bacon, for instance had his own wart cure: rub the warts with bacon, hang the bacon in the sun and wait. As the bacon went, so went his warts. Then there was the famous Dr. William Harvey. He treated his warts by sitting on a frosty rooftop with his feet in a pail of water . . . It's all true. You can find the facts in a recent issue of MD, Medical News magazine. R.L.

Daily Guide—A slightly sour note can change the tune today. It will be best to write letters, what aince discussions now could end in misunderstandings.

Not the best time to write letters or get into long telephone conversations.

Today and tomorrow not favorable for travel, so keep trips short, or take extra precautions getting around; little stumbles, falls, or bumps are possible.

We move now into quite a long period of emphasis on talk, news, discussions, travel, with most of it tending to be too emotionally unstable for comfort or safety.

A changeableness and unpredictable quality can keep us uneasy, nervous and worried.

With such . . . neral feelings, you may be sure that some people are going to say the wrong thing, or set without thinking. Proceed slowly; zigzag curves ahead.

Happy Birthday, Sagittarius! While your career and ambitions remain a long-term problem, this year you seem to have some distracting problems at home base, and in hidden matters.

Some necessity to buckle down mentally continues, and in February you may run into some trouble. Be extra careful if traveling then.

Domestic conditions may require that you postpone ambitions.

In June and December watch health, and try not to be over-indulgent in diet. Social enjoyment continues through to April.

FAMILY DOCTOR True or False Cross-Eye Is Difficult to Diagnose

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Infant's eyes are not coordinated and often stray during the first six months of life. But children with true cross-eye will not outgrow the condition. This means it is important to recognize this imbalance early because much can be done to preserve sight.

But the wrong diagnosis is easy to make, considering the number of babies and toddlers who are thought to be cross-eyed. Certain facial features common to infants may be responsible for the confusion.

THE BROAD NOSE bridge and prominent folds at the inner corners of the eyes may give the false impression that one eye, mechanism of the eye that is on focus develops but the image produced by the other eye is shut out. This eye may become blind eventually if visual development has not been stimulated for years.

The screen, or cover test, can be used to detect cross-eye in older children. The youngster is asked to fix his gaze on a light or on one object. One orb is covered with a narrow card. Should the uncovered eye move to a new position to focus on the light or object, we can assume it is out of line. If it does not move when the other is covered, presumably that eye is on target.

SHOWER SHAMPOO
P. S. writes: Does shampooing under the shower cause excessive loss of hair?

REPLY
No. Look elsewhere for the cause of excessive hair loss.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions regarding health and hygiene in this column and by mail. He will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individuals. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN, THE NEWS, P. O. BOX 1452, GRAND CENTRAL STATION, NEW YORK 10017.

Dark Day . . .

It wasn't a day for joke writers. It was a day to glue your ear to the radio or the TV and then back to the typewriter and stare at the keys and wonder if we've taken civilization very far in all our years of learning and teaching. I didn't vote for him in '64, but it's sick-making to think of a man in the very prime of life, who did what he did out of honesty and belief, whose great accomplishments were probably still ahead of him . . . and to think of that lovely girl he married, of that enchanting Caroline and that delightful small boy. What on earth could a hurricane like this accomplish for anybody?

There is one restaurant and night club trend in our town which seems to have put things back on the upbeat. That is the trend in favor for restaurants to make them all look like turn-of-the-century scenes. The newest of this type is the Paul Revere Tavern on Lexington Ave. at 48th St., where one of the features is "a yard of ale." The yard comes in a long tube of glass with a bell-shaped opening at one end and, a yard away, a round container. It's a trick to drink it, although it's only about a quart. The place seems to have immediately drawn the Madison Ave. ad fellows, and also all those pretty models.

The town's more solid sports figures and sports producers gathered with Mayor Wagner at Gracie Mansion day before yesterday where the planning was done for the $200,000 needed to be raised as our share of the cost of the Olympics. Afterward, finding Gracie Square a little off the beaten track, I went into Le Boeuf a la Mode restaurant in E. 51st St. This French restaurant, run by Rezia Touca and Eileen Guyader, has been in the neighborhood for years. It's about the only good restaurant there, and I always wonder why I don't go there more often. The prices are right, the atmosphere is relaxed and you find all the nicest Gracie Square folks there, usually.

The Musicians Aid Society, for which he did so much before his tragic death, will sponsor a huge Tribute to Jack Crystal Concert at the Central Plaza on Sunday, Dec. 8. So far, the jazz greats who have volunteered include Teddy Wilson, Ray Bryant, Eddie Condon, Max Kaminsky, Bill Davison, Cozy Cole, Benish Bryant, Gene Krupa, Charlie Shavers and a dozen more. . . . The Newspaper Reporters Association holds its annual Christmas Party at the Brasserie restaurant on Dec. 16. Members and guests must all bring a toy or two, all of which go to needy children.

Shelley Berman of Basin Street and Gloria Lynne of the Village Gate join the RNCC benefit at Carnegie Hall tonight. . . . Margaret Whiting, recording song star, has the lead in "Anything Goes" at the Westchester Dinner Theatre. . . . William B. Williams will benefit dinner dance at the Americana Hotel, tomorrow. The proceeds aid in research into Tay-Sachs and other children's neurological diseases.

Actress Claire Luce has recorded an album of Oscar Wilde for Folkways. . . . David Langston Smyrl, new humorist, headlines today's afternoon concert at the Five Spot. . . . Louis Daniel, associated with many class restaurants, has opened his own Le Chamberlin in W. 46th St. . . . The Country and Western Musical Jamboree at Manhattan Center Sunday afternoon will feature a grand old opey troupe.

Weekend Special

After all these months, the marquise of the Mark Hellinger still proclaims: "Edward Mulhare and Julie Andrews in a New Musical, 'My Fair Lady'." . . . Education is sometimes a wonderful thing.

Take the case of the fellow who served time for armed robbery and, while in stir, learned to read and write. He finished his sentence, was released and is now back in the pen—for forgery. . . . English song star Shirley Bassey gave birth to a baby girl in London. Dad is film producer Kenneth Hume. . . . Also making news in London was that special guest staying in the gold-curtained Adelphi suite of the swank Hotel Waldorf. The guest, named Cornelius, was a pig, or, better, a super-pig. The government spent $300,000 in research before Cornelius entered the world. What's so special about him? Well, he grew to bacon weight 47 days faster than the average porker, and now there'll be a lot of other Corneliuses.

ABC-TV is blueprinting plans to line up a series of one-hour specials starring top entertainers. Instead of emanating from the studios, the shows will be taped from the clubs where the artists are performing. Sammy Davis Jr. and Lena Horne are among those whose services will be sought. . . . Albert Finney the toast of both Broadway and filmdom, may do the leading role in a musical version of "Hobson's Choice," which John Mills created on the screen. Oscar-winning Sammy Cahn and Jimmy Van Heusen have written a 16-song score for the show, due next season. . . . Shelley Berman interrupted his act at Basin Street to do a rave over Kirk Douglas in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." . . . Zach Clayton, the former Harlem Globetrotter, is being boomed for the post of fire commissioner in Philadelphia. . . . The Chateau Madrid picked up the option on the Kids From Spain and they'll stay on till spring.

Miami disk jockey Nickie Lee now holds the record for continuous broadcasting without sleep. Nickie talked for 9 days, 10 hours, interrupted only by the rock 'n' roll platters he spun, thus breaking the 225-hour record set in 1959 by Jacksonville's Dave Hunt. . . . Pretty Leimomi Beamer, a Hawaii fashion designer, has joined the Hawaiian Room show as a featured dancer. She'll also do costumes for the next Tony Cabot revue there. . . . Hairstylist Mr. Marvin now has a Fanny Hill coiffure, but it's forbidden to girls under 18. . . . Pancha, the onetime rumba and samba great, is the new host at Park Ave.'s Pompei restaurant. . . . Arthur Woolley, a distinguished-looking Britisher who owns a rum business, is here to pull a Commander Schweppes. He'll pose for his own ads. . . . Y. A. Tittle passed the salt and pepper to a dining companion at Peter's Backyard.

Lowell Thomas, 71, and just out of the hospital in Detroit, wrote these lines to a friend here: "Dr. Alvarez, who seems to be the High Poobah out here, insisted on my telling him what I had been up to and where I had been this past year. So I mentioned three jaunts around the world, an expedition to the mountains of New Guinea, a visit to the Daisi Lama in his Himalayan retreat, Central Africa, Central Asia, two flights to the South Pole, plus some minor skirting in New England, the Rockies, and New Zealand, and a Christmas jaunt to the mid-Pacific—that, along with my regular radio and film work, a new book, the Explorers Club campaign for a new home, and so on. Whereupon, he urged me to cut down on something. So, trying to think of what has been the greatest strain of all, I've decided to cut down on my golf."

ONLY HUMAN By Sidney Fields So --- He's Not Cary

The round little man with the sad, baggy eyes and the bald head put both hands on the bar and examined his face very carefully in the mirror.

"So I'm not Cary Grant," he announced to the bartender.

The afternoon was young. He was the sole customer.

"Does every dame get a Cary Grant? To hell with her."

The bartender exhibited all the sympathy of a man who had heard it all before. He flicked his rag across the dry bar, nodded, and said nothing. The fat little man tilted his head up, turned a bit, and tried to see his profile in the mirror.

"You know what, Mamie said to me?" he demanded. "She said even if I took drop-dead tonic into a wide grimace and inspected his teeth in the mirror. He opened his mouth wide so he could study his molars too.

"Mamie's got a few false ones. Me, I got all my teeth. . . . Damn! Drop-dead tonic! I'm gonna rasp her in the. . . . A holdup man sticks a gun at you and it's your money or your life. Mamie wants both."

He turned around and asked, "Do I need a haircut?"

The bartender filled the glass first, then with exaggerated concern scanned the low fringe of hair below the gleaming bald top of the little man. He weighed his answer as if he were deciding life, tomorrow, and all the future. Then he shook his head.

"Nah. It's as if you just took one."

"To hell with her," the little man said. "So I'm not Cary Grant. I get so desperate I wanna marry her. See what I mean? You just can't take a positive position with a dame."

Didn't Wait for an Order

"The minute you do, you're licked," the bartender said. He wasn't waiting for an order any more. As soon as the little man's glass was empty he filled it.

The little man stretched up on his toes, as hard as he could, and stared at himself squarely in the mirror.

"She's always making jokes. Get outta that hole you're standin' in, she sez. And right in front of everybody too. Why didn't I ever clout her?"

The pauses between drinks were getting shorter and shorter.

"And once she sez to me, 'Sure I love you, honey—for all you're worth.' He laughed. "That's real funny. Damn! She can be funny. Once, she's dancing with this mug and I ask her why she had to dance with him and she sez, 'Cause I belong to the ASPCA.'"

I couldn't peddle myself to the morgue. Oh, I'm gonna. . . . Gimme a drink, Rye."

The bartender poured him the drink and a beer chaser. The little man turned the other side of his face to the mirror and strained to look at it.

"Who the hell does she think she is?"

He closed his pudgy hand around the whisky glass, lifted it and downed it. He sipped the beer chaser, then looked down at his stomach. He couldn't see his toes.

Asked Her to Marry Him

"So what if I'm fat? Mamie ain't a willow herself, you know. Listen, for two years now I been waitin' her around in style. I even got so desperate I asked her to marry me. So what happens? 'I like a long engagement,' she sez."

He looked down again, over his stomach. "I gotta lose weight."

He pointed to his empty glass, and as the bartender refilled it the little man stretched his lips

Bangs Glass on Bar

He suddenly banged the whisky glass down on the bar. His face flushed red. "Peddle myself to the morgue! Oh, am I gonna tell her. I'll snook her right across the mouth."

He swung his fist in a quick jabbing circle, spun half around, and caught sight of the phone booth. He fumbled in his pockets, then stumbled towards the booth.

The bartender stopped to watch. The little man squeezed into the phone booth, clawed at the receiver, dropped a coin in the slot, and with great searching pauses managed to dial a number.

"Hullo," he breathed into the mouthpiece. "Hullo, Mamie? Mamie baby. I gotta see you honey. I gotta. . . . Yeh. Sure. . . . Sure sweetheart. . . . Yeh baby. I'll be right over. . . ."

DEAR GEORGE: My Mommy and Daddy won't get a baby-sitter for me any more. They always did before. I had such a nice baby-sitter. She was a cuddly blonde lady and we would tell stories and play games on the couch. But my Mommy and Daddy came home early the other night, the finds, and now my baby-sitter is all gone and I am lonesome. P.S.: I am 19 years old. —LONESOME

DEAR LONESOME: Your parents must remember that a child needs proper supervision and should not be left alone and that juvenile delinquency often begins at home and that a child can gain a lot of security from playing games with a cuddly blonde lady on. . . . 19 years old?

Hm, I guess, on second thought, your parents already know that juvenile delinquency begins at home.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THOM McAN: Yeah, the spelling looks pretty fouled up to me, too, but I suppose it's too late to do anything about it now that the signs are up.

Whats Your Question?

"What is behind the continual troubles in the Near East?"—Mrs. O. O., St. Paul, Minn.

In my judgment, a situation and a man. The situation is that the peoples in question are struggling to form an Arab nation, and the birth is difficult. The man is Nasser of Egypt, the "national socialist" who, like Hitler, aims to dominate all neighboring countries.

"What is your explanation of the Soviets' sudden arrest of Professor Barghoorn, whom they knew was just a nosy American professor—quite harmless?"—"Student," New Haven, Conn.

One possible explanation was given in the September 25 issue of Trud, published by the Soviet no-called trade unions. Trud wrote that "hostile persons" have been converting innocent Soviet young people to an "anti-state point of view." It is possible that the Soviet authorities considered Barghoorn to be one of these "hostile persons" and wished to warn foreigners like him to keep away, and young Russians to avoid such foreigners.

N. E. Mowl, of Perth Amboy, N. J. writes to approve my calling present efforts to put the world under a two-power dictatorship, the U. S. A. and the U. S. S. R., a monstrous gang-up. Thanks for the support.

"No doubt you are heartily in favor of pillaging and sacking Poland, Spain, Italy, Greece, etc."

the Hitlerian German Empire, how else?"—August Schoettl, San Diego, Calif.

You make me laugh. The best guarantee against any resurrection of German nationalism is a firm Western alliance including and supporting West Germany in its claim to legitimate reunification as far as the Oder-Neisse line. And the kind of winning policy I advocate calls for direct American confrontation with Russia wherever necessary. Should that fail, not Poland but the United States would be the chief victim, along with the U. S. S. R. But it would not fail.

"Student," New Haven, Conn.

"You stated that 'all Federal courts have accepted the ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment as legal.' Is the U. S. Supreme Court among these?"—Robert O. Weed, M.D., Napa, Calif.

Certainly, in countless decisions, I fail to see why the Supreme Court would enforce decisions under the Fourteenth Amendment unless it considered it part of the law of the land.

To the question: "If a Republican, which presidential candidate would you prefer? If a Democrat, which Republican candidate would you fear most?" Republican answers are equally divided between Rockefeller and Goldwater, with none for Nixon; Democrats seem to favor Gold-

TV WHAT'S ON? RADIO

News of Kennedy's Death Is TV's Saddest Moment

By BEN GROSS

It was a day of deepest tragedy. TV and radio thrived yesterday with reports of and comments on one of the most despicable crimes of our age—the murder of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas, Texas. From the early afternoon hours on, network and independent stations carried the news to millions of stunned New Yorkers.

CBS went off the air at midnight, planning to return at 8 A.M. today, and NBC signed off at 1 A.M. until 7 this morning. Just before that it telecast a mass taped at St. John the Evangelist Church in Philadelphia; but ABC announced it would continue broadcasting and telecasting all night. Most of the other TV stations quit at the midnight hour.

On the channels and kilocycles during the morning, it seemed to be no different than an ordinary day: news reports, movies and situation comedies. Then a bulletin: The President has been shot! Not it couldn't be! One could not believe it. But it was true. Only a few minutes later, flashing across the TV screens there was a picture of President John Kennedy and the caption beneath it read: "1917-1963."

The 35th President of the United States was dead! It was radio rather than TV that carried the first report. At 1:36 P.M., a WABC bulletin informed listeners that the Chief Executive had been shot. Then, almost simultaneously, the networks and the local stations flooded the air with bit-by-bit details of the big story.

Entertainment Vanishes. Regular programming was abandoned . . . schedules were thrown overboard . . . all entertainment shows vanished . . . mingling with the news broadcasts and telecasts came the sounds of solemn memorial music and heartfelt words of tribute from persons of all walks of life.

NBC News threw all of its forces into the coverage, with 70 reporters and technicians dispatched to Dallas, Washington and Boston. CBS and ABC, too, pulled out all stops.

Frank McGee, Bill Ryan, David Brinkley, Chet Huntley (NBC); Walter Cronkite, Eric Sevareid (CBS); Ron Cochran, Ed Silverman, Don Gardiner and Bob Clark (ABC) were among the many reporters facing the mikes and cameras with their accounts of the latest developments.

Music, Prayers

Without pause, from the time of the first bulletin, the Dallas tragedy held the air. The story was interrupted only by the strains of solemn music, prayers and tributes from both the great and the lowly of the world.

At 6:30 P.M. WABC offered readings from the late President's book, "Profiles in Courage," and for 8 P.M., WABC had listed a memorial concert prepared by Alexander Smallens.

The coverage of the networks was first-rate. Despite all of the intense excitement, the reporters and commentators handled their assignments calmly, factually and son by helicopter to the White House and his arrival there in the gloom of the Washington night formed impressive television pictures and equally touching was the tribute of former President Eisenhower.

Special Shows

All of the TV networks presented lengthy special news shows, with the Huntley-Brinkley program (8:30 P.M.) expanded to 90 minutes. Channel 2's Walter Cronkite period (6:30 P.M.) was also enlarged; and with Ron Cochran as anchorman, Channel 7 telecast detailed summaries of all the developments (8:30 P.M.). At midnight it offered a profile of President Johnson.

During the day and evening both WNEW-TV and Channel 13 gave its viewers feeds of ABC-TV's coverage. And in this connection, it was no surprise that NBC and CBS turned in top-notch jobs. What did come as a surprise was the showing made by ABC. Coming on the air with the first bulletin, it remained not only top but occasionally ahead of the news.

Memorable Scenes

For many hours, the screens abounded in memorable scenes: The jumbled, scrambled pictures of a cameraman in the President's motorcade as the fatal shots were fired although the actual collapse of the President was not seen . . . the glimpses of the President as he delivered addresses on historic occasions . . . the words of ABC's radio correspondent Bob Clark from Dallas: "The President is dead!"

Also, the UN delegates standing in silent tribute . . . the films of the arrested suspect . . . and the unforgettable sight of the New York woman bursting into uncontrollable sobs during a street interview, as she heard a portable blast the news of the President's death.

Nov. 22, 1963, brought TV's saddest moment. It was truly a day of infamy.

TV & Radio Cancel Shows

All commercial announcements, entertainment and sports programs have been canceled by New York City TV and radio stations, most of them until after President Kennedy's funeral.

Only news, appropriate sacred music and memorial periods will be aired.

Among the special features scheduled for today on TV is a special Kennedy memorial edition of NBC's Today show, from 7 to 10 A.M., with special emphasis on foreign reactions to the President's assassination. Also, ABC-TV and Radio, will air interviews with historians Henry Steele Commager and James McGregor Burns during the day.

On radio, WMCA and WABC will carry the mass from St. Patrick's Cathedral at 10 and WNYC has listed for 10:30 A.M. a solemn concert conducted by Leopold Stokowski. All other outlets—TV and radio—also are preparing specials in tribute to President Kennedy's memory for today and tomorrow at hours still to be announced.

Frank McGee Walter Cronkite without hysteria. Along the local outlets especially good work was done by John Tillman and others of the WPIX staff.

During the evening hours, the most moving scene came to the home screens shortly after 8 P.M. as the casket containing President Kennedy's body was removed from the airplane, at the Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, and placed into a navy ambulance. Mrs. Kennedy and Attorney General Robert Kennedy were also seen, bowed with grief but restraining their emotions.

President Johnson Arrives

After this, the newly sworn-in President Lyndon Johnson descended from the aircraft, sadly greeted the assembled officials and spoke his words of sorrow via radio and TV to the entire nation.

Dallas, Tex. Nov. 22 (AP)—Until the time he was assassinated, President Kennedy had felt the warming glow of a true Texas-style welcome. Hagerty Bares 2 Attempts on Ike

Two attempts on the life of President Eisenhower, uncovered by the U.S. Secret Service, were revealed by James C. Hagerty on the ABC network last night. Hagerty, White House press secretary during the Eisenhower Administration and now an ABC executive, said both attempts were traced to the Nationalist Party of Puerto Rico. This is the group that attempted to assassinate President Truman at Blair House in 1950. Hagerty said the attempts, made in 1958 and 1959, were thwarted by security precautions.

'Rent-Busting' Law Is Signed

A new local law designed to take the "profits out of slums" and to strengthen the city's hand in the continuing fight against slumlords was signed yesterday by Mayor Wagner. The law is effective immediately.

The legislation, described as the "rent-busting law" and the "harassing law," cracks down on landlords who succeed in vacating their buildings by harassing their tenants or who permit their buildings to deteriorate to a point where it is ordered vacated by a city department.

The law provides that landlords whose buildings have been emptied because of vacate orders will be barred from any 15% rent increases after the building is reoccupied until all of the city's expenses have been reimbursed, such as the relocating of tenants and the boarding up of the buildings.

The State Office of Transportation, after a protracted "journey-to-work" survey of Long Island, submitted to Gov. Rockefeller yesterday a report calling for beefing up services on the Long Island Rail Road.

The report made three major recommendations: (1) construction of transportation centers, complete with parking lots, at key highway crossings near the LIRR; (2) stepped up modernization of the railroad, and (3) a continued accelerated road-building program on Long Island to give commuters easier access to the railroad.

N. Y. Racing Off Until After Funeral

Yale-Harvard Tops Postponements

By Wes Gaffer

A horrified sports world, reacting to the shock of President Kennedy's assassination, postponed or cancelled events in progress yesterday and scheduled for today.

Governor Rockefeller's office last night announced in Albany the suspension of all racing in New York State until after the President's funeral. Aqueduct had ended its program yesterday following the running of the seventh race, and Roosevelt Raceway cancelled last night's race card an hour later. Both tracks had planned to operate today.

THE AMERICAN Football League announced late in the evening the postponement of its entire weekend schedule. Those four games will be rescheduled within two days, a league spokesman said.

In Montreal, National Hockey League head Clarence Campbell stated that if a period of national mourning is declared in the U.S., the league's Sunday schedule is scheduled to play the Rangers at the Garden. There are no games of any sort played in Canada on Sundays.

Traditional football games, such as the Yale-Harvard affair in New Haven, were postponed. On the

Call Off Grid Contest

Because of the cancellation of many of the games on the contest list, THE NEWS Football Contest, based on games scheduled to be played today, has been voided. The prize money of $1,000 will be added to the season's final contest, which is based on games to be played next Saturday, Nov. 30.

State, had agreed to proceed as scheduled. The decision was made after three hours of telephoning among conference athletic directors and commissioner Bill Reed.

Two other league games were called in addition to the Indiana Purdue clash, the Minnesota-Wisconsin game at Minneapolis is dark.

That Minnesota game, however, will be played Thursday morning at 10 in Memorial Stadium.

Noire Dame will play Iowa at Iowa City, officials of both schools announced.

IN LANSING, MICH., Gov. George Romney's request that the Michigan State-Illinois battle for the Big Ten title and berth in the Rose Bowl be postponed, was rejected by Michigan State's board of trustees. It was voted at the moment that other league members were cancelling or postponing games.

The Purdue-Indiana game, a battle for the Old Oaken Bucket, was postponed by agreement of the heads of both schools. Their statement read: "Unless President Johnson should request this evening that such events be carried on tomorrow throughout the nation, the game will be rescheduled."

IN ADDITION to Aqueduct, Pimlico, Narragansett, Shenandoah Downs and Killite Park suspended their thoroughbred programs. Also, Suffolk Downs and Washington Park cancelled harness racing cards of last night. Narragansett officials announced that track will remain dark until after the funeral. Killite, in New Mexico, will remain closed most of next week, reopening Saturday, Nov. 30.

Golden Gate Fields, near San Francisco, and Waterford Park, in northeastern W. Va., about 40 miles from Pittsburgh, continued to operate after the news of the President's death. Golden Gate officials said they would not open the day of the funeral.

FOUR GAMES scheduled for last night in the National Basketball Assn. were curtailed. The Knicks were to play the Bulls in Baltimore. In addition, Los Angeles officials postponed tonight's game with San Francisco. No new date was set.

Garden officials postponed last night's bout between Allen Thomas and John Persol. It was to have been nationally televised. The fight has been rescheduled for next Saturday.

Yale officials called off today's Ivy League clash between Yale and Harvard. Harvard was the late President's alma mater. A spokesman said there is a possibility, now, that the game may

West Coast, the Big Six, reversing an earlier decision to play, postponed until next Saturday its three games, holding the conference title in abeyance for a week.

INVOLVED WERE California at Stanford, UCLA at Southern California and Washington State at Washington. The Big Six Rose Bowl entrant depends upon the fortunes of contenders Washington, Southern Cal and UCLA.

The official announcement was made while alumni assembled for the games. It read: "That by unanimous action of the presidents and chancellors, all conference football games . . . will be postponed for one week because of the national tragedy."

Thus, the Big Six didn't avail itself of the out provided by the NCAA in Kansas City. That beleaguered group advised its members to go ahead with scheduled games if they wished, provided they held "appropriate opening ceremonies and a halftime tribute."

A University of Michigan spokesman at Ann Arbor said four Big Ten schools, Michigan, Michigan State, Illinois and Ohio

The Columbia Broadcasting System (Channel 2) last night announced that all of its sports telecasts, including regional coverage of college football, have been cancelled today and tonight.

Also, TV coverage of seven regional NFL games tomorrow, including the Cards at Giants, which would normally be seen by the motel audience on Channel 3, Hartford, is off.

Shortly after, the American Broadcasting System cancelled television of its weekend sports, including its Wide World of Sports.

Sports World Loses No. 1 Fan

Boston, Nov. 22 (AP)—Athletics as well as the political world suffered a severe loss in the death of President Kennedy. The one-time scrub football player and ardent fan was considered one of the best friends American sports ever had.

The man who munched a hot dog in the Orange Bowl and opened three AL baseball seasons with the traditional first pitch emphasized participation to the spectator public.

PRESIDENT KENNEDY did not merely stress physical well-being with tough football games on the White House lawn and sailing and swimming off-shore near his Hyannis Port, Mass. summer home.

He also created a Council on Youth Fitness under the supervision of Oklahoma's football coach and athletic director, Bud Wilkinson. The program was encouraged throughout all primary public schools in the country.

When the bitter power struggle between the AAU and NCAA over control of amateur athletics threatened the U.S. Olympic program earlier this year, the vigorous young President stepped in strongly.

HE APPOINTED Gen. Douglas

Army-Navy Doubtful

West Point, Nov. 22 (AP)—A decision whether to play or cancel the Army-Navy football game scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 30, has not yet been reached, an Army spokesman said today.

"It's a matter of coordination between the institutions, the Army, Navy and Defense Departments in Washington, D.C.," the spokesman said.

ALL SPORTS events scheduled for tomorrow at the Academy have been cancelled because of the assassination of President Kennedy, the spokesman added.

"I do not know when the announcement concerning next week's game will be made," he said. "Certainly I don't expect it before next week. We're all still in a state of shock over this terrible tragedy."

MacArthur the final-say arbitrator in the dispute and the five-star general hammered out a truce.

For outstanding service to football President Kennedy received a gold medal award from the National Football Foundation. He had surrounded himself with football men, feeling they were rounded citizens best trained to meet today's problems.

Byron (Whizzer) White, the famed Colorado halfback of the late 1930s, became a Supreme Court justice. There were football men among his advisers, including former Harvard captain Kenneth O'Donnell, and when racial strife broke out in Birmingham, Ala. one of Kennedy's choices as a Federal mediator was Earl (Red) Blaik, former Army and Dartmouth football coach.

HARVARD ANNOUNCED its traditional football game with Yale scheduled at New Haven tomorrow is off because of the national tragedy involving one of the university's illustrious sons.

Although his younger brothers gained more football prominence at Harvard, President Kennedy was an end on the freshman and junior varsity squads and a swimmer. Attorney General Robert Kennedy and Sen. Ted Kennedy were Harvard varsity football players.

A freshman teammate of the then future President recalled he "was a tall, rangy end and he was pretty good though he never made a varsity letter."

PRESIDENT KENNEDY called on his early swimming training during the war when the PT boat he skippered was sliced in two by a Japanese de-

CAPITOL STUFF

By TED LEWIS

Washington, Nov. 22—The great shadow cast by the tragic death of President Kennedy will linger long.

It transforms totally the nature of the political climate with a Presidential election just a year ahead.

It clouds over, at a most difficult time, the government's posture both in foreign and domestic affairs.

It was a tragedy of most sweeping impact, not only in its effect on the shape of things to come but on the aspirations of many men.

The bullet that put Lyndon Johnson in the White House also will affect the destinies of Barry Goldwater, Nelson Rockefeller and, of course, the late President's two brothers, Teddy and Bobby.

By good fortune, Johnson takes command with knowledge of the most important problems Kennedy has had to wrestle with. It was, of course, planned that way, for when Johnson in 1960 agreed to run with Kennedy it was on condition that his talents and his political and diplomatic savvy would be used fully.

The new President now becomes the logical Democratic Presidential nominee in 1964. Yet this is not necessarily so, because he has only eight months to establish a record in office that would obtain for him the party's nomination next August in Atlantic City.

It was different with Harry Truman. F.D.R. died in April, 1945, more than three years before the next Presidential election. Teddy Roosevelt similarly had three years in the White House after the assassination of William McKinley to establish his own record.

It will not be clear for some time in what direction Johnson will move. However, it has been the tendency of all "strong Presidents" who have reached the White House by the death of the incumbent to bring around them men of their own choosing. Truman did just that, weeding out of his inherited F.D.R. cabinet those he felt he could not work with, even if they had been efficient operatives under his predecessor.

The Johnson Image: a Southern Moderate

What Johnson will do along this line is debatable, for a Presidential campaign is already shaping up and he must not alienate powerful figures of the Kennedy machine, particularly, of course, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and those in the powerful party organization itself which has the Kennedy political design imprinted on it.

There is also the problem of the Johnson "image," for he is from Texas. His main strength through the years has been as a more realistic—pragmatic was Kennedy's word for it—than even the late President's.

The whole complexion of the Republican contest for that party's Presidential nomination has also been transformed by the assassin's bullet.

Goldwater appears most affected. The case for him was built on the premise that he alone would provide a clear-cut choice between a conservative Republican and a liberal Democrat named Kennedy.

Moreover, Kennedy was from the East. Goldwater from the West. Goldwater's blueprints for victory were based on his strength in the South, the farm states and the West, areas where Kennedy was weakest and Johnson is certainly much stronger.

GOP Aspirants Not So Hesitant Now

Rockefeller now definitely emerges as a more attractive GOP choice—a liberal Republican from the East, against a moderate Democrat Johnson from the Southwest.

In the transformation, which has now taken place due to a tragedy, the Republican nomination also becomes more worth having. Even a moderately successful President is hard to beat for a second term. A President who faces reelection after less than a year in office is far more vulnerable.

On this basis, it is probable that Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania, Gov. George Romney of Michigan—even Richard Nixon—may start working to fulfill their White House ambitions in 1964, not 1968 as they have preferred.

It is almost certain that a draft-Nixon movement will now develop. The man who lost by a hair to Kennedy in 1960 definitely was vastly improved prospects for a second chance.

Far more important than what will now happen in the field of pure domestic politics is the shift from Kennedy to Johnson in foreign relations.

Kennedy Himself Ran Foreign Policy

Kennedy had been his own secretary of state. He was in the thick of every operation. He not only established policy, he ran it. His relations with Nikita Khrushchev were on a significant personal level. They corresponded privately.

This Khrushchev-Kennedy arrangement is not one that Johnson can take over without a break. He may not even want to, preferring to delegate to his Secretary of State the responsibility for carrying out foreign policy.

A similar change of marked dimensions could also occur in the relations of the White House with Congress. During the Kennedy campaign, as Vice President, was asked for his advice on legislative problems, but the decisions were Kennedy's.

Johnson is far more of a proponent of the legislative front than Kennedy. He came to the Vice Presidency after years as virtual czar of Congress in his powerful command post of Senate Democratic leader. Now he takes command at the White House. What happens to civil liberties, the law, legislation and Medicare is now up to him. The record he makes will determine his chances for re-nomination and election.

Harry Truman Had 3 years to prove himself

Kennedy Assassination Stuns the Whole World

Rome, Nov. 22 (Special)—The world was stunned tonight by the assassination of President Kennedy. In Eastern and Western Europe, radio stations played funeral music after announcing the death. Church bells tolled in many capitals.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev was reported hurrying back to Moscow from a visit to southern Russia. Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko telephoned U.S. Ambassador Foy D. Kohler to express his shock and sympathy. Pope Paul VI immediately retired to his private chapel to pray for the President after receiving the news at the Vatican.

Mass Tomorrow

The Pope said: "We shall say Holy Mass tomorrow for the peace of his soul and for comfort to those who mourn his death, and that love—not hatred—may reign in mankind."

In London Sir Winston Churchill said: "The loss to the United States and to the world is incalculable. Those who come after Mr. Kennedy must strive the more to achieve the ideals of world peace and human happiness and dignity to which his Presidency was dedicated."

Cardinal Grief-Stricken

New York's Cardinal Spellman, who was in Rome for the Ecumenical Council, told THE NEWS: "It is a great loss to our country and to the whole world. . . I am deeply shocked and grief-stricken."

West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard who was to have visited Kennedy Sunday was informed of the President's death while on the way back to Bonn from Paris.

"The news fills the German people with deep grief," he said.

Atrocious and Frightful French Prime Minister Georges Pompidou exclaimed: "It is atrocious. It is frightful. I am overwhelmed."

"It is a grave loss for all mankind," said Italian President Antonio Segni.

Congress Reaction: 'This Black Friday'

By RICHARD MCGOWAN

Washington, Nov. 22 (NEWS Bureau)—Disbelief, shock, tears and finally outrage were Congress' reaction today to the assassination of President Kennedy. Some Legislators pounded their fists against the nearest wall. Others wandered aimlessly, stunned, through the halls of Congress.

"This is terrible," Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield (Mont.) whispered after being told. He stammered, "I—I can't find the words."

"Oh, God, Oh, God! This is the most distressing thing that could ever happen," Senate GOP Leader Everett Dirksen (Ill.) declared.

Inouye's Comment Sen. Daniel K. Inouye (D-Hawaii), recalling the assassination of Lincoln a little less than 100 years ago, raged: "This black Friday will be long remembered by the people of our nation."

"This is a tragic event," House Speaker John McCormack (Mass.), a lifelong friend of the President, said in disbelief, tears streaming down his lined face. "I feel very inadequate in expressing my thoughts," he said. "The nation has sustained a staggering loss, the significance of which is stupendous."

"Our country and the entire world will never forget President Kennedy. His leadership was superb in meeting the challenges of world."

He wandered away, still crying. Cites Personal Friendship Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), who had been a possible Kennedy opponent in the 1964 Presidential race, called the assassination "shocking and dreadful."

"The President's death is a profound loss to the nation as a whole," Goldwater said in a statement. "He and I were personal friends. It is also a great loss to me. Mrs. Goldwater and I offer our heartfelt sympathies to Mrs. Kennedy and the President's family."

And Rep. Joe D. Waggoner (D-La.) declared: "I don't know what this country is coming to; we're a banana republic."

Toledo News Truce Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 22 (AP)—Toledo Newspaper Guild Local 43 agreed tonight to call a truce in its week-old strike against the Toledo Blade Co. so this metropolitan area of a half million would not be without local newspapers in this critical period.

stroyer in the South Pacific. He managed to tow a crewman from the wreck to shore, a distance of three miles, in five hours. Later, he spent a week swimming from island to island seeking aid.

Kennedy attended the last three Army-Navy games, the first as President-elect. In one he departed from planned procedure by walking to the rear sideline for the tons of the coin by the team captain rather than have them come to the Presidential box.

Two years ago the man of vigor shed his coat and sat in shirtsleeves at the Army-Navy game when the temperature in Philadelphia soared to 90.

PRESIDENT KENNEDY loved to mingle in crowds with a minimum of fanfare. His last football game was Oct. 19 on the campus of his alma mater when he entered Harvard Stadium virtually unannounced two plays after the kickoff of the Columbia game. Fans got their first notion of his presence when the Harvard band suddenly struck up "Hail to the Chief."

London, Nov. 22 (AP)—The English Football League ordered all players to wear black mourning arm bands during Saturday's games in honor of the late President Kennedy. Flags at all stadiums will fly at half staff and a minute of silence will be observed before the matches start.

hard to believe as was the shocking news of his death.

Only this crisis in Viet Nam kept President Kennedy from attending the Army-Air Force game in Chicago four weeks ago.

FOR THOSE WHO were privileged to cover Army-Navy and Orange Bowl games, the President was such a familiar sight that he became almost a personal friend.

The memories include his applause for Navy against Missouri, his greeting to a blushing cheerleader from Oklahoma, a surprise post-game stroll through the Oklahoma players' dressing room and informal halftime walks between lines of grid cadets and Midshipmen in Philadelphia.

YOUNG IDEAS

By DICK YOUNG

On the wall of Ford Frick's office, there hangs a large photo mural of a young man in shirt sleeves half standing and twisting, as though trying to avoid a foul pop that has flown overhead, or perhaps to catch it if it rebounds in the stands.

He is squinting in the sun, and there is a large smile on his handsome face. In one hand he holds his sun glasses; in the other, the remnants of a hot dog. Before him, atop the concrete dugout, stands a bottle of coke.

It is a picture of a young man enjoying a ballgame — a special young man, John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

JFK Attended Games Whenever Possible

The picture was taken the day the President of the United States attended the 1962 All-Star Game in Washington. It was not always possible for him to attend ballgames as he pleased, as other work is able, but he went to the big one in Washington whenever his schedule permitted; to the All-Star Game, and to the Nat 'turers.

He was a true fan, not a politician attending a ballgame because it might look good, and perhaps get him a few votes. He enjoyed the game as had Herbert Hoover before him, and when John F. Kennedy entered the park in Washington, he would be guided through the private runway which the umpires used on to the field, and he would stop and talk baseball with them. The umpires so

A True Fan

This is the picture that hangs on wall of Commissioner Ford Frick's office — showing President Kennedy watching a foul pop during All-Star Game in Washington in 1962.

The commissioner is also in picture of lower left. President attended big games when schedule permitted.

They were highly impressed and said later, "He doesn't just talk baseball the way a lot of big shots do. He knows what he is talking about."

The day of the '62 All-Star Game the State Department had a request to make. Frank Slocum, aid to Commissioner Frick, was asked to bring Luis Aparicio, to the President's eye so that a picture might be taken; to be circulated in Aparicio's native Venezuela to foster friendship between the nations.

President Asked to Talk With Musial

After the photo had been taken, the President had a request of his own to make. He wanted to talk to Stan Musial.

The man was brought to the box and they chatted for a moment. Then Musial said: "Well, Mr. President, they said I was too old for the job, and that you were too young, but we both seem to be doing okay."

The President laughed.

It was several innings later that another man, whom some had said was too old for his job, paid a visit to the President. Casey Stengel, coaching on the first base line that day, was jogging to his dugout from the dugout when he received a summoning wave from JFK. The old man filled in the President on the Mets, then said: "I'm sorry I can't stay and talk to you. I got to get to work" — and he jogged off to the coaching box.

Kennedy's Guests That Day Were Two Boys

In the Presidential box that day sat Commissioner Ford Frick, the President's administrative assistant, Dave Powers, and Vice President Lyndon Johnson. Two front row seats were occupied by a couple of boys, perhaps 10, 11 years old. They were members of Washington boys' club, and had been invited as guests of the President that day. One boy was white, the other colored.

It was John Fitzgerald Kennedy's dream that all boys should play together, and all men should work together. He died before that dream could be realized. Perhaps he died because of that dream.

Negroes? Bowl Ducks Issue

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 22 (AP)—A Negroes are not invited to play. Senior Bowl spokesman declined to comment today on whether Negroes will be invited to play in the annual football all-star game in January.

"The game will be played as scheduled Jan. 4, and, as far as I know, it will be televised as planned," the spokesman said. He declined to elaborate.

THE NATIONAL Broadcasting Co. had said earlier this week it "could make a decision soon as to whether or not to televise the game with only one conference

Miss Claremore, apprentice jockey Paul Maxwell up, led all the way in the six-furlong second at Aqueduct yesterday but just did manage to get her nose under the wire in time to beat off closing surge by Polarey's Joy, ridden by Bob McCurdy. The 3-year-old gray filly returned a juicy $10.20.

Dr. Hank K, Get Around Share 'Cap

Shortly after Dr. Hank K. had won the first division of the $10,000 Epinard Handicap at Aqueduct yesterday, the staggering report that President Kennedy had been shot was announced to the crowd of 24,820. A few minutes later, the tragic news of his death was revealed to the stunned crowd and the infield flag was lowered to half mast.

After Get Around's triumph in the second half of the Epinard was made official, a decision was reached by NYRA brass to cancel the final two races on the card. The horses were already on the track for the eighth race but they were immediately returned to their barns.

DR. HANK K. gave his backers in the crowd that sent him off the second choice a worried time in the stretch. The winner, ridden by Manny Yezza, was involved in a slight bumping accident with Merry E. when the 17-10 favorite hit him and knocked him off stride. Merry also went off stride.

Merry moved out to a very slight lead after that but swerved sharply by again losing ground. However, Baeza sensed this and straightened his mount before there was any further contact. Dr. Hank K. then came back gamely and managed to get his head up to the wire to make it by a nose. It was worth $5.80.

Get Around was outpaced in the early stages of the second half of the mile test but Braulio Baeza drove between horses as the others closed in. Under Baeza's strong handling the winner outlasted Rocky Link by a neck. The payoff on Elizabeth N. Graham's 3-year-old son of Citation was $3.60.

Futurity's 14

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (Special) —The field for the $176,250 Pimlico Futurity at a mile and a sixteenth today was increased to 14 with the overnight addition of Orientalist and Dry Sails. Breakspear is the early 2-1 favorite and will be ridden by Bobby Ussery. Breakspear finished first in the Futurity Trial last Monday but was disqualified for interference and placed fourth.

Hoppers, who will be ridden by Wayne Chambers, is the 5-2 second choice after winning the Futurity at Aqueduct. Traffic, with Manny Yezza up, is 4-1. He won the Hopful at Saratoga. Other probable starters include Sheldrake, Ramant, Sub Commander, Quadrangle, Roman Column, Nene-nene-sha, Blancheite, Phantom Shot and Murad, along with Dry Sails and Orientalist. All will carry 122 pounds.

made his bid around the turn. As the field straightened out, he was a half length back of Rocky Link and midway down to the wire

Wolfpack Runs Wild Over Deacons, 42-0

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 22 (UPI)—North Carolina State turned loose a blitzkrieg of fast-stepping backs who zipped through Wake Forest defenses with devastating ease tonight, licking the Deacons, 42-0, and moving one step closer to the Atlantic Coast conference title.

The Deacons, who broke their 18-game losing streak last Saturday with a 20-19 upset over South Carolina, were slaughtered mercilessly by the hard charging Wolfpack, which grabbed its sixth conference win against one loss.

Not only did State hall carriers whip through and around the Deacons, stepping off a series of long dashes in the first half, but the State defense blunted the Deacon offense, never letting the pressure off quarterback Karl Sweetan.

STATE WENT FOR a touchdown the first time it got the ball and before the Deacs knew what hit them, the first half score was 35-0.

State quarterback Jim Rossi, having one of his better days, ran 15 yards for one touchdown and sprinted 27 yards for another. He threw a 27-yard pass to end Ray Barlow for still another.

Second string halfback Mike Clark bucked two yards for the first score and the second came on another two-yard plunge by halfback Tony Scarpati. Another came on a 77-yard pass play from quarterback Ron Skosnick to halfback Shelby Marshall.

Crimson Gridders Sked 9 for '64

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 22 (UPI)—Harvard University today announced a nine-game 1964 football schedule, seven of them at home.

The only newcomer will be Bucknell which replaces Rutgers. The only non-Ivy League game will be the opener against Massachusetts.

The schedule: Sept. 28 Massachusetts (I); Oct. 17 Cornell; Oct. 24 Dartmouth; Oct. 31 Harvard; Nov. 7 Princeton; Nov. 14 Brown; Nov. 21 Yale.
