Dear Steve,

Glad you got and read NEVER AGAIN! To date not a single complaint from anyone I mention in it.

I've not read and do not intend to get Treachery in Dallas. I've been told its thrust and for all the Dallas police did that was wrong there is no reason to believe they were assassins or even involved in it. The ~~Way~~ NEVER AGAIN! begins is correct, I'm sorry to say.

^{Which} reminds me, if you know any, like students, who are interested in JFK assassination documents, those the publisher did not want to use for that beginning, I've a set of ^{them} at my desk and can without much trouble make copies. As you may remember neither did I can use the stairs to where most of my records are. I've also in my office the documents I used in the Afterword. I had NEVER again finished in 1992. It was sat on until this year. Or if you would like ^{it} as souvenirs or for children or grandchildren, let me know.

I know of Mark Oakes and believe he means well. I believe he also sees what is not there to be seen.

Dallas is doing even better than you were able to see to preserve what it can for history. Next year if you or any of the players want to be taken around (I speak out of turn but with confidence) get in touch with Gary Hack at the Sixth Floor museum. He is research director or something like that and more than most he avoids the theories and the frauds. He is doing a fine job of collecting film and things like that. They also have the FBI plaza ^{on} ~~on~~ loan. I do not know for how long. But I'm sure Gary will find the time for you or any of the players if you say I suggested getting in touch with him. We are old friends and I help him/them all I can.

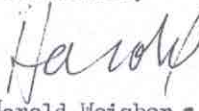

We watched your team with envy! We did expect you to make it, too.

We are about as well as we can be having accumulated 165 years between us. We've graduated from his-and-her canes to walkers but I'm resisting mine.

Hope we can get together next year. I'd like to show you the volume of the record I'm still making for history.

Glad to hear from you!

Best wishes,

Harold Weisberg

Dear Mr. Weisberg:

I hope this letter finds you and your wife well. I am sorry I did not have a chance to visit you this baseball season. On both occasions that the Boston Red Sox were in Baltimore I was very busy. We had three days of meetings during our September visit. As you know, we had a successful season, only to be beaten by the Cleveland Indians in the playoffs.

I bought and read Never Again. Good job. It is great to see someone like you keep at it! I have also recently read Treachery in Dallas, which seems to me to be a good work. Have you had a chance to see it?

While the team was in Texas playing the Rangers, several of the players and I went to Dealey Plaza. It was, of course, an interesting field trip for us baseball people. The Dallas community has done a good job preserving the historic site. We ran across a young man named Mark Oakes, who was peddling several videotapes of interviews with eyewitnesses and others involved in the events of November 22, 1963. He spoke highly of you. I wondered whether or not you are familiar with his work. Are you?

In any case, the purpose of this letter is simply to say hello, and to tell you I haven't forgotten you. Thanks for letting me know about Never Again. Again, I hope you are well, and perhaps we can get together again sometime soon.

Respectfully,

Steven W. August
